Chucky,
I have some friends that are in the legal profession who have read this.
After they stopped laughing, they informed me that this letter constitutes a threat and will be kept. Chucky, you're not very bright, but we already knew that. At this point, I kind of wish you would try something as I would certainly enjoy having you put away. These people owe me a favor and would not hesitate to mount a legal attack against you if so instructed...
I'd cease and desist if I were you, or you may find yourself in a very uncomfortable position with your business dissolved or maybe worse...

Legal attacks...that's amusing. You people who have never lived on the streets amuse me. Don't you watch the news? Why do you think you can tease an animal until it's frothing at the mouth and has you in a corner, and all you have to do is mention "lawyer" and it'll go away.

You are about to touch upon a world you have only read about...

Good Luck,

Doug

Naw, Doug, Chucky is a little 25 year old boy,whom, although he says he is employed, seems to have to live with mommy and daddy while he threatens others. He has emailed me a very descritptive threat, which I wonder If I should show to the local authorities...but I'm willing to teach this child a lesson he obviously hasn't learned yet....
What da ya say CHUCKY?..which bar is it you "bust heads for a living" at?....geez...I might even give ya a legal reason to hit me.......once......

1) Try coiling up the excess speaker wire near the AM/FM radio and taping it together with tape. This will change the inductance of the wire leads and may choke off some of the RF coming down the speaker wire. If that does not work you may need purchase some ferrite beads or loops (Radio Shack carries them) and then wrap the speaker wire around it to get a higher value of inductance.

2) Also try coiling up the AM/FM coax as it enters the AM/FM radio. This will create an RF choke that will cut off "common mode" RF signals running up and down the outside shield of the coax. It will not affect the AM/FM radio signals you want coming down the inside of the coax.

3) Coil up the DC power leads coming in to the AM/FM radio at the radio. You may need a ferrite loop from Radio Shack to make this work as well.

4) Install a high pass filter in line with the AM/FM coax going to the AM/FM radio (available at Radio Shack).

5) Install a low pass filter in line with the CB coax.

6) Close to where your CB coax hooks to the CB antenna, coil up the coax in a loop to stop RF from running back down the outside of the coax and back to the radio. For 27 MHz (The CB Band) and RG-58 cable wind just over 4 feet of cable in to 8 turns and tape it together. For RG-8 use just over 6 feet of cable wound in to 8 turns and tape it together.

7) Some DC noise filters may have RF noise supression built in.

Hope that helps,

Night Ranger

P.S. The information I gave you came out of ARRL's Radio Interference Handbook, and the ARRL antenna handbook.

DEAR TIDE:

I'm writing to say what an excellent product you have! I've used it since the beginning of my married life, when my Mom told me it was the best.

Now that I am older and going through menopause, I find it even better! In fact, about a month ago, I spilled some red wine on my new white blouse.

My unfeeling and uncaring husband started to berate me about how clumsy I was and generally started becoming a pain in the neck.

One thing led to another and I ended up with a lot of his blood on my white blouse. I tried to get the stain out using a bargain detergent, but it just wouldn't come out.

After a quick trip to the supermarket, I stopped and got a bottle of liquid Tide with bleach alternative, and to my surprise and satisfaction, all of the stains came out! In fact, the stains came out so well, that some detectives who came by yesterday told me that the DNA tests were negative and my attorney said that I would no longer be considered a suspect!

I thank you, once again, for having such a great product. Well, gotta go. I have to write a letter to the Hefty bag people...

Signed, A relieved menopausal wife.

2712. New CBer, asking about Galaxy CB radios

From: nunjadam bizniss <nospam@isp.com>
Message-ID: <Sjxrb.12245$hS3.2000@news02.roc.ny>
Source record: 169246

I used to use off the shelf CB radios from the 70s to early 90s but have been away from it since about '94 because of the short range and limited receiving range. After using cell phones I realize that CB has advantages that cell phones don't. To use a cellphone to communicate you have to know the specific person's number; whereas on CB 19 you can hail an opposite bound trucker or other vehicle. I've always been impressed by those Galaxy radios used by truckers out on the Interstate highways that can talk for many miles away from one another, so last week I've started contemplating on getting myself one of those strong radios, too, for when my wife and I go on Thanksgiving and Christmas vacation pretty soon now. I think the roger beep is a neat function but I'd probably not use the echo.

From what I've found through research, the "export" Galaxy radios that put out a lot more than 4 watts on the 10 meter band can be modified to operate on CB channels 1-40. I looked on the pinklightning website and saw that they offer a mod. service on their export Galaxy radios, but they don't make it clear whether the radio would actually be on CB band once the mods are made. Does anyone here know? I'm looking hard at the Galaxy model 88.

I think 4 watts in a regular CB is too wimpy for long distance comm. on Interstates going at +65 mph. I've used twin phased 102" steel whip antennas before with 1:2 SWR on my Chevy dually and still didn't have good distance. I'm retired from Army and Social Security, and my wife and I mostly wile away our time by traveling a lot from Florida to Kentucky to Chicago to Texas to visit our kids and grandchildren, and I think a really powerful CB is a great asset when out on the road. One time in the vicinity of Bowling Green Kentucky I spotted a roadside altercation involving 2 vehicles and it looked like one of the young men was pulling a gun but I was unable to raise Bowling Green PD on channel 9 due to the sorry 4-watt output of my cobra 4-watt cb, but I feel that had if I had had a Galaxy capable of 20 watts or better I would have been able to get through to the authorities on channel 9 and maybe kept someone from being injured or worse. Another time about 5 miles outside of San Antonio I was unable to reach the PD or troopers to let them know about an 18-wheeler on fire pulling over on the shoulder of the interstate. If I'd had more than 4 watts output I might have done some good by being able to reach the local PD. If more than 4 watts is illegal then it's just illegal, and I don't argue with the law about it but still I'm willing to accept the consequences for using a powerful radio it it it comes to that. If it saves one person's life or mine then it's worth it paying the fine.

I use a CB just to monitor channel 19 while on the road, but I talk to an occasional oppisite-bound trucker but the signal fades out before wer'e finished. It would sure be nice to be able to talk with him for more than 30 seconds before my 4-watt radio signal gives out. I like letting them know what's ahead of them as well as them letting me know what's ahead of me. One time I lost signal while an opposite bound truck was telling me of a good exit on I-65 that had good food and a good motel-he sounded like he had a good Galaxy and I just had my 4-watt Cobra so I couldn't answer or ask him anything and the conversation lasted only about 20 seconds before I couldn't get out anymore. I could hear him but he couldn't hear me. I think CB is a nice and useful thing for travelers. Good especially in Interstate traffic jams.

I'm just looking for advice from some other people here about what to look for if I want to buy an import Galaxy radio, and what to watch for when having it modified for CB channels 1-40. I just want a strong radio that'll put out more than 4 watts and where to get it and what to ask for. Any help is appreciated.

What I'm looking for is: A Galaxy or other simialar high watt radio that can be modified to work on CB channels 1-40 (2) modification of said Galaxy radio and "what to ask for" on sites like pinklightning to make it trasmit/receive on the 40 CB channels ("peak" "tune", ect.) (3) I'm willing to accept personal responsibility if I get caught with such a radio. I just think more than 4 watts is a necessary evil to ensure reliable comm. when out on the road in the midle of nowhere.

Most "authorities" have long since given up monitoring channel 9. If you truly want fast response and reliability in an emergency (and not just an excuse for illegal cb power) dial 911 on your cell phone.

Cell phone. No fine, perfectly legal, more reliable.

Co-phasing gives you a nice fore-and-aft radiation pattern, but only if the antennas are far enough apart. 9' or 1/2 wave. Less or more than that, and the pattern becomes a mess.

I frequently see "co-phased" setups where not only are the antennas WAY too close together, they aren't even mounted with proper grounding.. Might as well use a ball of bailing wire.

I'm looking for advice about setting up a antenna on top of a two story house. I gather there are two common types of omni-directional antennas, ground plane and vertical.

I'm leaning toward a 5/8 wave vertical, but I can't seem to find an unbiased source of information on the web that discusses the differences.

Sloppy terminology. They are both "vertical" antennas, in that thery are both vertically polarized.
The 5/8 will have a lower angle of radiation, and may give you greater range.
The ground plane is a 1/4 wave vertical.

Any FRS or FRS/GMRS combo with a small built-in antenna will get the same range, About a mile on the ground. This distance increases if you are on a big hill or on top of a tall building. UHF is line of sight. (Think flashlight).

I do mean _ANY_. Don't believe that 7 mile BS on the package.

> Thanks, Ron (ront2@socal.rr.com)
> Anything better around same price??

No. CB is noisy and full of foul language (on standard AM, sideband ops are much better).
MURS equipment is hard to come by, but is 2 watt FM with external antennas.

Don't let Stew (Horseshoe7) fill you full of BS. FRS does what it's supposed to do:
A short range communication device. For some it's all they need...

A bid of $1.75, probably made by a ham.

I think the correct statement is: "Some people will buy or believe anything." Why limit it to CBers?

You have some evidence that a CBer actually placed the low-ball bid, George?

For $19.99, go and buy them and try them out. You can always use them when your wife is out mowing the lawn and you want another cold beer.

How people ccan sit and act like NG cops, and try to tell me how to run MY business and yet, they ain't got the Nuts (pronunced KAHOONIES) to post using they're real e-mail address and name...

Kinda reminds me of the one's that like to get on the radio, and say stuff about people... but they whisper, because they don't want you to know who they are...

or better yet, the ones who have mic muscle, and when you pull up in they're drive way and wanna play alley ball, (and old inner-city term for street fighting...) they run and hide and don't come to the door or they call the cops...

here in the Motor City we call 'em WUSSIES!

Chuckie:
Go lay down by your dish. The more that you talk about people, the more you get unfavorable responses. You get your nose all out of joint, and tell others that your techs do better work than other techs and you are just a wanna-be anyways. All you are really doing is running prespective customers
away.
Will you just stop all your crap. You sound like you want all the abuse
that you bring upon yourself. If that is so, go take some Prozac.
You try to talk a good line, but you make yourself sound like some spoiled little brat.
There is enough trash on the CB here in the Detroit area, and now you are turning a perfectly good news group into the same thing.

Cracks me up how someone can so thoroughly shoot themselves in the foot as you have.

Go to bed. Don't read this NG for a few days. When you do, select all, and mark all as read. It'll make the transition between your present
state (whatever it is) and a more reasonable state easier.

Learn English. And Spanish, since you try to use it.

BTW, I couldn't care how less you run your business.
All I know is that I want no part of it.

Not acting like a NG cop. I could care less how your posts violate this NG's charter. But, you piss me off, I'll respond, period. You please me, I will respond.

Chuck, give me your SSB number, so when I hear you, I'll know not to work you.

Keith to hook you up with N8? Have you no shame, you mewling sissy pink muffin?
You are acting like a lovestruck 12 year old girl scout.

I bought a Galaxy DX77HML from http://www.cbshop.webtrix.net/ and love this radio. It came converted and tuned and puts out about 35 to 40 watts whenever I have a good swr. I slip seat every night, so the swr varies. I also use a single 48" Francis fiberglass antenae.

More amps sold today and guess what in the real world not your sick homosexual fantasy world. You see in the real world Anti Girls do not exist but since they already know this and are so hurt by not being noticed in the real world, they spend almost all of their waking hours on this thing called the newsgroups typing away their little cum soaked sweaty hands and fantasizing about homosexual acts and wanting attention and needing attention and so so lonely. Meanwhil in the real world guess what???
THE BEAT GOES ON!!!
Hey anti girl or girls...
Dont do any more google searches dont do any more ranting and raving dont do any more homo talk...
Just step out into the sunshine and see THE REAL WORLD!
You might like what you see but, if you dont you can always go back to that smelly room that is dark and dingy and wack off most of the day to your gay love dreams, another part of the day dreaming that you are doing anything positive at all for your so-called cause on this little newsgroup and last but not least watching those gay porn sites and videos in the privacy of your mother's basement where you EAT, SLEEP and DREAM!

I purchased mine back in Jan. 03 and conversion and tuneup were included. Check with vendor to insure that this is still included with the purchase.

Also, get decent quality coax. Its definitely worth the extra money.

I thought the CB band was crowded..? Or is my radio not working?? (I did call for a radio check this weekend and at least one person heard me...Also, I had it on AM). Looking for a switch for the FT101E Yaesu. The ALC/IC/?? switch - 3 position. I've not seen this one as it is removed from the set. IF it is a common switch - especially one which is matching, let me know.. if not, if anyone has a good one laying around, please let me know. I am in need of one. I have no other information on the set to go by so my info on the matter is limited.
I'll check in group for reply.

Thanks!

This is a trick question!
Can we assume that the UHaul will be traveling from KC, going west to CA? If so, at what speed? Will the Focus be traveling also? If so, in what direction and at what speed? The $19.99 is a number that really has no significance. To answer your question as stated, yes, they will work (assuming they have batteries). Will they contact each other? Well, that is a very long distance, and from what I understand, antenna height is all important. I think the question that needs to asked is how far apart they will be when they are first able to make contact? There are too many variables involved to answer that one. Why couldn't you just ask where the two will meet? Damn, I hate word problems!

2817. Tektronix SUCKS!!!!!

Tektronix is trying to manipulate the oscilloscope market. Today I learned from my local dealership that they are required by contract to destroy every scope which is traded in for a new Tektronix scope, regardless of age or condition. So if you decide to trade in that old scope for a Tektronix, know ahead of time that it is NOT going to end up in the hands of a ham, or of some kid learning and experimenting in electronics on a tight budget like I was thir... er, twenty years ago. No, Tektronix needs to raise their profits by destroying every used scope they can get their greedy little hands on, regardless of who feels the pinch!

Interesting, last I heard (and that was only a few weeks ago) the Tek Country Store was still in business, selling their used trade-ins, among other things. Could your dealer be blowing smoke up your behind?

The scope I'm using now was purchased as a used demo unit, at a significant discount.

It's an Antron 99, not Amtrom. If you were lucky you might get $20 US for it, so you wouldn't get much of a CB rig in trade.

Frank - this is how big business works. They're not in business to do favors for you, they're in business to make money. Period.

Teletype Corp. used to do the same thing with used Teletype machines.
Motorola used to do the same with traded-in 2-way radios (I had a friend who drove the truck to the crusher.)

That's the way it works, Frank....

Question: What is Chuck's 2 Way Radio Answer: Chuck's 2 Way Radio is a SMALL Side business ran by Charles Adkins, N8QXP, a 25 year old, Ham Radio Operator, and Computer Nut. (Not mention Internet freak!)

Qnestion: Well, What do you carry?
Answer: Well, Where do I start? CB's, and Acc's, Antenna's, Car Stereo's and Acc's, Radar Detector's, and a lot of other things too numerous to list here.

Question: How do I get ahold of you?

Answer: The fastest way to reach me is via E-Mail, My E-mail Address is MailTo:Chuck@Chucks2way.com My Web site address is Http://www.chucks2way.com or if you don't wanna send me e-mail, you call me at 1-313-389-7189 and leave a voicemail message 24 hours a day 7 days a week, 365 days a year. and sometimes you might just catch me in the office!

Question: Do you take Master Card, Visa, Or other types of Credit Cards?
Answer: I'd love to, But the cost of getting into Credit Cards is quite expensive, from what I'm told, it costs $500.00 for the software! and $100.00 or more a month just for the service! and PLUS I'd have to mark up all my products 7% just to cover the transaction fee! No Thanks, I'll stick to checks and money orders!
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Question: Do you ship COD ?
ANSWER: No, I cannot ship COD for the cost of doing that is too great. and I don't feel like losing my pants either! ;-)

Question: Well, What are you're Terms?
ANSWER: Cash, Baby, Cash! No, Seriously. I accept Checks, and/or Money Orders.

QUESTION: If I order something, How long does it take to get it and How do you ship?
ANSWER: First off, It usually takes about a week and a half to get something from me, reasons why? Well, First I have to recieve the check or money order for the order, then if the check is from a out of state bank, it usually takes 5 Business days for the Money order or Check to Clear the Bank, Then I have to order the product from my sources, The the product has to arrive here, Then I visually inspect the product for Any and all damages,
then, I Bench test the product to be sure it isn't going to blow up, then I Pack the product back up and Ship it to you via UPS Ground... I never charge
the costomer Shipping, I pay it myself... and that usally takes about 3 days
to arrive. I do this with ALL orders that come through here.

QUESTION: Do you accept orders from resellers or Dealers?
Answer: Whatever you do with this product after you get it from me is your business! I don't care, Although, I will make it clear, I charge the SAME
prices to dealers, as I do end users.

QUESTION: Do you sell those 25-29 Mhz Amps? (or CB radio Amps) ANSWER: Yes! But! There is no warranty on this kind of equipment at all. and there are no returns on this sort of equipment at all. ALL SALES FINAL!

Boy, I'll tell ya one thing, ever sense the Owner and Founder of AES Passed on and left it in the hands of other, They're manners and willingness to help someone out. is to say the least terrible!

Here's the story.....

I am getting a Kenwood TS-950SDX with like 3 months use on it, It is 3 years old, it belonged to a personal and close freind of mine, who became a silent key, (Mark, N8OPK) (he become a silent key in November of 1997.) I am dealing with his 72 year old aunt, Who knows nothing about amateur radio or it's products, and knows little or nothing about shipping radios or the costs involved.

I call good ol' AES in cleveland, Ohio, and speak with a salesman, (I know his name, but I don't wanna get him fired, so We'll refrain from saying who he was...) All I wanted to know was, what the side of the radio was, the dementions (SP?)of the radio because I need to know, ballpark price on shipping the radio from Fl to Michigan, but he's TOO BUSY, I quote, "I'm too busy to bother with such stuff....." I mean, What the hell happened to businesses that were willing to help the potentional customers! for all he knew, I might have wanted to down the road somewhere, Buy an antenna or the matching external speaker for the radio! But I'll be darned if I'll EVER buy ANYTHING from them again. I mean, if AES Spent more time, Helping people, instead of making a god-damned sales pitch, they'd be doing something! I mean, the very MINUTE he asked me, "Oh, so you're NOT wanting to buy?" (quoted 100% too!) his whole personality and willingness to help someone out changed, is this where Amateur Radio is headed??? God I hope not. I bet if the "King of Traders" was still alive, He'd be firing some employees for that little stunt.

and to top it ALL off.... He had to NERVE to INSULT me, by saying..... My deal I'm getting on the radio was bad, by saying "yeah, $1500.00 is a good deal, if it works." What a JERK! I mean, and I suppose his $2500.00 Used Radio was a better deal that just came out of the service dept??? Yeah, right. From now on, I'm dealing of R & L Electronics and that's it, at least thier people are nice enough to answer question and not act like they're so damned "Holier than thou" and not even wanna help!

Ah, the heck with it, the sales Guy's name was AL. If he gets fired, too bad, maybe next time he'll be a bit nicer to people!

Do you have hard evidence of this, such as an official statement from someone at Tektronix in authority to make such statements?

I think your local dealership is pulling your leg. I visited the Tektronix company surplus store less than four months ago, and found a generous assortment of older 7000 and 11000 series mainframes and plug-ins, many of which were in perfectly usable condition.

Don't even get me started on the seemingly vast quantity of Tek scopes and other such goodies that seem to be in constant availability on the surplus side of things (hamfests, stores like Kaiser Technologies in the Bay Area, etc.)

If this really is true, its a shame. I've been using and repairing old Tek scopes for about 30 years (!), and love to see kids, hobbyist, and hams get their hands on them.

Realistically, 'scopes Tek gets in on trade will be a very small percentage of the number out there, so it should have little effect.

Yes, this is how business works, but that doesn't mean it works well, as many companies rely on their longstanding reputations as 'good guys'. The info I received came from the GM of Radar, Inc. in Spokane. Whether the policy was initiated by Radar or by Tektronix, or applies to any other brand, he didn't say. What he -did- say was that he has had to send several dozen scopes the the incinerator since this policy began not long ago -- and some nice ones, too.

Either way, it still sucks.

Has to have been Radar's policy (and a stupid one it is, too). I don't see Tek doing it because Where do you think they get so much of their inventory for the company surplus store?

A. I wasn't ignorant.
b. your own claims as to operating freeband are well known
c. you have been heard ON THE AIR on thos frequencies recently (or so you have claimed)
d. usenet posts mean damned little (as anyone can claim that such posts can be forged). However, I can give you 1 UNADULTERATED FACT: I haven't been on "11 meters" or anywhere else in HF (save for "Field Day exercises") since 1995, period. can you report the same?

as for declaring usenet off limits as far as data is concerned: 99% of whats published in here as far as claims go are bullshit. and you already know that forgeries are entirely possible (however, ones writing style is very difficult to forge). again, however, most of what you have to say is irrelivant. show me the money or show yourself out the door.

Excuse me? try this on for size: FCC et all V. Timothy Harold Hoffman "The Phoenix Interference case". I have PRINTED COPIES of the fcc paperwprk on that in my files here. btw, how do we know the post that prompted me to respond, was in fact, a forgery? huh? prove it! your writing style is a figerprint unique unto itself (as is mine). Most folks tend to write the same way they talk (its in our natures and is very difficult to overcome).

It was? I don't think so. yopu posted on here for all to see (and then later tried to claim it was forged, but you had already opened your "mouth" in several other places. This is the type of game folks like you like to play. You press buttons and you see who jumps.

for example).

heh. Ignorant? nope. mad as hell, perhaps. definitely disappointed with the likes of you. I see you trotted out the old book d' psychologyand proceeded to use some terms for its index. You made claims, and you gave details that could be verified by other sources.

You still haven't answered my questions though..

what rules did I violate within the last 9 years?

A lot of the items at the Country Store are prototypes, special modified units used as test fixtures, etc. that wouldn't have much appeal to end-user customers as much as to experimenters.

If the policy exists, it is stupid. A used Tek scope may present some compitition to a new Tek scope, but it presents much more compitition to the new scopes of the lower price manufacturers.

You have to be a corporate "bean counter" on a rant to come up with schemes like this. You're right, Frank, a $500 used model isn't hardly competition to their latest-greatest $20,000 model. Mr. Bean-Counter would like to think they could eliminate such competition but odds are
Mr. Bean-Counter wouldn't know a o'scope if it bit him in the arse.
If Tek is really doing this nowadays the only purpose it serves is to make them appear as knuckleheads.

One rather large electronic mfr that I used to deal with had an "outlet store" where they sold the trade-ins, factory refurbs, etc. Basically a scratch-and-dent outlet. Prices were only maybe 25% less than the good stuff...the biggest advantage was not having to step thru the corporate ordering nightmare spending days, if not weeks, playing phone tag with some "account representative" who was the only person authorized to take your order.

The outlet store made too much sense so they closed it.

2853. Best Alternative to eBay for banned 10 meter gear

I am not a regular user of eBay, so needless to say, I was quite surprised when my HR2600 was banned. I emailed eBay and they basically said the HR2600 has been deemed by the FCC to be an illegal radio since it's used frequently for out-of-band pirate operation. Since I am a licensed ham, bought the radio legally from another ham, and have always operated it legally, I can't see how they can ban these radios (other than the fact that they can because it's their auction site and I know this trumps fairness).

So my question, is what is the best alternative auction site for those 10 meter ham refugees who have been banished from eBay? I've heard Yahoo's site is pretty good, are there others I should consider? I'm not a dealer, just an ordinary ham wanting to get a fair price for my prized HR2600.

Thanks in advance for your advice and suggestions.

Doug and Mia:

Most CB rigs have such poor audio, and are so overdriven that phone patches aren't all that useful. You get so much crap along with the voice you want to patch, it is difficult to filter enough to make the patch work effectively.

Couple that with the typical interchange on most CB channels, and there is little use to use a phone patch on CB. If you're into public service, you're much better off to just call the person (or public service agency) and relay the information. They'll get it quicker and with more intelligence than if they try to decode it all themselves. As someone that is used to CB, you'd be able to translate all of the garbled, overdriven and interfered with traffic much more effectively than some public service agency call center person would, even with a really good phone patch and parametric filter.

If you "want a fair price", post it For Sale in any of these groups.
The fact that you want to auction it suggests that you want more than a fair price.

QTH.com is good.
Thats Ebay for ya, can't sell legal items but there are literally hundreds of low drive 10m amps listed there, and they are ALL illegal.
Relist it but don't use HR2600 in the title, just put 10m transceiver.
Ebay reminds me of the Bush/Cheney/Ashcroft cartel. They do anything they want, legal or not, and they don't care what anyone thinks of their actions. Bunch of arrogant bastards.
Once I saw an item manufactured in 1999, "autographed" by a person who has been dead since 1990. It was being sold as authentic with a COA. I notified ebay of this obvious scam. They told me to mind my own business.

Rubbish. An auction is the best way to get a fair price because the free market is allowed to deterimine the value. What could be fairer than that?

That is a stupid thing to say. On ebay you could have hundreds

I know about the HR2600 ban and it does not make sense to include it with the Lincoln and the HR2510. Those radios are easily modified but the 2600 requires major surgery in order for it to operate out of band. Common sense doesn't seem to be all that common.

I did not see your auction so I don't know if this applies.
I put up a very nice HR2600 on ebay this year. It had the Chipswitch so it was capable of 10 thru 12 meter operation.
I mentioned in my auction that it would operate on 11 meters and ebay pulled it. I listed it again and only mentioned 10 and 12 meter operation and they left it alone. You could also list it without mentioning the model of the radio. Bidders could email you about specifics.

Big thanks to everybody who took the trouble to answer me back. A CB-conversion in a Galaxy is what I'm about to send off for right now, and I'm going with one of the wrapped fiberglass antennas to go with it. Now if I can find that old antenna meter I had, I ought to be all set. If I remember I'll report about how well the Galaxy does on the road after I get back from this Thanksgiving trip. Thinking about taking out a couple of my old radios to have a way to talk between the house and the workshop out back, maybe use the pa too.

Yes at time I have some equipment kicked off also. I have no Idea what the problem is as most HF rigs today is easily changed to work on 11 meters, with 100 watts of power to boot.

No, Mr. Oyen,,all YOU have done is rant and talk smack about 'tracing people" via their email addy,,,another scumbag hammie. This was YOUR claim, and you were asked to back it in any manner you can,,,you failed,,,you turned tail,and ran, and now you pop up making yet other claims that you can't back.

>I told you, put up or shut up.

Yes, but only after you were told to "put up", first, regarding your claim concerning tracing cbers via their email address for their choice of topic on usenet. I suppose I could reduce myself to your level of crudeness and now tell you to "put up or shut up", but you would much rather evade the topic like it never occurred. Perhaps if you offered the evidence you were first asked, one would be inclined to supply you with anything of which you demand.

Walk the walk, Eric. You continue to ask something of another that you refuse to provide yourself. You made the claim first and were asked to provide your "proof". Until you do so, you shall not ask the same of another.

>show where (with valid links to actual data)

>where I brooke the FCC rules. C'mon now. I >can't wait for this......

Sure you can, in the same manner you have the group waiting for you to "trace" us and explain your hysterical comment concerning such.

You are the one that came out here ignorantly crying about ME, Eric, merely because you are too ignorant to comprehend that webtv can not crosspost and fell for a troll, hook, line, and sinker, and now are haing one devil of a time digesting all that lead in your hypocritical gut. Your claims of illegalities concerning myself was brought to ME, by yourself, which I must apparently remind you. You then self-contradicted yourself and claimed usenet posts mean nothing and do not constitute proof of illegal behavior (I disagree, but that WAS your boneheaded claim). I ask of you the same you ask of me,,,,, show the links in the FCC database, show the links in the FCC database where action concerns me. However, you can not find any mention whatsoever inthe FCC database to indicate that I was the target of any investigation, charges, or other supposition. That shoe really makes your face turn red when you are forced to wear it on the other foot.

>A. I wasn't ignorant.

Yes, you were, and are. Allow me..A) You attempted to attribute a forge to myself, thus illustrating your ignorance where not only webtv is concerned, but your self-professed "adeptness" where headers are concerned. Webtv can not crosspost, as was the forge.
B) Your claim that I had to write the forge because the writing style was "similar", is not only ignorant, but mildly amusing. Your "proof" is in the fact webtv can not crosspost. This is your ignorance. Accept it.

>b. your own claims as to operating freeband

>are well known

Tut-tut, Mr. Oyen, ...you are contradicting your own claims above that usenet posts do not constitute illegal behavior. Make up your mind, Eric,,,do they or don't they? Flip-flopping whenever it suits you appears to be known to many cocnerning the trouble you cause wherever you go.

>c. you have been heard ON THE AIR on thos

On WHAT frequencies, Eric? Try to be a bit more specific.

> recently (or so you have claimed)

But, even if I did, you negate such internet claims with:

>d. usenet posts mean damned little (as >anyone can claim that such posts can be >forged).

Where have I claimed such, if not in usenet? So you heard someone on triple 5 using the ID "Twisted Head". Damn. I better watch my ass. You may trace me and tell the FCC that since someone on usenet claims he freebands, and you heard the words "twisted head" on the radio, I should be busted.....LOL. Perhaps you can assist them in "tracing" me down..LOL...but then again, I don't hide, as I do not share the severe paranoia that some of you can't seem to shake. Come to Tampa Bay, pick a channel or frequency, and, if you like, I will laugh at you in person for as long as you wish.

>FACT: I haven't been on "11 meters" or >anywhere else in HF (save for "Field Day

This pose questions. Holding your own posts as the 1% of usenet posts that you claim is hilarious, especially in light of your inability to answer simple questions posed to you or provide any remote clarification whatsoever concerning your unsolicited claims regarding tracing cbers via their email because of their topic of choice on usenet.
And lastly, what are you doing in a cb room if not to hassle cbers?
In addition, your claims, whatever they may be, are no more valid than my own, or anyone elses on usenet. That you fail to comprehend such matter is beyond my scope of caring.

>as for declaring usenet off limits as far as data >is concerned:

You are changing your words as you go to suit yourself. That is NOT what you said. You said 99% of the posts are bullshit on usenet. Too late to clean up your spilled feces, Eric.

>as far as claims go are bullshit. and you

Not true. Show me a single forge with the webtv authentication tag in the headers,,,just one. And crossposting from webtv is impossible.
To be ignorant is not always a bad thing, as one can usually be educated in some manner. It is highly uncommon when one insists on remaining ignorant, Eric, but far be it from me to attempt to influence your beliefs.

>Again, however, most of what you have to say >is irrelivant. show me the money or show >yourself out the door.

Gee, Oyen, you ran for the door when the same was asked of you. You only recently resurfaced to play up a forge, yet you ignore your claims in the last thread like a bad habit. It is beginning to look like you were full of shit and told a deliberate lie concerning such search and trace activities, Eric. The burden of proof is on you, junior.

>I can name 2 incidents where I was the >VICTIM

You're a victim right now, Eric, you're just too slow to realize such.

>another dig huh? not even a good one. you >really need to get a bigger shovel....

It wasn't a dig, Eric. Believing the impossible, that webtv is capable of crossposting, illustrates how gulible you are and adds joy to the hammie jerking you around. This makes you a victim of the troll, whether you choose to acknowledge such or not,..getting angry at another for your gullibility is juvenile.

>of anothers harrassment and the fcc was >called in. However, I cannot find any mention >whatsoever in the fcc data to indicate that I

Hey, the claims were yours, first, Eric. Just because your lack of intellect was exposed by a fellow no-code that made you respond to a post that everyone except you were able to comprehend was a forge, is no reason to go to pieces with misdirected anger, _ >Excuse me?

I didn't stutter.

>try this on for size: FCC et all V.

And what the hell does that have to do with tea in China? Try to reamin relevant, Eric, and stay focused on why you fail to back your claims, but stomp your foot and demand others back their claims. It's called blatant hypocrisy, Eric, and you reek of it.

>btw, how do we know the post that prompted >me to respond, was in fact, a forgery? huh?

>prove it!

Nothing to prove. The burden of proof is on the claimant, and such is illustrated across the country in courtrooms each day concerning libel and slander cases. If your unsettled psyche will not rest until you have proof, I suggest you contact webtv with the simple question "How can I crosspost to usenet via my webtv?" Perhaps then you will cease embarrassing yourself with such proud and displayed ignorance, but hey, I certainly do not mind if you want to continue to shout to the world how slow you are concerning such topics...you cn cling to your insecure and malicious beliefs all you want,,,it gives those of us in the know somehting to chuckle over.

Your accusation towards myself was made first, Mr. Oyen. I asked you to explain first, your accusation concerning myself and so-called illegalities.

>It was? I don't think so. yopu posted on here

No, I didn't post what you refer.. This is your shared ignorance acting up again and your problem. trying to make it another's problem is making you appear unsetteld and troubled,,,,,almost daft-like.

>for all to see (and then later tried to claim it

Yes,,that is what happes when makes a post,,it is there for ALL to see,,,too bad your skills need honed concerning your commnication skills. You'd think one with a license wold be able to figure out who he/she is communicating with...but not you, Eric,,,hell, you're proud of your ignorance on display,,you insist on sharing,,,,LOL >was forged, but you had already opened your

>"mouth" in several other places.

Which has what to do with you playing up to a forge? LOL. Keep coming, Eric..... you're making such a nice doggie bed for yourself.

>This is the type of game folks like you

Folks like ME? What the hell are you? Some kind of ignorant racist? That figures. You admit no cb use in almost ten years, yet here you are in a cb room,,,,,you ought examine yourself...lemme guess,,you are doing the cbers a service by hanging out "in case" someone has a legitimate question......LOL.

>like to play.

>You press buttons and you see >who jumps.

Yet, it was YOU that took issue with moi! It was you pressing buttons, Eric, not I, even after you were informed of the forge, you digress and reduce yourself to talking about "other" posts I may have made. You're losing ground, Eric, and plenty of face, but hey, what the hell, it's only forever in the archives of anyone that does a search on "Eric Oyen".

What manner did you utilize to adjudicate me guilty of violating rules, Oyen, since you claimed that usenet posts don't count?

>What manner? how about postings in places

>other than usenet (mailing lists for example).

Ahhh,,,so you hold that mailing lists are somehow, in your mind, more accurate and somehow more truthful than usenet...hmm,,ok.,,,we'll remember that claim for use against you in the future when you make another gaffe and self-contradict yourself as you are always doing. Nevertheless, they are not mine, bubba. Appears you were had several times over,,,LOL,and by the same joker. The only place this web name exists is right here in rec.radio.cb. Since you are beside yourself concerning forges of twistedhed, go to the rec.radio.amateur forums and google my name. The posts made by myself, are in the single digits. The rest are forges, but you, in all your self-proclaimed wisdom regarding headers and tracing ability, know better, of course. <g>

Perhaps this magic enlightenment you can be used as your own personal litmus test. So, I ask again, by what means did you come to such a conclusion, Eric, concerning my illegalities? I feell, that you are but another bug, another angry, ignorant, hypocritical hammie that needs slapped around by cbers every once in awhile to make certain you stay in line and apply your bullshit standards evenly and across the board, not merely when it suits you. Thanks for illustrating your blatant hypocrisy. You were played like a cheap fiddle by another hammie. Direct your anger to the right place, Oyen,,not with me,,I didn't write the forge that exposed your lack of intellect and gullibility.

>heh. Ignorant? nope.

Oh yea,,,,,your steadfastness concerning the webtv crossposting capabilities is most definitely ignorance. Several have tried to cure you of this, but you insist on remaining ignorant concerning this, and other matters.

> mad as hell,

>perhaps.

Yea, I can see that. Who woulda thought you would have fell for a forge, and such a lousy one at that and make such an ass out of yourself not once, but several times, coming right on the heels of your transparent claims of tracing cbers via their email addy...LOL.

>definitely disappointed with the likes of you. I >see you trotted out the old book d'

What in the hell has you upset and crying crocodile tears now? I use no books, except to illustrate wannabe-grammar teachers like Gillinad they are wrong when they come wrongly shooting their mouth off concerning language etiquette and word usage of which they have no clue. If you like, I can also retrieve and post several more passages that illustrates your off-topic current behavior and cries are nothing more than troll fodder, as you have an ongoing tendency to post all kinds of bullshit without so much as nary a single item to back anything you say,,,except more words,.

>psychologyand proceeded to use some terms >for its index. You made claims, and you gave >details that could be verified by other sources.

Naturally. I back what I write and say. This is what one does to maintain integrity, something you have yet to do concerning your accusations concerning my alleged illegalities AND your claims concerning tracing cbers via their email addy.

>You still haven't answered my questions

>though..

Nor you mine, and mine were posed first. Common courtesy. You need answer the questions posed to you first, then you may pose a question and have it answered. This is basic communication. It's been said so many times, but you mert it being said again. It ceases to amaze me how several licensed for comunication, exhibit the most difficulties concerning such basics regarding such. No wonder you all cling like,,well,,,dingleberries to each other.

>what rules did I violate within the last 9 years?

You first, as the question was posed to you first. How do you trace a cbers email addy for his topic of choice on usenet discussion?

>on what bands?

And what laws and (to paraphrase you) "proof" do you have that I broke any laws? Remember, you claimed 99% of usenet is bullshit. Do you regard MY posts as the 1% that are true? Hahah,,you MUST...,,,unless, of course, you are once again flip-flopping on your claim to tailor it to suit whatever self-created quandary you again find yourself in. Even in your attempts to do otherwise, you illustrate the bastion of integrity I bring to this group.

>DE N7ZZT

  Yea,,,remind us of anyone on rec.radio.cb? Several scumbag hammies here spend all their time searching for more than just emails linked to cb posters,,,,they want personal information, and when they are refused it or fail at attaining such info,,,they threaten that if they can manage competence long enough to get any personal info, they will use it against you in any manner they can conjure.....sort of like they do now with chosen user names. C. Frank Gilliland is one of those who threatens cbers concerning their personal information.

That you misconstrue my replies as a "hard-on" for those that initiate a thread toward myself is absolutely incorrect, but hey, that's what is great about America,,,you are free to add your input. Also, I had no idea your posts concerning such gems as "whack off" and sexual terms such as "cum" being directed to the trolls is so much more refreshing than my posts that I use to respond to others when they initiate conversation. Odd how my responses "get old", according to you, and of how you speak against my REPLIES, but not the initial posts and instigations directed toward myself that takes place in my deity-like absence..(giggle). I had quite the opposite result when I called them on an encoder failure on my TDS-420a

They were very helpful, and the replacement encoder was surprisingly inexpensive.
They took a few minutes to verify that we were ordering the right part, because of an ambiguity in the part number, but it was resolved quickly.
The whole thing was less than $50 and I even got spare encoders at that price, in case of a future failure.

Perhaps. However I know in some industries, the same thing is done to prevent something like this happening:

Original owner of functioning, well cared for unit sells it at a flea market etc.
New owner modifies/breaks unit, then sells it to 3rd owner 3rd owner is dissatisfied and blames manufacturer, perhaps with little effect, perhaps with significant damage to manufacturers reputation.

I know from first hand experience that this was the case with 2 well known 2 way radio companies. If you were caught sneaking a trade-in out of the path of the crusher, you got canned.

Yep, you guessed it. Same deal with mine. The wording I used was operates "10 through 12 meters." I emailed them and proposed that if I change the wording to "10 and 12 meters would it be ok. The answer was that the wording didn't matter.

Below is the exchange I had this morning with eBay. It seems eBay is guilty of merely blind obedience to the FCC and that the problem lies with the FCC's determination that all HR2600's are "problematic" and are of a "prohibited nature." When I bought the radio years ago from its original owner (also a licensed ham) I liked that the radio had a Chipswitch so I could operate it on 12 meters where I have operated it extensively. An added side benefit is that I can monitor CB during long roadtrips (I don't own a regular CB but can see their usefulness out on the highway). I have never transmitted out of band nor have I ever wished to. I guess my biggest problem with all of this is that I feel like I've been falsely accused and assumed to be a criminal. I must say I was somewhat offended by the whole episode. Here's the exchenge with eBay:

Hello Darren,

Thank you for taking the time to write eBay with your concerns. I'm happy to help you further.

We absolutely understand that you did not intentionally violate our policies. However, the Uniden HR2600 model is simply not permitted on eBay. Regardless of how the item is described, it just isn't allowed. I apologize for the inconvenience.

Your item was ended because it was identified by the FCC as potentially problematic. At eBay, we are not experts on transceivers and the specifications of each model and how it may be modified. Therefore, we rely on the FCC for guidance. eBay was contacted by representatives from the FCC and asked to remove certain models of radios that, while legal, may be problematic. Therefore, you may contact the FCC if you have any further questions about the prohibited nature of your particular model.

For further information concerning why your model was ended, contact Ray LaForge at the FCC Laboratory, 7435 Oakland Mills Road, Columbia, MD 21046, (301) 362-3041, or E-mail: rlaforge@fcc.gov

We appreciate your patience and understanding regarding this matter, and wish you continued success on eBay.

Lara

Message: Re: Item #: 3058207918

Dear Sir or Ma'am,

I believe you may have misunderstood the nature of my item that was removed today. The radio is a fully FCC type accepted and approved HF tranceiver. It is designed and advertised by the manufacturer (Uniden) as a 10 meter HF tranceiver with 12 meter capability after minor modification. As a consequence of the modification it is, admitedly, capable of operating between the 12 meter and 10 meter amateur bands. However, it is NOT a so-called "export," "CB," or other non-type accepted radio. It's fully FCC approved. Many, many, hams have modified the Uniden HR2600 in this particular fashion to enable them to operate legally on 12 meters as well as 10, and is not at all inconsistent with perfectly legal operation on these bands.

There are also many other FCC type accepted HF radios capable of operation outside the amateur bands that are listed on eBay right now, so I'm not sure why my radio is different. In reviewing my item's listing, perhaps if I had said "operates on 10 and 12 meters" rather than "10 'through' 12 meters" or included a disclaimer that the operator of the radio must hold an FCC genral class or higher ham license, would my listing be ok?

Also, I would like to point out that I am a law-abiding ham radio operator who holds a General class amateur radio license, call sign W5DKE, and that I legally operate this radio on both 10 and 12 meter amateur bands. If a purchaser "might" operate the radio outside the legal amateur bands, that should not preclude my being allowed to sell the item. Otherwise you would have to end the majority of transceiver auctions I see in the Ham Radio Tranceiver section of your website.

Lastly, you can see from my selling history that I am not a regular user of eBay. Please understand that I in no way intended to circumvent or disregard your site's policies and if I have, please accept my apology.

Respectfully,

Darren Ream

I'm looking for service information for a 1960s
Hammarlund CB-23 tube-type base station CB set.
I found and downloaded the text portions of the owner's manual which covers operation and basic alignment, but I need a schematic, block diagram, voltage and resistance charts, etc. There's no Sams Photofacts on this one, so I must have the original Hammarlund documentation. Please help me to restore this interesting classic radio!

Lafayette Radio also sold this same transceiver
as the model HB-200 (I think that's correct).

Not true - a set of "real" GMRS mobile radios with "real" antennas will get 7 miles under decent conditions.

But, with decent antennas, it is far better for mobile use than FRS and FRS/GMRS hybrids(which aren't "real" GMRS radios).

It is NOT hard to come by... try the 10 channel TEKK NT-10 2W handheld from a number of sources online for $129.

There are others as well... check the archives in the MURS-OPEN group

If you never need to communicate more than about 1/2-mile, then FRS is what you want. Otherwise, go with Ham, MURS, "real" GMRS, or even 11m CB radio.

I did NOT say they were! The question was asked by what right does the US government telling a citizen what can or not do WRT radio. I KNOW it is per Federal Regulations passed by Congress and not the Constitution per se. If a person violates regulations within the US and its territories, then they are subject to possible prosecution.

Quick comment to Jim from above:
Actually, they just might. Treaties are sometimes used as bargaining chips. If a problem arises such as radio interference, then an aggrieved country can take it up with the offending country. Where the US is concerned, it may be that a country that needs loans, etc. will agree to abate the RFI in exchange for said loans, grants, or other concessions. And of course, it can be taken up with ITU.
>
> just make it worse for every body next thing you know > they'll require a digatal id on all transmitters or they'll be > terrorist and arrested without due process.

People don't realize that illegal activities CAN cause adverse actions such as the above. Sometimes it may hurt the innocent as well as the guilty. In 1978, during the peak of CB's popularity, CB amplifiers became one of the sought after "options" in many operators' stations. All of a sudden, every garage, it seems, was pumping out splatterboxes by the hundreds. FCC then passed a regulation that required that no amplifiers be built or imported into the US capable of operation between 24 and 30 MHZ. The manufacturer could provide the enabling modification upon proof of license. Who did that hurt? Not the illegal amp makers; they kept on sneaking their junk under the radar to the detriment of hams. Not a major thing to the hams, but it caused some inconvenience to the Amateurs who had to take time to make the mod.

Who knows what "freebanding" could cause? Not me. I only know about some things I hear from time to time--like the transmitter fingerprinting mentioned, or, maybe, areturn to more aggressive enforcement, or amendments to the local enforcement law. I know only one thing; when enough people get annoyed, like the people being interferred with on 10/12 Meters, eventually something will be done. Sure, the people who "freeband" think their "hobby" is harmless and see no reason why they shouldn't be able to just pick up a mike and start talking anywhere, anytime, and with a bazillion watts. It boils down to training, discipline, and safety. Training teaches the discipline to know what and why to use a radio, and said discipline makes certain their operation causes no harm toothers (safety); it all goes hand in hand. Those regulations that seem to chafe "freebanders" are like fences; one can move from one boundary to the next, but the fence prevents the "cows" from getting into someone else's pasture.

Finally, I mentioned that "freebanders" can see no harm in going above or below the 40 CB channels, or in between. It depends on whose cow is being gored. If it were legal for you to operate on 6620 MHZ USB (international avation HF band), how would you like to be aboard a flight that couldn't find its way because someone was chatting on the "channel"? What if the aircraft was experiencing mechanical trouble and couldn't talk to the company engineers for help?

It used to be that people didn't 'dare' to "freeband" AND they had more civility and respect for others to do it. If the break in the fence isn't mended, the "freebanders" will breach the gap like a broken dam.

Eventually, OTHER bands and frequencies will be violated (Hello? Is anyone here? I think I will occupy this "room" and sit a spell) and as each band is screwed up, the rightful users are stepped on, another band is "stolen", more illegals rush in, and so on. Think not? Well, who'd a-thunk it that 10 and 12 Meters would be violated with truckers beeping and squeaking their way along while the digital modes (per ITU convention) were interferred with?

jerry you may be right with the treaties as I am not up on international law. point is if there are such agreements has anyone ever been prosecuted by their governing bodies or hell have any nations been notified by another that one of their citizens is causing harm? I dont know the answers but at this point it still won't stop people freebanding. Its human nature to nonconform especially concerning something as trivial as this.

eBay practices what is known as "selective enforcement" on their site.

Basically, if someone complains, they cancel your auction. The onus is then on YOU to prove the item is NOT prohibited under eBay rules. Guilty until proven innocent, in other words. This is difficult if not downright impossible to do, since you're dealing with an entry-level drone on the other end who doesn't have a clue as to the specifics of radio equipment. You're likely to receive only form letters in response. Most of their customers simply give up in frustration. This is their intention. eBay has become just another oversized corporate conglomerate. They don't want to bother with some guy selling a ham radio. Realizing they're the only real game in town with regards to online auctions, their stance seems to be "We'll do what we want. We don't care."

I've seen this happen time and time again: legal, unmodified 10m radios, advertised in the ham radio section, being removed from the site. Meanwhile, modified radios are allowed to continue being auctioned in the CB section. Radios clearly marked as "modified", "extra channels", "full 26-28Mhz coverage", etc., in the Item Description. Also linear amplifiers, which are clearly illegal in all cases.

Ditto for pre-ban scanners with 800Mhz coverage. Units made prior to April, 1994, with no mention of modification are pulled while others described as "full 800Mhz coverage", "cellular unlocked", "modified for cell", etc., are allowed to continue.

I believe a competent attorney could, after sufficient documentation, make a strong case against eBay on these grounds. Given the millions of users, it wouldn't be too hard to then have class action status awarded to the pending case. I'm not a lawyer, nor do I play one on TV, but I sure would love to see one take them on. This game has been going on way too long now, as any regular buyer of radio gear via eBay can attest to.

Since the HR2600 is only 10 through 12 meters, tell her you won't get very

Tnom, Frank, smack his pee pee until he understands that 1:1 and resonance are related but different. You can have one without the other.

Tell you what, put a 102 inch stainless steel whip on the roof of your clunker.
Use a 4 inch heavy duty spring. Use enough coax to reach the radio. Measure SWR.

Tell us what you get. Respond before December 31st.

Those things don't like to be around radio towers. 2 meters is useless when the tower is a half mile away.

Talking to Ebay is like talking to M$. They really don't care as long as they make $. The are very "reactive" to issues, not "proactive". I see nothing wrong with the 2600 but lets talk about the 200 watt "Ham Amps" for $1xx.00 that cover 12 and 10 meters? They are still around. Also the "Amateur amps, 250 watts for $2xx.00 that only cover 24 to 30 mhz. Funny, they still get listed?

What do I know and its for sure Ebay does not care at all.

Just my 3 cents, John W5CGU

"A couple of dozen at best"? How do you figure that? Do you have any clue? If that's true, why did you ask your question here?

BTW, I merely made an observation. But you proved it for me: The "fair price" you could get here wouldn't be enough.

Sorry, but thanks for playing.

Your resonant impedance may be pretty much anything, depending on the exact antenna in question. We favour antennas that are roughly 50 ohms resistive at resonance.

Resonance is the point(s) where the antenna has little to no reactive impedance component.

My cobra for 11M is about 2/1 and is definitely resonant.

Me too, but it was after many years of not being able to get them - read the stories by Wayne Green and Byron Kretzman about the machines that used to go to the landfill. Same with Motorola - a few hams spoiled it for everyone by reselling 2-way radio gear back into commercial service after they had "promised" (and signed waivers) that the equipment would be used only for ham radio use and not resold into commercial service.

Sometimes it's just cheaper in the long run to dispose of gear than try to support it and lose a potential new equipment sale.....

By the way, thanks everyone for their responses. I think I'll go ahead and post it on eham and qrz and skip this whole auction thing altogether. When I post it for sale, I'll post a link here so everyone can look it up.

Thanks again.

Your analysis might be true, IF there was any continuity to typical management. Businesses that have been "doing the right thing" for 50 years can suddenly do bizarre things, often from bringing in a "breath of fresh air" in the form of a manager hired from competition, or, even worse, from some totally unrelated industry. Or the management level fills up with lawyers and bean counters. Got synergy?

Other things, like management loosing their collective nerve or direction, can also produce this effect. Remember Coke? For 90 plus years, brand leader with an unchanging formula. Then the data comes in from some market focus group, and we suddenly get New Coke!

BTW, this "news" about destroying obsolete products is very old news. Seems like more than 10 years ago, HP was doing this on 141-series analyzer mainframes. Come to think of it, HP ain't the old HP anymore, huh?

Ebay is a wonderful thing most of the time.
Yes, you get the most cash from whatever you sell (most of the time).
Ebay is watched all over the world and if someone really wants to spend more than you might think is a fair price, well, it's up to them. It's called free enterprise. I look at some of the high prices and shake my head, but If an item is wanted bad enough, make it so. Who is to say what an item is worth to somebody looking for it.
ALSO, these newsgroups are nice to find stuff too, BUT, You have no recourse if something goes wrong. Like what happens if you pay for something and you never get it? Or if is not working as described?
Or it's beat up and not mint like the posting says? You're screwed.
True, most hams are honest but there are some chumps also.
At least on Ebay there are actions that can be done. Also, using paypal to pay for something is great. Yes it cost a very small amount but if you don't get your item and the seller does not have any proof that he sent it Paypal can and does get your money back from the sellers account.

BTW, Ebay is so large that they usually do not go out of their way to look for items to ban. What usually happens is some dirtbags out there look for these radios and amps and e-mail ebay. Then "poof" your auction is ended. Even though there is nothing illegal with the item. Ebay is making way to much money to let a legal radio (or whatever) that someone "might" modify" to be sold on their system. They seem to be afraid of repercussions down the road.

With all ebays money how come they are afraid to have a telephone??

Wrong again, Doug: It's whining trolls like you who are responsible for the "ban".

And if you continue to jam 2 meter repeaters in and around Toledo, you'll get repeaters banned, too.

Pinhead? I guess you are.

Prove me wrong: Post it For Sale here. You'll get a "fair price".

But you didn't answer the question: How can you claim that you'll only get "a couple of dozen at best"? A "couple of dozen" would only be the "Fair price"...??? For whom?

eBay prices are typically HIGHER than what can be had through other resources simply because people get caught up in the bidding process. Great for the seller, I guess.

In this current time, NOTHING is as it used to be.. As the man pointed out with management, ideas, formulas and so on, it seems all of what "used to be" common sense has gone out the window. Nothing should come as a surprise in this day and age.
But, speaking of trashing items, I too know of a few companies that trash their items with no regard to future use, and so on.
This world is run by a whole different set of rules now and even they aren't set in stone. It is a shame to see such equipment still with some life to it demolished, but such is life. G.W.

Yes, but only after you were told to "put up", first, regarding your claim concerning tracing cbers via their email address for their choice of topic on usenet. I suppose I could reduce myself to your level of crudeness and now tell you to "put up or shut up", but you would much

But how is this not a "fair price?" Nobody is twisting the bidders' arms, forcing them to pay. Is the system responsible because they make a poor decision and overbid?

I suppose, in this junk society where nobody's responsible for their own actions, it fits right in. Just as McDonalds is responsible for people getting fat and RJ Reynolds is responsible for people getting lung cancer. sigh

He said " has components to cover 160 with some addl inductor taps"
That means he has a large enough inductor with a unused section that includes taps that will increase the inductance for 160 .

Let's clear up a few CB myths here.......

First, the ONLY thing an SWR meter can tell you is how much power -inside- the coax is going in the wrong direction. It -can't- tell you why. SWR does not distinguish between an antenna and a dummy load, nor does it care about errors due to improper or untuned grounds, RF on the coax, the length of the coax, the type of antenna, etc, etc, etc. In fact, an SWR meter can show a 1:1 ratio with no load at all depending on your coax length and whether the end is open or shorted -- it's called a tuned stub!!!

Second, it is the -efficiency- of the antenna that is important. This should be a rule: If you want resonance, use a grid-dip oscillator; if you want maximum field strength, use a field strength meter. (duh!) If anyone wants proof of this, plot the SWR and the relative field strength across the band -- you will find that they peak at different frequencies.

Finally, the SWR meter is good as an indicator of fault or failure in a working antenna system, and then only if you know what the SWR should be when the system is working properly. That's the way it should be used. It should -not- be used to tune an antenna. A field strength meter is less expensive, easier to use, and directly measures the strength of the transmitted signal (which is what you really want to measure anyway!).

Naw, it was a troll. Might as well keep it up as this newsgroup doesn't seem to change too much anyways.
Seriously, I don't know what the fascination is with these multiple kilowatt levels. I doubt many people are running more than a couple of hundred watts, despite what the numbers show on the boxes that are being sold these days (and most of those watts are likely nowhere near where one wants them to be effective). I try not to think too much within these groups; however, neither Twist nor I (which makes two) think too slowly.

Sorry for the OT question, but I couldn't find a small engine group.

I just pulled the flywheel on my Briggs 18hp v-twin Z-cart. (starter repair)

Should I clean the armature/magneto contacts with anything besides air while I have it off, or leave it alone?

Thanks.

I rarely exceed what comes out of the transmitter, and that's only when it fairly quiet. I'm sure that's true of most of the regular posters on this board.

Steve,
According to my B&S repair manual do not soak the armature in a cleaning solution. The armature commutator, if it needs cleaning, can be cleaned with 000 sand paper. Don't use emery cloth as it will embed in the commutator and cause rapid wear. HTH, Jim.

Thanks Jim, what do you think about a non-residual, plastic safe contact Really? That makes sense, as long as there's no grit residue after cleaning it with air. What say about a plastic safe contact cleaner?

if you were going that route then alcohol could work but the manual specifically mentioned no solutions were to be used. are you sure it needs cleaning? is anything pitted or burnt/glazed?

I just pulled it this evening after work, so I've not even blown it off with air and looked close at it yet. I was going to do that, but my wife came back to the barn and told me we had nasty weather on the way. (strange weather day here)

It may not need anything more than a soft air cleaning, but I figured it wouldn't hurt to ask.

Thank N8WWM. He found a loophole, and ruined it for everyone. All of those gay pics were from doug adair, thru news-service.com.

He jams repeaters, and posts the most vile shit you have ever seen on Usenet. He is a wart on the communication hobby. Radio or internet.

I'm not worried about it, I never made any complaint to news-service. I did send an e mail to Dave forewarning him this would happen. What really closed the access was the forging of BrainBuster & Scott, that's what got the service pulled.

I sent every one of them to abuse@news-service.com. I think that's actually a UK News-Provider. It's too bad Adair had to throw it Don't bother. Just rub it clean with the eraser and it will be fine. Rubber is an abrasive that's softer than the metal, but sandpaper and steel wool will leave grooves in the surface that can cause problems such as the brushes wearing out faster, overheating of the contacts, arcing, and even increased RFI. If you -do- use sandpaper use a very fine grade, follow it up right away with a shot of silicone spray lube, wipe it dry with a soft rag leaving a very thin film, then spin that puppy a few times before applying juice.

OK, everyone, as promised, I finally posted my radio on QRZ.com and www.eham.com. Price is $225 or best offer. Go to either of those sites and check out the description and photo.

Thanks again to everyone who helped me with advice. Much appreciated.

I have just completed this amp. It covers 20-40-80 but has components to cover 160 with some addl inductor taps, which will be supplied. I used quality components throughout and it took me 3 years to gather up all the parts and build it. Ceramic vacuum variables tune and load(CVDDs), RJ2C relays, Pi-L, tuned input, commercial socket, tube and chimney, Robust power supply with step-start on the plate xfmr and filament xfmr.
Weighs over 400 lbs all in a 30" high rack cabinet. E-Mail me for details. I can send pics. Local pick-up only. I am in the Tampa area.
I should have said $5000 OBO. This amp ain't no junk. Listing #382193 -

But only because you can't understand what such search results mean. A search on "Ronald Reagan" in usenet will reveal a plethora of mentions, and usenet will return each and everyone. Just to make you smile a bit longer, perhaps you can do your search on Washington or Lincoln or another decedent,,,,,well, scratch that,,,I'm certain none wish to explain to you how that could be....LOL.
Nevertheless, my good buddy Lelnad has ran wild lately all over this group...LOL....and getting Dogie blamed for plenty of it.

Perhaps. It is a bit abnormal for one to concern themself with the personal life of an internet personality that is the ray of sun in your day-to-day existence.

Which has nothing to do with his advice or presence or cb knowledge. Dick was a great presence and had an incredible knack for popping troublemakers, like the time Lelnad KC8LDO took to forging me and a few other regs from rec.radio.cb in the hammie rooms when we laughed at his begs to follow him there.

Naw, it was a troll. Might as well keep it up as this newsgroup doesn't seem to change too much anyways.
Seriously, I don't know what the fascination is with these multiple kilowatt levels. I doubt many people are running more than a couple of hundred watts, despite what the numbers show on the boxes that are being sold these days (and most of those watts are likely nowhere near where one wants them to be effective). I try not to think too much within these groups; however, neither Twist nor I (which makes two) think too slowly.

It was pointed out to my attention that N8WWM allegedly had this woman get her license for his own personal reasons. Stay tuned. The FCC and an interested third party have been notified of possible improprieties yet again, by Mr. Adair. Perhaps the tip of the iceberg has just been nicked, as far as N8WWM is concerned. It's a shame the scumbag is going to drag a woman down with him this time.

Echo is very annoying but if you really think you need it try this.
Make sure everything is grounded, the shield of the mic to radio chassis ground. Make sure your radio has a GOOD real ground.
Sometimes a resistor is needed in the hot line of the mic. Don't remember what the ohms are though, something pretty small.
If all else fails, turn it down to a useable level. Most folks that use these damn things think they sound good when they really sound distorted and overdriven.
good luck.

I don't know I wasn't stupid enough to even think about calling GTE.
Actually "now that I remember"
I had called Tek to enquire about a 465 B faceplate, this guy totally "lost his wig" before I even got to speak about owning a 2232.
$^% 465 !! jokingly told me "THIS ISN'T SANFORD AND SON"

I have since sold the 2232 and baught 465B and a little NLS battery operated (NLS are VERY very nice people, they sent me a manual, alignment/service procedure and schematic free!!)
I also have a 545 on a cart to I use in the basement (winter) people love looking at it :)

I am Robert,

I do massages to relieve stress, back pain, muscle tension and numbness in extremities.
During my sessions I am mainly focusing on the areas that are most likely accumulate tension on daily basis. These areas are shoulders, upper, mid/low back, inner thighs, back of the legs, calf muscles and feet.
I have been doing massages on regular basis over eight years already and would love to help those who need massotherapy to relieve stress and muscle tension. Session last 90-95 minutes and I just charge $7-10 per session. But I do in-calls at my location in Cleveland Heights, Ohio where I have a massage table.

If you are interested in details or would like to set a time, please email me.

Thank you,
Bob

The Hamprice info is really neat. I saved the document for future reference. I figure then that my radio is priced just about right considering it comes with a pretty much new $50 aftermarket amplified mike, and the Chipswitch enhanced microprocessor which is about $100 installed. Throw in a 2510 service manual and two mounting brackets, and I figure all these extras have to be worth at least $75 over the Hamprice price (which is presumably for just the basic radio).

It's been years since I've sold any equipment, so one variable I don't know about is what the overall market conditions are like right now, but since Hamprice says all their #'s are since March 2003, it's obviously not too bad.

And yes, I've heard the 706 tends to get clobbered by intermod on 2 meters, but since I use it for a base radio and I live in an extremely quiet location, that's not a concern for me. In fact the main intended use for my new 706 is to monitor 2 meter SSB for band openings.

Remove the echo. Echo sux.

But it most definitely is effective in being heard. If we knew of a broadcast sound engineer, we could ask him as he would attest to such,,it's why ads for car dealers, etc,, always are booming with just a tinge of echo,,,,ever-so-slight. Keep the echo. An ever-so-slight tinge of echo is great strictly for AM applications and PA speaker fun.

My experience is that HP scopes are OK-to-great, while Tek scopes are excellent-to-superb. Similarly, HP generators and analyzers are excellent-to-superb, while OK-to-great.

There are other manufacturers that make excellent-to-superb hardware, such as Fluke.

The repair depot in Washington DC has one old guy who likes working on the older gear, and has some limited parts supply for them. Last year he spent an awful lot of time getting the 100V supply on my 610 video monitor working reliably, and I can strongly recommend the DC folks.

"Built in absolesance" Its a dam shame !
Id agree on Tek for scopes and HP for analyzers, if you look on Ebay HP
"as is" scopes with problems must out number the Tek's 10-1.

The saddest problems I have found with the HP gear is purely their own fault. When they made the horizontal timing knobs for their 80's vintage scopes, they made them out of plastic, and carved large slots in the space between the outer part you turn with your fingers and the inner part that turns the knob. This left very little plastic to take the torque of turning the knob. Once they break there is no easy way of repairing them.

The other big problem is their use of delrin gears with aluminum hubs just about everywhere. And after 15 years, they are all broken. The HP8640B is built like a tank, but everyone I have ever had came with several gears that had split due to shrinkage.

That sounds just like the knobs used in the HT 32, 33, and SX101 series. They have a very thin flange, or lip around the front that is very fragile. I saw one on e-bay a couple days ago that was described as excellent, yet it had at least two sections of that lip missing.

But Delrin is very easy to machine.
Also unless the gears are of a very odd size (most are spur gears or a pair of 45 degree bevel gears) that can be replaced with something more modern and durable.

I do like a lot of the new, lighter weight gear as I have a bad back.
(Probably from man handling that old stuff that takes two good size men to load it into a trailer)

DouGay, you really have to stop pushing your perverted gay agenda! If you don't have anything constructive to say, just STFU, faggot.

A bit of echo is effective enough for the commercial broadcasters to use it. Who gives a dam about the military? Echo won't improve digital comms, dumass.

What specs do you want, and how much do you want to spend? The HP 141T series is great for technically-inclined hams. Very maintainable, very reliable once you understand its quirks, very competitive performance... and very big and heavy. Typically $1K or less on eBay for a working outfit.

Tek's 492-497 series are also excellent analyzers. Newer and much more portable than the 141T series, but still easily maintainable (via parts units and aftermarket suppliers, not through Tek). Quite a bit more expensive in most cases. $2K - $7K depending on model and options.

HP 8560-series analyzers are also very nice; I have no personal experience with these, though. Stay away from the cheaper (8557/8/9) HP units. Tek's older 491 is probably also best avoided in favor of the 141T line (this is probably where the saying "HP for analyzers" came from.)

Tek analyzers from the 2780 series should also be avoided by most users. They are still extremely expensive ($7K and up), and like the older 490/2750 analyzers no parts or manuals can be ordered from Tek anymore. However, unlike the 490/2750 units, they can be calibrated only with special PC-based configurations connected to specific test sources via GPIB and running obsolete software. Worse, Tek supported them only via module exchange, never releasing any component-level schematics. These are very powerful instruments, but keeping a 2782 or 2784 running nowadays would be a serious, ongoing research project in itself. These were symptomatic of the "bean-counter" generation at Tek, where customer needs were considered secondary to high-priced, proprietary product support and finite market lifetime.

I heard someone on the test-equipment reflector (http://www.qth.net) was going to fabricate some replacement 8640B gears out of metal. You might Certain no-code walkie-talkie operators jam 2 meter repeaters, and post really gross gay sex pics in rec.radio.cb ,alt.dogie.is.an.idiot.

Mostly you, doug (n8wwm). You're a disgrace to the radio hobby.

This is getting really crazy! After my bad experience with eBay, I posted a query in this newsgroup asking where I could sell my perfectly legal HR2600. One fellow ham helpfully suggested eham.net and qrz.com as viable alternatives. Well, I submitted my ad to qrz.com and it kept mysteriously disappearing so I kept reposting thinking I was doing something wrong (I rarely post anything for sale so I'm no expert, I was thinking). Well after the third time my posting mysteriously disappeared I got the following rather curt email from the moderator of qrz:

"I have deleted your posting for the illegally modified ten meter radio. We do not allow postings for this type of equipment. Please read the posting rules at the top of the forum page you are posting in before you post.

Bob
W8KT, Moderator, QRZ"

In fairness, I should post what my ad actually read:

"I just bought a 706 and wife says the 2600 must go. 2nd fastidious ham owner since new. Professionally installed Chipswitch giving this radio coverage of both the 10 & 12 meter bands. RD-104E hand mike recently bought new to replace stock mike that went bad (stock mike included if purchaser wants to fix later on). Includes original owner's manual, all documentation for the D-104 and Chipswitch, power cord, two mounting brackets, and all four original thumbscrews. I'm also throwing in a mint HR2510 service manual. Radio is in excellent condition and used mobile only a few times. Totally stock except for Chipswitch. I'm not a dealer...this radio's been in my shack for the last 5 years. $225 obo plus $15 shipping. Email me, Darren, W5DKE, at dream@alumni.utexas.net if interested or have questions. Thanks for looking at my ad!"

I had carefully read the rules before I posted and reread them again to make sure I had it right. This is what qrz.com's "rule" states:

"Amateur Radio equipment and related items only. For Sale ads only - no opinions, discussions. No illegal equipment, i.e. 10m Amps, 11m Amps, hacked CB's."

OK, now call me crazy, but I am some kind of idiot to have not realized my HR2600 was prohibited by qrz.com's "rule?" Bob, W8KT, seems to have implied that the only way for me to have not realized this was that I must not have even bothered to read the "rules" before I posted.

I used to be pretty militant about cracking down on "freebanders," "pirates," etc and had no sympathy for "whiners." [None of my HF radios have been "opened up" except for this HR2600 because that was a necessary side effect of expanding it to cover 12 meters.] But this is crazy. The anti-freebander crusaders have clearly gotten so militant and self-righteous they brand everone who possess a modified 10 meter tranceiver as scum of the earth. I'm being treated like a criminal for trying to sell a perfectly legal HF tranceiver to another ham. I am PRESUMED GUILTY just because I merely posess an HR2600. So what am I supposed to do with this radio? Since I've been banned everywhere (but not eham.net, thank you eham.net, and I even said 12 through 10 meters on that site) now I figure I have three options: 1) sell it at the truckstop, 2) donate it to the Boy Scouts (but then they'd be criminals), or 3) get rid of this equipment in the nearest dumpster before I get arrested especially now that the whole world knows I possess "illegal" equipment.

I've never had as bad of an experience as this in all my hamming days. This has really left a bad taste in my mouth especially when I realized it wasn't just the non-hams at eBay that were treating me this way (which I got over and it wasn't that big of a deal since I knew they were ignortant about ham radio), but now fellow hams are treating me like a criminal!

Someone please educate me and tell me what I'm missing here.

silly of me to forget a thing like that! Yes, a true atheist would never -dream-

the owner of a toy store! And of course you already know that all athiests are

I have been prepared to prove my identity since you first started accusing me of being other people. Yet you feel too threatened by this proof to ask for it. My name is Frank D. Gilliland, not Frank C, as in N7VCF. What would you want for proof? A scan of my drivers license? Internet bill? DD-214? What do I have to show in order to shatter your fragile little fantasy? Matter of fact, why should I bother, since even if I show up at your doorstep with my birth certificate you would still turn yellow and come up with some sort of excuse to slither out of your deal. Yep, this will turn out just like it did with your depraved version of the "golden rule", Twist -- you can't live up to your own standards.

Welcome to the world of N8WWM & WA3MOJ. They have been trolling Rec.Radio.CB for a couple of years now, with nothing to add other than harassment, foul language, sick sexual pictures, accusations, signing you up for Spam, sending you virus's and all around trolling.
Sorry about your problems with QRZ, have you tried to e-mail Bob direct, see if maybe things can be cleared up?

how about a 8569b ? some guy has one on ebay now for about $3,000.00.....i might pull the trigger on that one.....I would be using it for hf work. I was considering a 141t from tucker . it cost more but at least you know it works. i was going to get the 8552b and 8553b plugins with it. then you have to round up the connecting cables and manuals for them. comments? oh by the way i have read good things about the hp 8569b's. if they work.

QRZ and the "RF Keystone Kops" who fed them
the BS thereon are obviously paranoid.

The HR-2600 IS NOT..repeat...IS NOT capable of being "modified" for out of band operation as was it's immediate product predecessor radio the HR-2510.

I think the "kilocycle cops" who got your ad cut off from QRZ don't know their freakin ass from a hole in the ground. I and suprised QRZ even fell for their line of BS.

Put it on E-Bay instead, and in so doing tell QRZ.com to go pound sand.

> break the bank on this stuff? thanks.

A tek 7000 mainframe is my spectrum analyzer, and backup scope.
I have a 7L5 plugin for 0-5MHz, and 7L13 for 0.1 to 1800 MHz
I also have the companion tracking generator.

This stuff was all aquired piecemeal at hamfests, and in total, probably set me back <$1k.
I've had it for (eek!) 13 years!

The 7000 series is getting long in the tooth, but there's a ton of plugins out there cheap, and they are very nice instruments.

Generally, get the best scope you can afford, and "give till it hurts". :)
My current scope is a TDS-420 4 channel DSO. It wasn't cheap, except in relative terms, but it's my main tool for earning a living, and I wouldn't want to work with less.

Depending on what you want to do with it, you might be ok with a 100 or even 60 MHz non-storage analog scope. You want the bandwidth to be >> the frequency you'll be working at. Assuming 11M applications, I'd say 60 would be marginal, 100 definitely better.

Also, GET GOOD PROBES! I just re-probed at Dayton this year, I think I spent $800 or so on probes. I got two sets of very nice probes (8 probes total) plus a set of lesser quality "everyday" probes that I use when I'm not really pushing the limits. Save the good ones for when it matters.

Some old BNC cable with clipleads will work at audio, but you wouldn't want to debug a switching power supply with it!

Good, transmit all ya want, jitlip. Now you're not only an freeband bootlegger but a VHF bootlegger on ham bands, makes it easier to bust your ass.

My guess is that the 8569b would be a very passable unit. Its specs seem competitive with an optioned-out Tek 492 in most respects, except that it only goes down to 10 MHz (perhaps there's an underrange capability that lets it see lower frequencies?) That might be a concern if you're going to be using it mostly for HF work.

I see that there's some modern GPIB software for it at www.febo.com, which is VERY good to have. (I've written my own for the Tek 49x analyzers, but it's never been tested on the HP jobs.)

But since I've never actually played with an 8560-series model, I can't speak with any authority. Maybe someone who owns one will pipe up.

The 141Ts at Tucker seem like a pretty good deal. I believe they all come with new CRTs. I personally like to buy broken models on eBay and fix them up. It's cheaper, you get really familiar with the gear inside and out, and you always have spare parts on hand. But that strategy isn't for everybody.

I had the same. A while back, there was a rather sudden increase in Spam.
Now it is about 7Mb of large files every day - I suspect they may be viruses, but my filter deletes them on the server.

BTW: Be aware that the messages are forging the "return" address so, if you bounce the mail, an innocent person who is also suffering the mail bombing will get your bounce messages.
You may even start getting "bounce" and automatic "virus" warning messages, as your address will be forged in some messages... I have already started getting such messages from anti-virus systems. But, they get deleted on the server just the same.
As I do not use that address or account to send mail, any "bounce" or "virus" messages are either faked (to get me to open the virus infected mail) or a response to a forged e-mail message.

I am considering allowing the e-mail box to just fill up... it is 100% spam in the box anyhow.

Regards,

Peter.

As I have HP-141's, an HP-8569, an 8566B and an 8562A, let me drop a few comments here.

The 141's are the best deal for a hobbyist. You can acquire the slightly better 8552B IF section, and then get only the RF plug-in that suits your needs (an 8556, with it's built-in tracking generator, for a few Hz to 300 kHz, or an 8555, for 10 MHz through umpteen GHz, assuming you also get the external mixers). Unfortunately, by the time a hobbyist gets one of these, it has been abused and neglected by its last commercial owner. CRT burns are common, and the flood-gun analog memory may be very quirky. For an advanced hobbyist, either get an associated Polaroid scope camera, or build your own camera hood. You can capture a lot of transient things that way, and you can scan the pixs to input into your computer. Also, HP made a line of oscilloscope plug-ins that fit the 141 mainframe, so you can use the 141 as a multi-channel analog memory oscilloscope too. 141's are a pain in two ways; first, you have to externally store extra plug-ins, and secondly, the hard side handles make carrying one a painful experience beyond about 50 feet. Also, you tend to injure your fingertips sliding those bulky plug-ins in and out past the big metal front handles. The 141 may also be the last of the hobbyist repairable analyzers; newer analyzers use proprietary chips and are built too dense to let you get fingers and probes into them.

The 8562A is old (1987) but a superb analyzer, 1 kHz to 18 GHz, all digital and synthesized. This will do everything you want, except drive a parallel or RS-232 printer directly. If you're smart enough to talk to it by IEEE-488, then you can do everything through the computer. Other 856x series units have lesser capabilities, but are still great analyzers, and just might be priced low enough for a very serious hobbyist. Also, the HP-859x series are very good, although some have odd frequency, memory and IO capabilities. All 856x & 859x series units are one-man portables, until your knuckles turn white and numb.

The 8569 is, in my opinion, a transitional beast between the analog and digital worlds. It's not as stable and simple as the 8562A, although it's a leap above the 141. Since it's wide, it's also awkward to carry using it's handle. I'm not much of a fan of the 8569.

The 8566B is HP's top-of-the-line analyzer. They threw down the benchmark for everyone else to try to meet. Mine is customized a bit, covering 20 Hz to 22 GHz, and with an external tracking pre-selector, optional detectors, programmable attenuators, RF path switching and low-noise pre-amps. My company has a number of somewhat more plain-vanilla 8566B's and 8566A's. There isn't anything I need to do that these units fall short of (uhh, with the help of some external IEEE-488 linked computers). OTOH, these are now obsolete, non-supported by Agilent, and need two guys to carry one. Mine is in a 60" tall dedicated rack. Typical used price is around $20k.

Most companies will be better served with one of Agilent's newer EPA or SPA analyzers. Anritsu and Rohde & Schwartz are also making fine analyzers. IIRC, Leader makes an analyzer that a hobbyist may aspire to affording.

I would say that a 141 is still the best hobbyist choice. A company needs to be sure that they get a usable item for their money, so buying on eBay is a gamble. A company should buy from some place like Tucker, where they get a warranty backed by a reputable source. Yeah, it initially costs more. But it's a lot safer than having to try to repair an analyzer when you need that analyzer to do the real work of your company. A hobbyist can afford to spend 50 to 100 hours to get something going; in a business environment, where the clock is always ticking, that's unacceptable.

didn't the 141t's come out in the late 60's? I believe I read somewhere that the hp 8566b came out in 1995 and cost around $75,000 new, and like you stated I have read that it is the best spectrum analyzer ever built. I see them for about $10,000.00 to $12,000.00 starting on ebay but I would have some serious problems laying out that kind of money for a item on ebay. Thanks for the info. For all I know the 141t might serve my purposes just fine. I will look and see if tucker has one of those 8562a's though.

wow! I just looked at the tucker catalogue and the 8562a's are going for $17,000.00. Looks like they don't want to give that one away either. Seems like if you want a nice analyzer for your home shop you had better go out and get yourself a home equity loan because you are going to need it...

do you know anything about the hp 180t series mainframes with assorted plugins? They have some of those also.

Hello all. I just recently bought a Cobra 75. Two things that I thought were strange was in the manual, when it tells you how to change it from channel to frequency display, they show a frequency of 27.755, twice in the manual. I did a search online and I found reference to an 80 channel version of this handheld CB, as well as one that says it's an AM/FM CB.

Does anyone know if any mods exist for this compact handheld to expand the channels and add FM coverage?

NOTE: I am well aware of the mode and frequency limitations imposed by the FCC here in the states, but I don't care. Please don't waste your time replying, because I'll just ignore your reply and will reply only to authentic attempts to help me.

Hi Landshark,

I did try to email him twice for a clarification, but have gotten zero response. All I got was the initial email telling me to "read the rules before I post then I would know not to post illegal equipment" (I paraphrase, see above for exact quote). It's not that big of a deal anymore...it's only a $200 radio at issue here after all...but I have gotten an education at how some hams just can't help being self-righteous asses. You know guys, there is a war on, and our country is going bankrupt, etc.. So you would think they'd find a bigger issue to get their panties in a wad over if they really want to go on a crusade. No wonder young people are not coming into the hobby. One slip up, and they get jumped. It's almost like these old cratchety hams would rather see the hobby die completely than morph into something they don't approve of. They can go down with their ship if they want to, but this sort of attitude is what is killing the hobby, in my opinion.

By the way, in an attempt to be done with this nonsense, I've dropped the price of the radio to $195 or best offer. Again, see www.eham.net (my new favorite site!) for further info and pictures.

Thanks

Darren

Hello all, I hope there is someone out there that can help me out on this. I have a Pres.HR 2510 and it worked fine until a couple of days ago when it would stop transmitting after 7 seconds of keying. It would stop transmitting and show "error 0" on the screen and after I unkeyed it would go back to normal and I could key up again for another 7 seconds.
I dont have the manual anymore so I have no Idea what the error codes mean. I have had this radio for about 7 years.
This radio has the chipswitch in it, stock output power, astatic D104 M6b mic and I dont use a amp.
Thank you in advance.

IIRC, the 180 mainframe was a different form-factor than the 141. The 180 stacked up a bit more like a big oscilloscope.

A 140 series, with a round face CRT came out in the early 70's. The 141, with a rectangular face, hit around 1975. The 8566 was around 1991, IIRC.

Unless you get extraordinarily lucky (and when does that ever happen), all but the 141 series is priced beyond the hobbyist. Maybe some of those 8562's or 859x's will be still working in 5 years or so when they hit the surplus market. Till then, hobbyists are still pretty much in the analog SA world.

I wouldn't buy an 8566B on eBay; I can't cross my fingers that hard.

Agreed. I noticed that it's really not worth that much. Whatever it's worth, I figured the "market would decide" if I auctioned it. On eBay I had it for sale with no reserve. It's not that I'm keenly aware if it's value and wanted to get more than it's worth, just that I don't really have the foggiest what the radio's worth so I was going to auction it to make sure I at least go "about" what it was worth.
Right now it's up on www.eham.net for $195 or best offer. Hamprice says it's worth about $150, so I figure with the Chipswitch and the D-104 hand mike, I've got it priced roughly right.
The 2510 service manual is just a freebie. I'm not even concerned about getting any money for it, I just would hate to throw it away.

The 141 weighs a ton, but it's rock solid stable, it sells for reasonable money at hamfests, and it's not that hard to get repaired.

Also, I think the Singer spectrum analyzers of that era are underrated and sell for very low sums considering how good they are. When I first used one, I was amazed at how birdie-free it was (although admittedly this was 30 years ago, and all of our standards for birdies are a bit higher).

You know, I like the analogue SA gear. I like analogue scopes too.

I see a lot of wideband hand-held receivers like the Icom R10, some of which have crude LCD panadaptor displays. Has anyone used any of these as cheap spectrum analyzers? If so, what is the one that will give me the best resolution possible? I don't much care about the front end sensitivity. I can live with some serious limitations in order to have something I can carry in my pocket.

It would be very nice to have a spectrum analyzer I can carry up to the top of the tower with me to poke around at the head amps before taking the whole thing down.

Have a look at the manufacturers of GSM chipsets like Analog Devices,

Translate the dynamic range ie noise to max signal for a fair analog scope and represent it in bits ; translates to 24bits or so with 100+MHz bw cant do that with digital only 12 bits or so!!

Ive re recently had access to all types and demonstrated that to see a
.1mV 200MHz parasitic oscillation on a 10V 10MHz sin wave cant be done on a modern scope (have to use analog spectrum analyser) but easy on a good analog scope .
Cheap Analog still available from Japan we are being forced in that direction bt Tech and Agilent/HP

No, there is no person so named. Would you prefer that he had used the sort of expletives that those symbols generally represent? Have you never seen profanity annotated that way (think: comic strip)? The 'Sanford & Son' reference was made by the service rep, apparently referring to the gall of the OP, for wasting the rep's valuable time asking for information about equipment that he (the rep) considered to be nothing but junk (you'll recall the TV series of that name was about a junk dealer).

Does that wrap it up for you...or--OP--did I get that right?

Actually, it's not a Ham thing, it's more of a troll thing.
The individuals I mentioned before are nothing more than trolls, a ham license has nothing to do with that.

Yup, sad thing. It's those people that make you not want to take the time, study, pass an exam if people like that

Well you can try one more time, no response you know

Actually, it's not a Ham thing, it's more of a troll thing.
The individuals I mentioned before are nothing more than trolls, a ham license has nothing to do with that.

Yup, sad thing. It's those people that make you not want to take the time, study, pass an exam if people like that are on the airwaves. Believe me, if they talk like this on the newsgroup, they can't be any better on the air.

It has nothing to do with crochety old hams and everything to do with the fact that the guy converted his 10 meter ham rig to CB and can't understand the FCC regs.

Don't blame eBay and the FCC for the fact you can't sell this radio legally.

Blame the CB bootleggers, pirates and freebanders like Landshark, Moparholic, etc. who operate illegally. They are the ones who forced the FCC to ban these rigs.

Darren,
your is probably not the only case. However, the HR2600 does have a nasty habit of opening into 11 meters when one does the chipswitch to open 12 meters. This is not neccessarily true in all cases (depending on the version of the chipswitch used).

you might want to take the radio in, have it examined by a tech with a G.R.T.O lic. from the FCC (commercial grade lic.). and then have him sign an affidavit attesting to the specifications the radio is currently capable of. submit a copy of that along with your posting back to qrz.com and see what goes. Thats all I can suggest.

oh really? I know of 4 shops here in the southwest that used to do routine mods on the HR-2600 line of radios without a problem. What are you basing good point. list it as "HAM GEAR". make no mention whatsoever about CB in yeah yeah yeah. put up or shut up.

usenet posts don't count as anyone on here will "inflate" or "aggrandize" statements for their own benifits.

show me where in the FCC database or in the FBI public records where my name is SPECIFICALLY mentioned as part on an ongoing investigation at any time in the last 7 years with regard to the FCC, their rules and regulations (yes, the FBI has been known to be called in to suppliment an investigation by the fcc).

put up or shut up. thats all I have to say.

You wanna rumble? OK, Let's just get out of public view so we don't get popped.

Take Rt. 80-90 W out of Toledo to Rt. 20 S in Maumee. It will run into Montclova Rd. Go left on Montclova to Jerome. Park on Oak Openiings Metropark. Walk the trail to the 1st bridge. I will be there wearing a red T shirt on Sat. Nov. 22 at 11AM.

If you start a rumble, get ready to get the max. Bring it along, I will. You wanna talk to me? OK. That's cool. Just don't expect me to listen to bullshit. I just walk away. Ya got anything REAL to talk about? Ya got questions? OK, cool.

You don't know me by picture, sight, or otherwise. Bring your digicam, yer gayboy pals are in for a shock.

Be forewarned: I like the kinda rumbles where there are cuts and broken bones. If you have never deliberately broken someones bones, or don't have the heart to cut, be civil. I have.

Thanks to Ed for the good advice.

I've got an HP 140T. As far as I know, the only difference between it and the 141T is that the CRT in mine is a conventional one with long-persistence phosphor rather than a storage tube. It uses the same plug-in units as the 141T. I find it to be very usable, and don't really miss storage capability at all. I think the tube is a lot more trouble-free than a storage type unit.

So I recommend that you don't turn down a 140T if you come across one -- and you might even have a better chance of getting a unit with a working display than with a 141T.

Better utilization of HF spectrum, and more spectrum for hams. All the

The date and time works for me. Here's where we will meet.

Crane Creek State Park

Take the Ohio Turnpike to exit 91, follow the signs to Route 19, then go north to Route 2. Take Route 2 a few miles left (west) to Crane Creek State Park.

I'll be in a red GMC 2500 4x4 p/u truck, I'll be wearing a black coat.

Handheld CB's suck. The frequency range is such that you can't efficiently put a signal in the air. At VHF, you can expect a few miles. At UHF, you are line of sight, the higher the better.

Crane Creek is full of families and park cops on a Saturday you gutless sissy. Go 280 N to exit 7, follow signs for Maumee Bay a few miles to N. Curtice, take a Left on N. Curtice to Cedar Pt. DON'T go into the park entrance, park in the golf course parking lot and walk up to the marsh. I'll be there.

No worries here. The fact that you think you are going to be wearing a

But 10 meters is rarely crowded, getting 11 back, though nice, isn't that critical.

The hams hardly used 11 meters when they had it, what makes you think they would use it now if they got it back? Besides, the cbers have made such a mess of it, it would take years to clean the filth out.

well it is amazing i think how some of these units retain their resale value even though the companies that made them do not service them or back them......man who was the brainiac that thought about how to implement this scam?

incidentally some guy tried to sell a stolen hp unit he lifted over at his job at nasa.......on ebay.....the final price was i think about $3,000.00....for a 35,000 dollar unit i thing they said on the news......he got arrested and the guy who bought it on ebay needless to say didn't get the deal he was trying to get.....which makes me wonder how many stolen items are listed on ebay and are sold there?

I guess then every other ham that has opened the transmit on their tranceiver to get additional ham bands, MARS/CAP, etc., has "converted their...rig to CB" if in the course of the modification it does theoretically allow transmission on the CB band. following that logic, there's a lot of $5000 Icom, Yaesu, and Kenwood HF rigs out there that have been converted to CB's. I respectfully disagree that by adding 12 meters to this radio it shows I "don't understand the FCC regs." I would submit that it is YOU who doesn't understand the FCC regs. Well, I see that trying to get any sense through to the "radio police" is a hopeless cause. No matter, I've sold the damn thing. Now, on to opening up my new 706 for 5 MHZ......

Funny thing is that I've spotted quite a few HR2600's on eBay both before and since I tried posting my radio. And no, I didn't email eBay about them nor am I going to post the links to the items (if the radio police want to, they can just search eBay to find them). One that has been up for several days even proudly advertises its Chipswitch mod that covers CB. Ummm, can you say "selective enforcement?"

It seems to me that folks have lost sight of the fact that HAMs are the only ones that can legaly design, build/modify, and operate radios.
modifications/conversions don't mean squat as long as the equipment is operated in accordance with 47CFR95 and 47CFR97.

well if the hams took back 11 meters....what would they do about all the skip talkers on channel 6???? those old black men would not like you hammies trying to run them off and they would jump up and down and Designing and building a product to provide many years of use, and then capable of being repaired without access to unique components and/or exotic service equipment, is a concept so rare as to be thought a scam.

Steve,

Are you that dumb? The guy purporting to be me who calls himself "Citizens For A Keyclown Free" Newsgroup is NOT me.

I will prove to you I am N8WWM by the following means:

1.Go now to QRZ.com and do a lookup on me.

2.Since it takes QRZ a day or two to screen changes, wait until Tuesday afternoon or early evening and look again. There will be a change. The change will be these words verbatim.
"My 3.5 wavelength six meter wire antenna is sure working great! Email me for details and photos of how to build it! 4dB gain beats the heck out of a dipole!"
3.Then if you wish to reply to this email, fine and dandy. The purpose of this is to establish that you are talking to the real deal.

On the subject of the poster who invited you to Oak Openings for a rumble: Again, not me. I have made clear on several occasions that all anyone has to do is show up on my premises. An intruder in my home will be assumed hostile, and will be shot dead on sight. I never play by another guy's rules in a fight, and the Marquess of Queensbury didn't write any rules that I would follow, anyway. How stupid is it to do something on an adversary's terms?

I know it doesn't matter to you, and as far as I care you can say anything you want to me, but there is something I wanna tell you in the interest of clarity: It was not repeater jamming. It was a heated fight on the air with someone who admitted on the frequency to orgaizing an interference campaign. I identified myself by callsign at least 4 times in the 10-15 minutes I was on my soapbox. There was also no use of profanity, but I did belabor the arguement long enough and heatedly enough that Riley was a bit perturbed. Now, I know the truth is not in your best interest in what you think is a campaign to smear or embarrass me, but it is nevertheless the truth. There are many local hams that heard the whole thing, and there is a recording of the incident. If you would like a peaceful exchange sometime, I would be happy to give you a copy. I don't think you could handle the truth, though.

You keyclowns make me laugh...any scrap of information you can get makes your mouths water with lust. I am in the public record, I knew that going in. It is you keyclowns that have to hide, not me. Your attempts to insult and defame my character only show the potency of the Anti-Keyclowns. Attack me in any form you want, it doesn't matter to me. You keyclowns do not understand that concept. Because YOU would smart and be pissed at the kinda stuff you try to pull and say about me, you think I would as well. That is a fundamentally flawed assumption about another person on all levels. In my case it does not a thing to my ego to be insulted and cursed by any one of you, or just about any other person on earth. keep it up...maybe you can make me laugh even harder.

You challenging me to a fight is the most ignorant thing I have ever heard. You don't know me, you think you know about me. I don't ever fight with anyone without knowing I am going to win from the jump. Mull that over, 1mangayboy. The only way you could take me is from ambush, which is probably what people like you do. I shake laughing at knowing where you or any one of you Bevises would end up if you were stupid assed enough to try.

Your eforts would be much better used in identifying the culprit of these posts, but if you wanna sit on your tuffet and blame me go right ahead. All it does is show how stupid you are and how you are obsessed with me. That is just more for me to laugh about and more proof of the low mentality of keyclowns.

I am sure you know how to do this as well, but here is a traceroute of the IP of the post that was supposed to be me offering to meet you. I will continue below it for a bit after you look at that.

Now, Stevie the boy genius...WHY could that poster NOT be me?
Hmmmmmmm?
DUHHHHHH...the ONLY ISP I have ever been booted from was AOL!
That was in early 2000. If I am banned on there then How am I posting from there. Case closed.

If you want to be effective against this individual why don't you and sharkie, and cranus and all the other keyclowns use your well developed ability to whine and cry a little better? Try abuse@aol.com or something like that, 'ay?

Now, like the sheepdog and the coyote in the old Warner Brother's cartoons, I punch back in on the clock in my role of keyclown slapping for amusement. You wanna be civilized that's fine. Don't matter to me one way or other, though.

I seriously doubt I'll get a reply from you anyway. If I do it will likely be a smut filled, angry diatribe. That's also fine.
I need laughs, so feel free. We know you are not attached to the truth if a lie helps you start some more shit.

One request: Feel free to post this letter to the NG if you want, but wait until after you see the changes on QRZ.com. I hope you get this on Sunday, 'cuz I am going to post the change sometime Monday morning.

Having a great time, how about you??

Imagine your cell phone if it was designed to be repaired, and used only common components. It would be the size of a briefcase. Do you think cell phones would be popular if they had to be briefcase sized?

What about spectrum analyzers that needed to be contained in several 6 foot high rack cabinets?

Is the world better or worse now that a 100MHz oscilloscope can be made the size of a paper back book?

Man, you got fans all over the US Mopar ;-)
The other questions is why would

You don;t play by any rules. You make them up as you go along to suit yourself. It's why you were popped by the FCC for jamming repeaters.

>It was a heated fight on the air with someone

Fight? N8WWM/ Naaaaaaw! You mean your shining personality and effluent communication skills couldn't prevent you from reducing yourself? Sort of like the way you came into this forum,,all piss and vinegar until you were turned out and we all had our way with you and you were no longer any fun, just a mere mosquito that sometimes needs a fly swatter.

>who admitted on the frequency to orgaizing an >interference campaign.

LOL..all the proof one needs of your paranoid delusions!!!....hahhahahah! A CONSPIRACY against N8WWM? HARHARHAR...whoda' thunk it? You must be a real idiot to actually believe and share your warped fantasies. To actually believe that you are somehow important to another besides that poor woman whose reputation you are trashing forever, that an entire club would conspire to lie agaiinst you is the wildest thing you have said to date. Perhaps they tossed you off the repeater for talking that gay smack you are so fond of. See Dougie, several folks know the intimate details..you can lie through your porked belly, but as far as you caring, oh yes, you most certainly care, as you wouldn't be out here denying so vehemently what the FCC had on the rain report concerning your call sign. You were banished for acting,,,well, for acting like you always do, and as usual, you had the nenderthal knee-jerk reaction that you must retaliate because in your weak mind, it was you who was wronged. You're seriously tweaked.

>I identified myself by callsign at least 4 times >in the 10-15 minutes I was on my soapbox.

You are denying what the archives in the rain report say.

>There was also no use of profanity,

LOL..another one,,yea,, we can certainly believe that N8WWM uses NO PROFANITY! HAHAHAHHA! What a tumbling card!!!

>but I did belabor the arguement long enough

LOL........hahahhahha,,yea,,,'ol Riley used the FCC for his personal poitical beliefs because he disgareeed with your speech and wanted to silence you! (SCREAM)HAHHAHA HAHHAHAHAHAHHA..LOL! HAHHA...Oh ,my GOSH! HAHAH!

>Now, I know the truth is not in your best

HAHAHAH...YOU, are the only one that mentioned a conspiracy to smear you, law breaker! No one need a campaign to embarrass yourself, you manage quite well.
What delusions!!HAHHA!

>but it is nevertheless >the truth. There are many local hams that >heard the whole thing,

Yes there were,,,but NONE that share your version.

>and there is a recording >of the incident.

Damn straight there is. In fact, there are several. It's how the FCC determined you were guilty of deliberately jamming the repeater on not one, not two, not even three,,,but on many, many occasions. The fact that a single tape exists is not testament that you are innocent of the other logged law breaking incidents you committed. You were told to straighten up and fly right,,,,in fact you were inundated with offers and chances, but you continued to play radio and internet evil demi-God, needlessly harassing all those that you come in to contact with.....those retardations in communication skills prevent you from interacting normally. Remember those words that came back to bite you in the ass like nothing you ever knew before..."Watch what you ask for,,you just might get it." You're just pisses because you can no longer get away with such flagrant abuse. My favorite words to date on this group.."I'll make ya' famous!" HAHAHHAHHAHAHHA!

>If you would like a peaceful

>.exchange sometime, I would be happy to give

Especially since you are not capable of truth nor peace. If you were, you would have came into this group with a little respect for other folks. Just because someone is discussing an amp or dx does not make them a bad person, as your damaged gray matter has you believing. Cussing (very unpeaceful like) because you don't like the topic, and attacking the person for no reason, and telling lie after lie in this group, illustrates where you are in proportion to truth.

>You keyclowns make me laugh...

And you make the radio world gag!
Again, name a single hammie, as you claimed, that heard the entire incident and sides with yourself...go on, now...here's your last chance...LOL!

>any scrap of information you can get makes >your mouths water with lust. I am in the public

You knew nothing of the sort. You thought you were above the law and needed broght down a few notches...LOL. You had it coming and never has anyone more deservedly been busted.

>It is you

>keyclowns that have to hide, not me.

Sure sure sure,,,your intimidation of posting an valid email addy and inability to manage a single ISP for even a year's subscription is testament to the opposite.

>Your

>attempts to insult and defame my character

That's IMpotency, littel big man. You were the one popped, not any "keyclowns"...LOL.Try and remain clear about such matters.

>Attack me in any form you want, it doesn't

Oh, this is absolutely golden stuff we're extractingfrom you, Adair..absolutely golden!!

> Because YOU would smart and be pissed at Hahhaha,,,you try to forget that you are responsible for all your own misery. Never have I seen someone as ignorant as yourself in such denial.......you're actually believing that you were some type victim....LOL,,,HAHAHHAHAHHA...absolutely priceless!

>That is a fundamentally flawed assumption

Only,.....you have been unable to see where the laughter is coming from, Dougie,,,even though you hear it all around you, 360 degrees...LOL.

>You challenging me to a fight is the most >ignorant thing I have ever heard.

Hmmm,,actually, you coming in to this forum demanding respect because you had a paltry nocode license was the most ignorant thing some of US ever heard.

>You don't know me, you think you know about >me.

Again,,YOU began this little dance. If you lost weight, you wouldn't be so dead on your feet from the Tango and begging for intermission before resuming the Fox Trot! Must suck to be you and have such choices taken away from you, Dougie. You knew none of us in this forum, yet that did not prevent you from coming in here and posting homosexual related insults to everyone that laughed at you when you tried to appoint yourself forum moderator.

>I don't ever fight with anyone without knowing I

>but if you

>wanna sit on your tuffet and blame me go right

The FCC blamed you. As Frank said, once the FCC identifies you as breaking the law, that's it,,,you're guilty. Case closed.

>All it does is show how stupid you are and >how you are obsessed with me.

Actually, all it does is illustrate how obsessed and paranoid you are that you believe the world is out to get you with an organized conspiracy involving the FCC, Riley, repeater clubs and hammies across the land ......LOLL..Hoo boy!HAHAHAHH!HAHAHAHHHA!

>That is just more for me to laugh about and

Make no doubt, you have been blamed unfairly for some posts, I agree,,but you are one guilty nutha' sucka when it comes to jamming repeaters..the FCC says so and the radio world is more inclined to believe the FCC as opposed to one they busted that has a proven history laden with obscenities, unprovoked attacks, and a Tourrette-like fetish for speaking of homosexuals and same-sex acts all across usenet.

See, instead of just picking posts to reply to so you can troll, you should stick to things you know about and ignore posts that you don't have a useful answer for. If you had anything to add (such as an answer to my question), you would have understood what I meant when I called it a "handheld" CB.

The Cobra 75 is a "handheld", all in one mobile CB. It's not a "handie-talkie". Instead of a square unit that mounts in the car, with a microphone plugged into it, the Cobra 75 is a CB that you hold in your hand, a little bigger than a standard Motorola commercial mic. It's got the channel display, on/off, squelch and a bunch of other buttons on the unit. There's a coil-cord that leads to a small box, which can be mounted under dash, under a seat, or anywhere else, and the coax plugs into that. There's also a plug for an external speaker.

So, it's just like any other mobile CB, but it's more compact and doesn't require you to drill holes. Do a search on the net for it and you'll see what I mean.

So, back to my original question:

I've seen this radio advertised in overseas websites as "80 channels" and even as "AM/FM". Does anyone know if there's a mod to change it to either of these?

Most of the chips in cell phones are off the shelf parts, and there are places that do repair cell phones. RMS Communications in Ocala, Florida rebuilds thousands of pagers and cell phones every week. I know several techs who worked there, and they were telling me about the equipment they had available at each work station.

One problem with new RF and test equipment is the firmware programmed into chips isn't readily available to program replacement parts. Another problem is the short production life for some parts. If you build a product for over two years, you either do "Lifetime purchases", or redesign boards to use the next round of parts. What is real fun is a base product with up to 100 different sets of software, depending on the customers specifications. Its hard enough to keep it straight on the factory floor, let alone trying to do it in the field.

Most of the parts in a tek scope are off the shelf too, but like the cell phone, there are one or two show stoppers. For the cell phone, it is the microprocessor with its combination mask and flash programming.

I know a guy that repairs pagers, but you cannot convince me that it is a profitable business.... The way he moaned about the cost of my fixing his RF signal generator gives me a clue.

It is even worse in the space field, where by the time a part is qualified, and a satellite is made, the part is stone cold obsolete.

I need two 8-pin female Jones connectors with backshells and cable clamps. The pin pattern looks like this:

+-----------+
| | | -- -- | (best viewed in Courier 10 font)
| | | -- -- |
+-----------+

Cinch no longer makes them (I've checked their catalog). Used ones are fine, as long as they can be cleaned up and reused. Can you help?

Can anyone recommend a decent commercial vector network analyser and spectrum analyser that one can repair oneself if necessary and hopefully keep them up and running for ever?

HEHEHEHEHEH...hey twathead,

Go out on the internet and find one reference to repeater jamming. I don't have to defend myself to you or anyone, because there is no such reference. As for any local hams that might have heard the fuss last year and have a different opinion of what happened, produce the individual and produce his comments. As for any recording that exists, I know there is only one them and I know who made it, can you say that as well? Can you produce it? Not.

As for your comment that I demand respect...a hearty "nope" goes in that answer box. I could give a a shit less what a piece of garbage like you, or any keyclown for that matter, thinks of me. Your ego needs to feel that I do, but that does not change the truth.

As for the content of my posts, all I can tell you is if ya don't like 'em don't read 'em. Or you can select those that you think violate AUP's and report 'em. Who gives a shit what an infested, ate up Gomer Pyle like you does?

We say what is too much, not illegal operators or possesors of illegal equipment. If you are too ignorant to know what is legal and what is not then you deserve to get whacked.

We control the content of this NG, not keyclowns. We have forbidden amp auctions to be posted here. Keyclowns obediently ceased posting them.

We are nowhere near 100% elimination of illegal equipment sales on the internet, but each bust begins to add up. It is obvious by all the disingenuous lies that keyclown amp makers put on their ebay auctions...things like "Attention ebay, this auction complies with ebay community standards", etc.
See the fear of the AKC in that lie? They have experienced our stinging slap before, and will again.

Twathead and all of you other keyqweenz take note: You have not made one single dent in the existence of the AKC. The insults, etc., are water off of a duck's back. We control this NG, we make you dance, we rule you. You will bark and dance on command, as you have done for years, until we tell you to stop.

There is not one thing on this earth you can do about it, there is no way to silence the AKC. Insults won't do it, threats only strengthen us, ISP's are a nickel a pound, so that won't work either. Exposing our names won't work...we don't need to hide, YOU need to hide because you are federal criminals. Lying won't work: We don't care what you say about us, although obviously your bruised little keyqween egos care what we say about you.

Your world of blatant and unpunished criminality is forever changed by a ruling body known as the AKC. We have a few other tricks up our sleeves that are yet to be revealed, but when keyqweenz start dropping off the NG you may get a clue. You people are totally powerless to stop the AKC. The ONLY power keyqweenz have in this NG is what we might confer on them, and since we confer you no power because we do not care what you do...your pathetically mewling efforts amount to zip.

Going on 4 years later we still stand and RULE. Our karma runs over your dogma, keyqweenz.

Inventing me saying there was a conspiracy of any kind against me does not change the fact that what I typed had no mention of such.

I am waiting for you to post a sourced response to support your "repeater jamming" claim.

The purpose of initiating communication to moped is simple: If some true warped ass wackaloon, under disguise as me, DID actually meet him some where and busted a cap on his ass, who do you think would be under investigation? I will take all my own falls, and have. I won't be blamed for something of that nature I did not do.

Your inability to do anything but tell lies about me shows your anger, hatred, fear, and stupidity. That's fine. Amusing, actually. A demonstration of your submission to the AKC is welcome anytime. Do it some more.

As for the radio hobby itself, you and any keykween like you is not any part of such an entity. Your criminality is admitted, thus excluding you from that hobby. All keykweenz are is a buncha slimeballs that have to hide.

Now, asshole...let's see some proof of "repeater jamming". Must suck to be a lying ass Gomer Pyle, sawed off piece of trailer trash like you.

N8WWM

PS: Go worship my jock strap some more and contemplate the pickle that having no proof of your lies has now placed you in. After that, hit the truckstop and get busy...FUGGLY needs a new vibe.

"Having a great time, how about you?"

twistedhed@webtv.net (Twistedhed) danced on orders from the AKC in message news:<27516-3FB8EB21-368@storefull-2313.public.lawson.webtv.net>...

I bet you do know, cranus the anus. "Freeband" operators are slime, and so are you...who cares if they have a ham license or not...they are all slime. You keykweenz use that bit about hams going there too to try to negate your own guilt, that's all.

hmm, kind of like buying a computer ...in a few mounths it is obsolete...on the tektroix and hp stuff.......you would think that they would be feeling the heat from asia like everyone else.....just how much profit is there in a unit that sells new for $75,000.00? and why may i ask after 10 to 15 years it still sells for heavy cash....

The only reason you didn't eat the hook as far as meeting in real life goes is that I pointed out how frigging stupid you were. Your idiocy shines through as usual by not checking out the poster's IP.

Duuuuuuuuh.
Stupid ass...I aint afraid of shit...and tell ya the truth thats why I aint afraid of you, cuz you are shit. However, if some idiot decided they wanted to ventilate your hide I aint taking the blame. I won't go out and get into a fight over this silly shit. I will, however arrange a meeting with the creator for any person stupid enough to enter my premises.

I told you where I'll be in December, dweebfag...come on up and visit. If you have the balls.

When you look at the price of a $75,000 unit, consider this: First, the test equipment market is really rather small, nothing like the consumer electronics market, and second, bleeding edge technology test equipment requires some serious money to develop. Tektronix and HP have historically been positioned right in the front of the technology wave. So, a unit that sells for $75,000 may have cost $20 million to develop to where it could be manufactured. It probably only has a market life of 1000 units. Then the actual manufacture of the product costs something. A good round figure is the ratio of parts cost to sale price is 3x to 4x. Labor figures in at about equal to parts cost.

-20,000,000 to develop
-25,000 x 1000 units = -25,000,000 parts cost
-25,000 x 1000 units = -25,000,000 labor cost 75,000 x 1000 units = +75,000,000 sales price of instrument

Bottom line +$5,000,000

Take that $5 million, and subtract some for advertising, and service, and you haven't got much left.

Granted these numbers are just guesses, but I have been doing small quantity manufacture for a lot of years, and these kinds of ratios come up again and again.

As to why the Tektronix and HP stuff commands a high price in the used market, the reason is simple, the gear is high quality, has very high capabilities, and the price of a new replacement is also high.

No, mopedboy, the only "Exactly" here is that this particular troll led you by the fish hook for weeks, you always replying "Doug this",
"N8WWM that"...You, cranus the anus, and several other keykweenz all acting like a semi-retarded Greek Chorus...Most likely "greek" cuz we know you keykweenz like it "greek".

I loved the laffin' at you fags' reactions, but when the threats were made I had to put a stop to it. Much as I know you are a useless lawnboy truckstop troller, I need you alive so someone else can come along and show the whole group what a retarded mouth breather ya are.

You and your butt buddy cranus the anus were the object of weeks of loud laughs because you were blundering so totally unknowingly into the fish hook. If you could have read the emails that were exchanged about you kweenz you woulda died of mortification.

As usual, the AKC proves how stupid you are, and you provide 100% of the proof!
By the way, the thought of Moped standing alone in a wet marsh with his little cap pistol breaks me up too...But as I would not let a retarded child follow a friends instructions to play freeze tag on an interstate, I must also protect the retarded boy genius so he can provide even more years of 1mangayboyness.

Too stupid to read a header...goes on for WEEKS...hook, line, sinker...haw haw haw.

How was the Mustang's football season this year, by the way?

No homo-boy, it proves that you are too fukkin' stupid to read a header. You and your fellow anal fissure cranus the anus. You was OWNED, asshole. OWNED, OWNED, OWNED. Nothing you say or do changes that.

As for having my address, now there's a fukkin' accomplishment. God almighty, we are in AWE of your prowess at finding information from any one of several public databases. It proves, and this only possibly, that you can read at a 2nd grade level. It might be you had help. Show up in my doorway any time you want. I have only said that for what, almost 4 years?

You are the pusbag who has to hide. If I was worried about you I would have wiped you off my foot like dogshit long ago. Just imagine a hunk of dogshit on a shoe with waving arms and a gay mouth begging to suck, and always yammering "N8 this","Doug that". That's you Steviegayboy...that's you.

Any time you wanna come by feel free to do so. You can go for a ride in my HotRod Lincoln. That goes for any of you keyqueen scum bags.

My hamfest scedule for 2004 will be firmed up by the middle of next month, I'll letya know.

Every single effort you have made to stop the AKC has totally failed.
People too stupid to read headers shouldn't even try. But...You are too stupid to know you are stupid. Here we are, 4 years later...AKC still here...you still 1mangayboying it. Hehheheheh.

3258. The undeniable truth about rec.radio.cb

Here is the truth. It pisses off keykweenz, but who cares about keykweenz anyway?

We say what is too much, not illegal operators or possesors of illegal equipment. If you are too ignorant to know what is legal and what is not then you deserve to get whacked.

We control the content of this NG, not keyclowns. We have forbidden amp auctions to be posted here. Keyclowns obediently ceased posting them.

We are nowhere near 100% elimination of illegal equipment sales on the internet, but each bust begins to add up. It is obvious by all the disingenuous lies that keyclown amp makers put on their ebay auctions...things like "Attention ebay, this auction complies with ebay community standards", etc.
See the fear of the AKC in that lie? They have experienced our stinging slap before, and will again.

Twathead and all of you other keyqweenz take note: You have not made one single dent in the existence of the AKC. The insults, etc., are water off of a duck's back. We control this NG, we make you dance, we rule you. You will bark and dance on command, as you have done for years, until we tell you to stop.

There is not one thing on this earth you can do about it, there is no way to silence the AKC. Insults won't do it, threats only strengthen us, ISP's are a nickel a pound, so that won't work either. Exposing our names won't work...we don't need to hide, YOU need to hide because you are federal criminals. Lying won't work: We don't care what you say about us, although obviously your bruised little keyqween egos care what we say about you.

Your world of blatant and unpunished criminality is forever changed by a ruling body known as the AKC. We have a few other tricks up our sleeves that are yet to be revealed, but when keyqweenz start dropping off the NG you may get a clue. You people are totally powerless to stop the AKC. The ONLY power keyqweenz have in this NG is what we might confer on them, and since we confer you no power because we do not care what you do...your pathetically mewling efforts amount to zip.

Going on 4 years later we still stand and RULE. Our karma runs over your dogma, keyqweenz.

Believe what you want, but the place has around 100 employees, and was looking at buying the old L3-Com/Microdyne complex to expand into its 120,000+ square feet of buildings and acres of land for parking.

They are bigger than Microdyne was when it closed the complex and moved to Pennsylvania. If there is no money in repairing pager and cell phones, why do they want to buy property which is priced at 1.6 million dollars? Here is the listing for the complex:

10 meters is quite dependent on the status of the sunspot cycle. When the solar flux is good, the band is indeed heavily used but when the flux is down, it won't support long distance communications.

I'm done with this whole affair now that I've sold the HR2600 radio in question. A very educational and actually quite interesting discussion this has been. In closing I'd just like to say that there are still very many hams out there who have lent me a helping hand with many constructive comments. I've received quite a few emails from hams genuinely trying to help me with my questions. Thank You.
There have also been a few (I don't know if they are hams or not since the dissenters usually won't post their callsigns) who have voiced their opinions as well. Thank You for those opinions also. It's helped me understand what all the fuss is about and the roots of the militant anti-freebanders. AND is a celebration of free speech. I say let it roll everybody and let's try to learn as much as we can from one another. But remember the old saying "divide and conquor."
There's not that many people coming into any form of radio hobby anymore, and all the in-fighting will help no one in the end, when we wake up and all our radio spectrum has been taken from all of us.

Let's pick our battles carefully. To the freebanders, I say get your ham license, to the hams I say open your hearts and minds to everyone who shows an interest in radio and being a good operator, including more than a few freebanders who fall in this category. And together we might just get the 11 meter band back. At the very least we'll protect the spectrum we've got.

I'm not trying to be difficult Michael. The reason I have trouble seeing how this is a money making venture is the low price of cell phones and pagers. When a Cell phone lists for $99, how much time can a technician really spend fixing it?

In the repair business, the maximum repair price you can charge a customer has to be less than 40% of the cost of new, or they will always walk away. If they walk away, and give you their phones for free, then perhaps you could make a little bit fixing it and selling it, but really, now, tracphone sells refurbished nokia 5185i's for $39. There is not much margine in that.

Who pays for the time necessary for the technician to open the phone, diagnose the problem, unsolder the offending module, test the phone, reassemble, and pack? You would have to pay your technicians less than $10 per hour!

If you are implying that people, who hold ham licenses, should be somehow held to a higher moral standard than be faulty logic. A ham license is only a "permit" to use radio, it is not a

It is run like a factory, not one up repairs. That makes a huge difference. The techs don't disassemble the units. the production people do a quick test, clean up the cases, and send the boards to be repaired.
A lot of repairs are new crystals, or reprogramming the synthesizer, or replacing a bad LCD display which is done before a tech sees it.

Also, they do large runs of the same unit, then do a different model.
Also, some only need a few pieces of the case replaced, and the password cracked so it can be reprogrammed in the field.

They have service contracts where someone ships a 1000 pagers or 100 cell phones and they repair what they can in a fixed time. They either return the bad units, or replace them with their own stock of repaired units, depending on the contract. they also repair a lot of older models and sell them overseas.

This is a CB crystal set that was used in some early 23-channel radios. The vast majority used wire-leaded crystals, but radios that used plug-in crystals are not uncommon.

If you have an accurate frequency counter and can verify that they have not drifted over the years, they might be worth a few dollars to someone interested in those old radios.

We were talking about repair and service equipment, not consumer items. A consumer item is expected to have a short life-cycle, and repairability is often not a concern.

I never saw "multi-six-foot-rack analyzers"; the oldest & biggest I can recall were Singer FIM analyzers, which were about 24" wide by 30" tall and deep, and took four guys to move them (and the plug-in RF heads were a one-man lift!). OTOH, everything inside was reachable and easily repairable.

If that 100 MHz scope can be built to have a reasonable cost to lifetime ratio, then it could be considered a consumer item, and a non-repairable investment. But to me, if I have to pay $10k or more for a piece of test equipment, it had better last quite a few years and allow me to do re-calibration and even moderately severe repair.

A very good analyzer series, but generally still priced out of the hobbyist market. Reasonably portable, and ruggedly built. Performance is generally a bit lower than the 856x series, but still very respectable. Much more useful than a hobbyist-affordable 141 analyzer, and easier and more versatile than an older 8569 analyzer. Unless your needs are exotic, the 859x series will be a good industrial choice.

For the spectrum analyzer part, the best a hobbyist can usually afford is an HP-141, with a few plug-ins (IIRC, they offered a total of 6, collect the whole set!). And you will need the HP manuals (some of which are available free from the US Army LOGSA site). And you will need some other basic and decent lab gear (scope, counter, DMM, sig gens) to do the job right.

Sorry, but I can't comment on any Network Analyzers.

If you cannot see the relationship, then you need to stretch a bit.

Everything in electronics, test equipment especially has grown in complexity and performance, as it has been reduced in size. Some of the reductions are there to make it possible to fit more test equipment in a given space, and some are there because of necessities of the new technology (eg. microwave speeds and low power consumption are better done with tiny sized components.)

Was your life, as a technician that is, made better or worse when that same 4 man lift SA was reduced to one that you could carry yourself with one hand, while carrying your 1G scope with the other?

How about performance? Did it help you to have the bandwidth limit of your old 4 man lift SA rise from 1GHz to 300GHz? How about your 30MHz scope that is now 1GHz? Did you notice that the prices went DOWN?

How about the heat generation? Have you ever worked in a lab that had no effective air conditioning, and also had a herd of Tek 500 series scopes whirring away?.. in the middle of the summer? I have, and I am quite happy not to do it anymore. We saw temperatures as high as 120F at times. No windows, one door, lots of fans. Turn off the equipment, and the AC did quite fine.

And finally, how about the space savings? Does it help you or hurt you to recapture that floor space the old SA, and scope, and signal generator used?

Tiny little custom component ridden hard to service test equipment made it possible to move away from that kind of scene.

All of the $10K+ stuff I have seen from HP or Tek would easily meet your needs. Calibration? You cannot be serious. Most of this stuff is so finely calibrated that it would be beyond the capabilities of anything but an expert calibration lab to accomplish the task. Just having the standards necessary takes a whole lab... and a whole budget. I know this because I tried to set up a NIST traceable cal lab for my business, and eventually concluded that for me to do that, cal would have to become my exclusive business. I still have all the standards and equipment, but no time to put them to use... No money to keep them in cert with NIST. It is FAR cheaper to send the stuff out and get it calibrated.

The "consumer grade" goodies in the test equipment market don't really need more than a simple calibration checking. I cannot tell you the last time my little Fluke DVM needed recalibration... Because it is 15 years old, and it has NEVER needed recalibration. Has something to do with the little fidgety custom components that are inside it. Same goes for my Tek 2465 scope.

Actually, being a ham myself, I find the 10-10 club very disgusting. All they seem to want to do from my observations, is collect numbers! If you don't have one, they won't talk. I was even told once by one of them, if you don't have a 10-10 number, I don't have time to talk to you. WHAT THE HELL KIND OF FUN IS THAT? That turned me OFF of even thinking about joining that organization. When I get on the air, I like to chat a while and have had many good ones in my days. Any ass hole can collect numbers, how about carrying on a conversation? OR is that beneath their ability? I realize there are several contests out there to try for even if only self gratification, but when it condones ignorance, then they can stick the contests up their ass. I NEVER turned down a chat with anyone who called out my call sign. The only reason I'm not on the air now though is because I've been waiting to move. Once I do that, then I'll be back in the saddle again. I love chatting to all I am able to. Also, on 1 meters, I know many who've made as many contacts as I have on 10 meters. I say - ENJOY! G.W.

GET BUSH

Officers fault air strategy as ‘timid‘
<http://www.freerepublic.com/focus/f-news/842417/posts>

/ / Jim Wilkinson, director of strategic communications at Central Command, responded by saying, "We don't discuss plan specifics for reasons of operational security. However, I can tell you the plan is comprehensive, modern and flexible, and Gen. FRANKS continues to work closely with all the services." \ \

...The officers said the plan deviates in significant ways from the 1991 38-day air campaign during Operation Desert Storm, in which telephone communications, power systems and bridges were targeted from the first day to isolate Saddam Hussein and his military forces.

The reason for the change: The Bush administration wants to spare hardships to Iraqi civilians and to show that the real target of the bombing campaign is Saddam. \ \

GET BUSH

So, to IRRATIONALLY target the telephone exchanges, power grids, water dams, pipe lines, and residential communities with thousands of toxic, radio-active cluster bombs to blindly murder a person like You, (that would later, blow up nazi bushite soldiers by landmine), would be considered TRULY evil by demon bush standards too?

Why does Johnny call the huge war criminal traitors puny dumfuk bushite soldiers? They die truly as cowards for the demon bush liar, being enemies of God and Humanity, because prior to the war, (as outlined on March 7th), we had completely unrestricted access to go wherever in Iraq, without delay. So, demon bush sabotaged America's ability to effectively disarm Iraq, and to bring peaceably, freedom in the region through JUST causes, all so he could STEAL further the lives of AMERICANS by continuing with his murder rampages against the innocent. We remember, Saddam offered the demon antiChrist, Our Mr. bush Jr. unfettered access to the Iraqi national media to preach his deceit against God and Humanity freely, but bush refused to publicly condemn Universal health care and education, along with what has been described as Humanity's greatest food distribution network. Instead, bush sacrifices bushite soldiers to steal OUR Humanitarian Aid, to double pay commi Halliburton, an american company found repeatedly by Our ARMED Police agencies, defrauding all Americans in criminal contempt for the People payers. All the while condoning the torture and enslavement of those known innocent still, but beyond american borders as our Humanity. Morally equating the rest of Humanity outside of Universal Justice as US fairly represented? Mr. bush tells God his plan is to victimize Humanity in America's name, by hiding behind who's flag again?

Destroy the war criminating, unarrested American cop killer, our offensive Mr. bush Jr. instead my friend, and be thanked by God in person.

Look, Mr. bush, rumsfeld, and franks have STOLEN food and medicine from Iraqi children by confiscating "Saddam's Money", and, it is now publicly understood that tommy franks, sabotaged the ORHA plan to create insecurity and chaos so to rob the central bank of billions. For tommy and his private banker friends to do this, he as a bushite had to sacrifice the lives of LEADERLESS American Soldiers as too weak and cowardly to say, "For God's sake, I'll wise up and destroy bush and rumsfeld myself instead to defend my loyal Brothers and Sisters I will, till the end, giving of everything for a life worth living", at least that is what a truly proud American Patriot who fights gloriously for a just battle as the good guys would. Instead as the dishonorable bushites, robbing blindly themselves and their own dying brethren, while bombing our homes with radio-active toxic waste, that contains among other things, deadly plutonium. Enemies of God as the bushite disciples.

Wow! Wouldn't it be cool if America stoop UP and destroyed the war criminals bush and rumsfeld by simple supernatural Human Will power?

Tough luck so far for corporate news america continue to slog that America is so ungodly stupid as the uninformed, and have never heard of this Johnny Wizard artist taking center stage as makeshift creator antiChrist demon slayer.

Of course we should not forget to mention again, in addition, like the same, Saddam offered the demon antiChrist, Our Mr. bush Jr. unfettered access to the Iraqi national media to preach his deceit against God and Humanity freely, but bush refused, so too just like CNN and CBC censors do today by refusing communicating community interaction on our top priority war issues. Instead, we must, they claim, continue sacrificing bushite soldiers to steal Humanitarian Aid, to then double pay commi Halliburton, or WorldCom; companies found repeatedly defrauding all Americans in criminal contempt for the dying American tax payers. All the while watching now in real horror, as bush OPENLY steals almost all of the National Iraqi assets for his private auctions, but for the exception of the already claimed, iraqi Halliburton oil reserves. Why?, Ho ho ho, because, he said so, in writing. 13303 states bush is the lawless demon from scriptural references, and why Christians don't stand in service for the cried mercy begged from God, the Son, and Humanity, I'll never understand, but Johnny'll tell You, he's gonna march home even if it means I'll do it all by my lonesome. My soul isn't for sale, nor are my righteous Universal principles stealable as a true Human defender to the last bushite standing who foolishly would choose to be my mortal enemy.

To my friends in Iraq, don't let corporate american media divide yourselves from community as equal participators. An Iraqi, is foremost, a member of our Humanity, and just like the rest of US, hate the God betraying anti-American demon antiChrist bush, more than anything else in the Universe for persecuting the innocent while killing coppers to steal our assets undefended without a leader to speak out everywhere for our living rights included. HUNDREDS, if not thousands of American soldiers have already DIED in Iraq stupidly as evil nazi vermin, GAME OVER MAN, for nothing but their cowardly ignorance on our ability to communicate FREELY for Freedoms thought died for already. Dying for bush as too cowardly to protect themselves as their own friends, and sacrificing families they silently watch criminally plundered further by their leaderless inaction on truly protecting America. Again, bush isn't America, America is America.

Justice for all, and let's name this time our own with my writing as a make believe King of Kings who's done it all already, just for the fun of it, whatdoyasay? Imagine this on a CNN spot speaking for our Justice as an equal to all beings, and like, wouldn't that be super interesting for everybody as the unjustly suffering and dying as victims under the demon bush dictates of criminal enslavement and global tyranny?

Christ, take care of yourself by killing bush, please?

Your true friend,
Johnny Wizard

P.S. Look for Johnny Wizard freely discussed world-wide through Google 'groups' us.military.army, and awesomeness.

as Christ say every single individual has the equal born right inherent as existence eternal dictates, not only because I'm naturally a caring, compassionate person familiar with physics, but also because it does me well for my freedom to be all I can. For in this struggle of living, I foresee great potentials, not only for myself having fancy dinners and super big parties, but also for the realms of knowledge I'm familiar with ourselves neglecting, and how many important issues go unresolved due to doubters who dismiss actual experts in areas such as understood sciences that need our utmost immediate attention, motivating me to do anything possible to make this place a better world on behalf of everyone, that of which, to resolve, only lacks a lounge act King, who as should be, me, because here I am to crown myself standing this way forever dreaming. Plus, believing I'm actually trying to help this big old clunker of a Universe as I understand fairly well as friendly, really makes it an extra special bonus for the planet and everything, as long as our world isn't completely decimated by the bushmob, due to the general masses having absolutely no interest in understanding themselves. I don't have any interest in what others do with their freedom, other than deny ourselves to do likewise. If a nation commits a crime against my freedom as a individual, of which I know as a god to be equally represented through everything, an innocent person murdered effects me personally, especially when it's advocated in a public forum where freedom is advertised, but obviously not present, there is where my voice demands by RIGHT to be in defence of all innocence, (big G 6 power) such as is my eternal struggle for freedom in my own name of John. (I'm in the book.) I wouldn't kill everyone in the country, or police officers as bush would advise, but demand the perpetrator to be corrected, chastised, insulted, arrested, or shot smiling as my two year John is crazy mad about bush the nazi tyrant murderer, has manifest ourselves this way. Freedom is only garnered through Justice for all equally. \ \

/ / I am here guised as our fabled archetypical, self made hero zero, as a living proclamation to you. That you too, are an infinitely complex multi-dimensional eternal living universe. That answers a question that can not be asked. That we have made it by nothing short of our own will to want to try and take up the offering. Becoming our own adventure to the future. With help offered by ourselves as the universe, because we all do love life really. Working to have as many as possible, time to do whatever we want. In a universe who's cause is to celebrate life as best we can, a gift that is never ending. With plenty of surprises and pitfalls along the way. Therefore, never ever lose faith in yourself, and in all you can accomplish. Count on yourself to always be here with you helping to make your dreams come true within reason. I can't wait to fly like a eagle! Most of this is easier done than said. I have learned that kindness is good, and cruelty is bad. Truth is knowledge, and knowledge is power. I am your creator that you have created! You! Right here! Words! Sitting at seven trillion years as the present and counting. This is just the tip of an iceberg, in a deep huge ocean, on a planet called earth that circles a sun. In the milky way galaxy containing billions, and billions of even more just like it, in a universe of universes that are bigger than forever. Of such immense girth, mass and energy, it can all be found alive and dancing in the period at the end of this sentence. Da Da! You don't really believe in all this now do you? How did you do it all like that really? You are now officially born a fool among the fools of creation. Thank yourselves. We win. Now I can get some much needed rest, by putting faith in you to help ourselves up. By waking up and smelling the coffee. If you now know for almost certain that our entire human civilization is being directly used to kill innocent people, including your neighbor, by a handful of the the most vilest excuses for hell barely living, scared stupid and shaking, shouldn't you have already something to say to your congressman, or getting the facts on CNN especially. How long must we tolerate this abuse by taking our crime. Or are you just a lily livered coward, who blames me for your excuses for killing yourself. Or making fun of others who are thinking, while lashing at who ever they tell you to because it's easier to play the role the nazi bank buildings and disorganized crime has you in for. It is safe to say, we, the people of all nations, are now officially the good guys and only one last step from calling ourselves the worlds saviors, by just counting ourselves in to help our politicians. Does this now mean we are better than those who would think that we were not? Things that make you go hmmm... As for the rest of ya, carry on as you were. Yawn. Then if by some unforeseen moment we find ourselves at an end, in a far distant future or tomorrow, alone without nothing, ourselves or any friends. Never ever being here or never ever even then. I'm sure it would be to a great big bang of laughter for being so foolish and not the wiser. Then maybe we would cry for nothing, laugh at our expense for listening, and start the whole thing all over. Only this time it would be funnier. I'm playing Jesus Christ for real! With the crafted success we have coming from our art departments, maybe all we have to do is make sure everyone knows their basic arithmetic and encourage politicians to sing or play instruments during recess. Just might work. This mythical journey of self discovery is based on the dreams and aspirations of others, where the only thing holding us back is ourselves. If there is one thing we can all be absolutely sure of, it is that the true spirit of mankind shall prevail. \ \

Some Johnny splats:

/ / Don't forget, Our Mr. bush Jr. also participated directly with the 9/11 strategy's, top secret Presidential Directive, of offering no evidence against Bin regarding some crime that wasn't galvanizing the world like the lucky, World Trade Center incidents did in time sensibly. Without 9/11, what would Powell look like from when in August he gave the Taliban 43 million, to then in September, going after those that funded the Justice supporters? How? And, where is the Saddam money gone for the food shipments?! Our Mr. bush Jr.

regarding the ownership of said monies he has stolen

/ / So, well.. that demon bush doesn't seem to want to stop murdering US for his own personal criminal exploits with rumsfeld, eh? One bomb-shell after another depicts the demon bush as a traitor to everything the American reporting impartially on behalf of the neglected suffering American soldiers falling DEAD as expendable?

being NEEDLESSLY contaminated by radioactive nuclear waste to further profit from de-valuating THEIR own ACTUAL stolen lives dying? Corporate american soldiers being left measured as valueless, along with a few thousand generations of our victimized families?, weighed unworthy to the huge corporate savings of recklessly dumping hazardous waste on US all as Humanity for the bushmob to sinisterly smirk as Our enemies?
Enemies of my Father who Art in Heaven? Or, is ALL of America just as CNN illustrates by censorship and the propaganda of silence in contempt, infested with pervasive cultist bushwhore nazi irrationalisms, truly dying cowards sacrificing their OWN brethren for the evil bush demon to further plunder God as all People? \ \

(an oldie but a goodie)

All for our ability to communicate freely

There is one thing that is strangely absent from our news coverage as unbiased bushwhores who are actually devaluing under the tyranny of the evil antiChrist, Our Mr. Bush Jr., and that is..

Blix nor Elbaradei, nor Kofi, suggested, implied, or stated, that Iraq had failed to comply with the newest U.N. resolution: 1441.

I think Patriot Americans would be thankful for Canadian friends and family who are supporting American troops by pointing out with no contention but for censorship, that American soldiers are being sacrificed for no known good reason under the demon antiChrist, Our Mr. Bush Jr., again. The bushites tell US they wish to bring freedom on the premise that Saddam wasn't dis-arming or cooperating with US, a naked blatant lie, an attempt to excuse bush's murder rampages as a terrorist against Our families as the innocent, Ourselves represented by thieves that are doing US harm by stealing our value.

HANS BLIX: "And at this juncture, we are able to perform professional no-notice inspections all over Iraq and to increase aerial surveillance..."

Does a bushwhore devolving society where we murder ourselves on irrational suspicions to steal our worths to give to the bushmob as victims, sound like a bad preposition to you too friend? What is bush's panacea of packaged eternal freedom absent Justice mean truly as measured to you judged unfairly as the general Public unawares? How EXACTLY is the bushmob going to liberate the oppressed and disenfranchised without expressing public knowledge on the subject on indivisibility? See? If bush actually had evidence to truly believe Saddam does in our present day have control as in political possession, weapons of mass destruction, sold to Saddam illegally by America to gas the enemy with the then, full blessings from the great satan, bush would have provided as such to the UN to be legitimately concerned for "The People" in Uzbekistan included, right? He would need to know where abouts he comes to understand so, no? Mr. Bush Jr. couldn't be sure enough otherwise to toss cowardly American soldiers as worthless without meanings, to be sacrificed as he is doing for financial private profit paid for by the victimized public, could he? Soldiers so valueless to Bill Hemmer, to not even speak out for themselves dying at CNN headquarters. See, Bill knows bush's private business partner, Amad, provided funding to 9/11's Atta, to criminally secure Enron's pipeline through Afghanistan by murdering highly successful American business people. But we can suppose Bill is scared as a cowardly unAmerican bushwhore, and would rather see the true evil doers hiding in America behind the flag, get away un-apprehended to further toll good Americans for sacrifice.

All the actual evidence we have concludes, Iraq worked directly to have the stock piles of WMD destroyed, provided the paper work, the destruction sites, and the individuals involved in that process. Inspectors had 100 percent access, to go anywhere bush, the false accuser might suggest without having to murder anyone from our family. Now, the disarmament process has been sabotaged, and the terrorist threat against America has increased. So, Iraq was in compliance, and because of that, the bush demon, in violation of article 2 of the UN Charter, has murdered thousands with war crimes as a terrorist recruiter. Making matters worse, incompetent bush even had an opportunity to liberate Our Iraqi family on world wide television, with what he and tommy franks would fantasize for our ailing economy by someone else to do the clean up chores. But, is it the Universal health or educational system, or public banking in Iraq that is not down to par as the american nazi fancy that bothers bush so much?, such as laws against discrimination for all persons, and evidential findings being a requirement to determine the measurement of Freedom for Justice to work. The People in Uzbekistan, are the People in Iraq, are too the People in America where Ashcroft and rumsfeld tell US publicly, they wish to factually deprive Justice for ourselves as equals. When questioned, both, Ashcroft and rumsfeld have reiterated the demand that foreigners, like illegally tortured innocent prisoners, don't deserve the same protections that the American Bill of Rights grants to all People, therefor, they as bushwhores wish to treat others unjustly by letting themselves, as would be nazi criminals, get away unpunished in devolving bush's america. Right? American war criminals are treated too good by the bush administration in all honesty then? Karma is real world existence, as life is politics ordered through chaos. If the right is Just as organized deduction, the system would treat all as equal principles. But again, bush spew Iraq could be prosecuted for destroying their own infrastructure, but those same laws don't apply to him being above God, or anyone else in his administration of wrong doers. It was on publicly verifying the Justice process when the bushmob, as war criminals, turned against the UN, indeed the world community, and began murdering our families globally as war criminals with depleted uranium dust for the next 4 million years or so as bush victims, who will die suffering the criminal bushite assault for generations, if an American Patriot victim were man enough to execute the unarrested American cop killer, our Mr. Bush Jr. yesterday. If bush isn't even destroyed by the Love for Life in godless talkradio america, he, as demon will as MSNBC reported, unjustly continue to murder millions in sixty countries as the Son of Man's enemy being the antiChrist, the most hated and despised excuse for human existence this planet will ever know factually. Just ask Buddha. While the demon bush supporters, who advocate blindly murdering our families like US teachers and students through the censorship of our screams for Justice as Humanity, who also advocate poisoning American soldiers with cancer and warmed soft drinks, would only simply tell us cheaply, it is because their false deity bush, secretly knows better than everybody else put together, including the FBI and CIA, (Better than the mighty You even on everything?), therefor, they don't have to THINK(!!!) And see?, alas, the mindless bushwhore SLAVES neglect to mention as chatty personal failures grasping for the authority of blind generalized denouncements of our unique, independent selves, that when their bush demon does go public in their devoted namesake, (what with bush's evidence Saddam was six months away from owning a nuke, Laden and Saddam soirees, or Saddam gassed his own people) he, as demon antiChrist, exposes his true contempt for human life while falling as traitor protected by the always doubtful, intolerant, ignorant, cowardly and criminal, as censor advocates to stop life's will. I've been telling loyal dumb functionally illiterate Police officers and Soldiers to destroy the two prime 9/11 suspects, the unarrested, bush and rumsfeld, ever since the bushmob declared Omar's interest in nabbing the 9/11 suspects by following the criminal leads, as a hatred for American Freedom unthinking, and then continued on to murder approximately 100,000 innocent people in Afghanistan, now with the lucky survivors left worst still off, with bush's commitment to not offer any aid in nourishment, but as terrorist students, heroin dealers, or Enron propagandists left forgotten by American, er... CNN interests as dictated through bush ratings.

MOHAMED ELBARADEI: "At this stage, the following can be stated: One, there is no indication of resumed nuclear activities in those buildings that were identified through the use of satellite imagery as being reconstructed or newly erected since 1998, nor any indication of nuclear-related prohibited activities at any inspected sites. Second, there is no indication that Iraq has attempted to import uranium since 1990. Three, there is no indication that Iraq has attempted to import aluminum tubes for use in centrifuge enrichment. After three months of intrusive inspections, we have to date found no evidence or plausible indication of the revival of a nuclear weapon program in Iraq."

Now we witness american nazi soldiers using Iraqi human shields just outside of Basra, committing further war crimes by blowing up powerplants, residential buildings, and bombing surrendering Iraq forces lying dead in a ditch with white flags sticking up. Indiscriminately murdering US good honorable people, and for what? When the nazi soldiers finally stop murdering our families irrationally as criminals, then what? If the nazi bushwhores know the dictums for Freedom, why don't they express them now instead of unjustly hurting God as all people? These bushwhore acts are crimes against ALL PEOPLES, and should be recognized publicly a such. The evil bushwhores can't vocalize their mindless support as cowardly betrayers to the human cause, and instead, censor our voices on the public airwaves while they freely propagandize our communities on the benefits of pillage and murder as terrorists under the antiChrist, Our Mr. Bush Jr... The war profiteers have already taken billions from the American People. Cost is paid by the uneducated illiterate tax payers as collateral damaged, and the war profits go into the private pockets of the smirking bush mobsters while killing dumbfuked american soldiers, as traitors to the American cause, freedom and Justice for all. God's son as creator included. Anyone who supports evil bush's war crimes against our family by censorship, then murder, is the enemy of America, and on all that she stands strong united by God unheard from still suffering.

I am,

Johnny Wizard

/ / Is the U.S. military committing war crimes? Who will hold Lt. Col. Steven Russell et al. responsible? Under international laws, it is a war crime to punish Iraqi civilians for the Iraqi resistance downing U.S. military helicopter(s). \ \

You know what is right, though you still may be blind, it's never too late to change your mind,
we're all in agreement, in truth we rise, evil is just the deceived disguised

So your living in Tikrit, and some antiChrist disciple drops several bombs in your neighborhood, that purposefully murders your good brother among others. Then, when asked why, the godless bushite brethren proclaim, they wanted to teach US a forgotten lesson that ANY real man would destroy an attacking bushite soldier to protect their innocent family. They are true enemies to themselves, just begging YOU, as Humanity to truly love Iraq. They proudly PUBLICLY proclaim their intentions to target blindly the innocent in Iraq to murder everyone, while wearing the official bushite uniform as targets, being antiChrist disciples.

Senator Trent Lott (Republican, Mississippi), "If we have to, we just mow the whole place down, see what happens. You're dealing with insane suicide bombers who are killing our people and we need to be very aggressive in taking them out."

Arrest Trent Lott for inciting war crimes, or shoot him good as dead where he wobbles as an enemy of America, God and Humanity.

If viral invader Trent Lott murdered your family by military order committed by a cowardly mindless bushite soldier, would not ANYONE, from ANYWHERE, as a REAL MAN or WOMAN, destroy the evil nazi parasite first, if you had the choice and the will to stand up for yourself, I mean, to be godly as humane? In protection of the innocent? As believers in God? Or Human biology?

These IDENTIFIABLE nazi war criminals volunteer to serve and die for the American cop killer bush, and could almost easily go home, or fight truly for freedom by taking out bremer, instead of murdering US Iraqis to steal HUMANITARIAN AID destined to help the poor and near starving, to criminally pay commi billionaires Halliburton, who will double charge to import oil on military convoys containing military transportation units. (Does anyone there even officially wear a, not bullet proof Halliburton cap to continue robbing Humanity blind as profitably expendable being measured worthless without meanings? I doubt it. The hundreds of millions they have already taken is STOLEN from American Soldier grand parents included.) These bushite soldiers are dying parasites victimizing Humanity, too weak, stupid, and cowardly to protect American principles, such as they are, leaderlessly robbing themselves of equal representation, just asking You or God to take some action to defend ourselves.

Again, CNN and CBC corporate management are truly killing US as Our enemies, by intentionally refusing to air our top priority evidentiary findings made public by our police agencies. I've personally contacted almost all top executives of both agencies who say nothing in your defense, nor in the FBI, but continue with censorship against all police officers, and the will of our Nations. The demon bush, with rumsfeld and General Ahmad committed the crimes of 9/11, all planned before hand as fully documented.

ABCNEWS.com : Claim: U.S. Spurned Peace Talks
<http://abcnews.go.com/sections/WNT/World/hage031105-1.html>

Now, after learning prior to the war, the Saddam regime offered the oil reserves to be plundered for Halliburton and Dutch-Shell, along with nazi GIs promised they could have the run of the place to steal other things, if they would only not also criminally bomb the innocent with thousands of toxic bombs that destroyed vital public infrastructure and the innocent lives of tens of thousands, the bushmob left saying no, not good enough. For the bushmob secretly couldn't rob the Iraqi Central Bank in the PLANNED looting instituted by war criminal traitor franks, (tommy franks had to destroy the American ORHA plan to succeed with his treasonous treachery in robbing the central bank, and that is why DYING leaderless soldiers did nothing to protect the museums or nuclear facilities either while encouraging looting and carnage.) along with stealing the lives and savings of armed American citizens under that arrangement. Get bush now Patriot.

/ / "Should Saddam Hussein choose confrontation, the American people can know that every measure has been taken to avoid war." \ \

What could Saddam have done that he didn't? Demon antiChrist bush wagers Christ, as the Son of Man should be defenselessly plundered for war criminal purposes, I say again, fuck you, GET BUSH NOW American Patriot Soldier and be loved by all as God would.

Our Mr. bush Jr. - "War has no certainty, except the certainty of sacrifice."

As I wrote then, what actually does bush want besides to rob and murder Iraqis as Christian, included along with all God interests devalued as inhuman? What can the war starting profiteer demon bush do now that so many good people have been murdered, that he couldn't do before the nazi SS monster buford blount, sacrificed a single child as an enemy to US all? WHAT?

What was it about Universal health care, education, and banking (where NO interest was charged on good outstanding loans), that bush publicly has a contention with in MY America's name pirated? What was it about funding the likes of Uzbekistan's terrorist government, or as the Likud? Or torturing the innocent to death like at Guantanamo? Denying an accused an opportunity to face their accuser in a public court of Law to protect Freedom and Justice, while demanding that criminal leads will not be followed to arrest the prime 9/11 suspects, is what bush is all about in honesty, a cop killer.

Now, corporate americans criticize frantic efforts made to avoid mass murder with war crimes such as thousands of tons of toxic waste, because it is said, the Saddam regime tried to use every channel possible, but not good enough for rotten rumsfeld's CNN, BBC, and CBC though, hiding the US from perpetrating the mass murder of thousands of New Yorkers as many corporately established already.

Washington rejected sweeping Iraqi concessions on eve of war
<http://www.wsws.org/articles/2003/nov2003/iraq-n07.shtml>

/ / After military action had begun, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld claimed that Washington had exhausted every other means. "The American people can take comfort in knowing that their country has done everything humanly possible to avoid war and to secure Iraq's peaceful disarmament," \ \

Fuk, what a traitor. Saddam wasn't found in breach of 1441, but bush and rumsfeld were, with their criminal unilateral war actions against the innocent. Knowing Annan would likely refuse to speak for the UN as officially represented. We had unrestricted access to go anywhere throughout Iraq without delay as the Justice League. But see? When contacting CNN and CBC, management included, why was it at the time, that THEY continue to this day refusing to inform our populaces, or broadcast any calls regarding the unbiased neutral facts impartially on behalf of everyone? They say nothing but continue to hope you'll suffer from your screams for Justice censored. We as the concerned and victimized, are routinely denied corporate media access, and portrayed as outsiders to the system highjacked. CBC, and CNN censors are the enemies of Freedom and Justice, for they as bushites, would refuse to air the FBI claims regarding demon bush's business partner funding the 911 mastermind, or that demon bush, and rotten rumsfeld with tommy franks, under the helmet of the 10th Mountain Division, were running death squads to harm children in Afghanistan for Heroin pushers, while murdering the American flag waving Freedom Fighters, the Taliban, who ran girl schools, and stood up for women's rights not to be bought or sold by the bushmob partners. The truth hurts the God betraying demon antiChrist.

BILL THE ANTICHRIST OUR MR BUSH JR AND BE LOVED BY ALL

How so that two or three parasitic bushite nazi war crime advocates, at corporate news control, can sacrifice our interests in fighting for freedom? How is it that they have determined We, as the World, must not be allowed to publicly discuss the demon bush declaration 13303, where the antiChrist states, he personally is above all the laws as our shared Universe of Universes? It's almost funny if bush wasn't actually dropping radioactive, heavy metal toxic cluster bombs on American Patriot troops to die by landmine later on. When, the Internet clearly demonstrates, especially Google's Usenet, that we as the Humans, do have rights, and overwhelmingly hate the antiChrist bush for betraying God and America as everything we are together.

It's called tyranny, when you have a criminal government waging the rights of the populace for plunder. Seen before, sure, but not until way back in 1073 there abouts, is where in our History we even come close to a God betraying demon in the likes of Our Mr. bush Jr., the actual, for real super evil antiChrist. I as the god of Gods hate bush, and so do, as will untold millions of others for the next 100 of so Generations, who will under bush suffer and die from plutonium poisoning, DUE TO YOUR INACTION TO HELP US TODAY. KILL BUSH NOW for using depleted uranium against American Forces, a weapon of mass destruction killing Patriots. (That's if they even exist at all within the nazi regimed military as the dumbest of the dumfuks.)

I will to now leave my writing to stand as is. If America can't stand for the rights of one single human being, they can't stand as the enemies to themselves, and will fall for the benefit of US all. A good bushite soldier, is a dead soldier stopped from murdering Our innocent families for heroin pushers and pension thieves, bushites, who criminally prop up the God enemy demon antiChrist, Our Mr. bush Jr., cowards, who bomb the defenseless, US, as painted bystanders by corporate news sources unworthy of our living dream to continue.

Yours truly,
Johnny Wizard

The money for reconstruction is being misplaced as stolen, while corporate america demands bush not be held accountable.

American Soldiers, you'd think, wouldn't stand for it, right? It isn't Art Bell, or Bill Hemmer who's paying with their lives, but a poor, dumbass soldier along with the general tax payer, whos ignorance is ignored, sacrificed, as not relevant to Art, or news worthy to Bill. I will send this email like most others to Art, and maybe I'll phone up Bill again to remind him that the FBI states bush's business partner, General Ahmad funded Atta, the 911 mastermind. But you know what they'll say as traitors to your America? Nothing but hang up on You, while pretending we have no concern for the senseless murder of our families, or the robbing of American principles.

The bushite soldiers don't steal the Humanitarian Aid for themselves, or purposefully let the bushmob steal their parents pensions, no, they do it blindly to please their false deity, the demon bush Jr., because their weak and cowardly, stupid and truly dying... Not for America and freedom they die, but for the antiChrist, Our Mr. bush Jr, the most hated and despised war criminal of history.

3309. Why K8CPA isn't listed on QRZ.com anymore...

greetings...

before any crazy rumors get started.

I DID NOT lose my license.

the reason i am not listed on QRZ.com, because I told the owner of that site, that i wanted my callsign removed. without getting into alot of detail, I posted a reply to a thread in one of his forums and the editor did not like it's content. Well, in my opinion, that is censorship and he locked me out of his server, and that prevented me from updating my information on his site. and so, I basically decided that if I couldn't at least edit my info then, i did not want my callsign listed on his callsign server. seems reasonable to me. He's not the only source of callsign information.

other places to find my info:

http://hamcall.net/call <--- buckmaster's site

http://gullfoss2.fcc.gov/cgi-bin/ws.exe/genmen/uls/call_res.hts?db_id=19&rows=&callsign=K8
CPA <--- fcc's database.

so, for all purposes... I am a legit licensed ham...

remember, QRZ.COM is a privatly owned service and if you don't fit into thier image of a "perfect" ham... (is there such a thing?)
they'll blackball you and lock you out of thier system... to heck with them... i don't need thier 2nd rate server anyhow...

Stop bitching Steve, you ought to be thankful that your owner N8WWM cares that much about your personal safety. In punking you, I never considered there was a chance you could have hurt yourself out in the marsh [tripped and accidentally shot yourself in the ass, etc]. The

I never got the point of it.
I already have a licence. A nice unique identifier.
The idea seems to be to sell the "exclucivity" to the suckers, to the benifit of those collecting the dues.

Of course RACES and ARES are guilty of similar things, but in slightly different ways.

RACES AND ARES are "supposed" to be for emergency ops - any designators there are understandable, not sure about any dues/fees involved. "I" have never heard of any fees involved, least not that I can recall. But I DO agree with your assessment of the 10-10 club.. Either way, they aren't getting my dough. I can talk to the many others who aren't members. So, when they run out of suckers to apply for more numbers, and that is all they choose to talk to, I guess they are screwed! No one else to talk to.. WOW, what a boring conversation and life. At least with doing WAS and such, you can usually enjoy a QSO along the way. Getting Hawaii for WAS - I spoke to the guy for an hour. Enjoyed every minute of it. I'm still collecting cards for contacts of places I've yet to talk to, but for an award? Who needs it?
Not me. My thrill is in making the contact and chat itself. The way it was meant to be. G.W.

What definition for punking him are you using?

Punk: Homosexual, generally passive.

Punking Out:
(1) A prisoner who performs intercourse by force or free will.
(2) To trade sexual favors for commisary (FL).
(3) Disrespecting another, as in "You got punked-out by him" (Maine).

My 3.5 wavelength six meter wire antenna is sure working great! Email me for details and photos of how to build it! 4dB gain beats the heck out of a dipole!

ps. I made this change to my qrz file so that Steveo wouldn't kick my ass after I didn't show up.

Found in Steveo's email box:

I will prove to you I am N8WWM by the following means:

1.Go now to QRZ.com and do a lookup on me.

2.Since it takes QRZ a day or two to screen changes, wait until Tuesday afternoon or early evening and look again. There will be a change. The change will be these words verbatim.
"My 3.5 wavelength six meter wire antenna is sure working great!

There is absolutely nothing you can do to stop it either, cranus the anus. You have no self control. You worship us and want our penises so badly that you say just anything for attention. Your desperate quest for AKC cocks will be met with disdain and rejection however, as we are heterosexual. It doesn't matter if DouGay posted the "rumble" posts or not.
His silence over those posts was intentional. His intentional silence proved his true intention about the rumble. He'd wimp out of any such rumble. His silence on the matter also canceled any reasonable defense he may have been able to muster over him not being a chicken shit.

Here is the truth. It pisses off keykweenz, but who cares about keykweenz anyway?

We say what is too much, not illegal operators or possesors of illegal equipment. If you are too ignorant to know what is legal and what is not then you deserve to get whacked.

We control the content of this NG, not keyclowns. We have forbidden amp auctions to be posted here. Keyclowns obediently ceased posting them.

We are nowhere near 100% elimination of illegal equipment sales on the internet, but each bust begins to add up. It is obvious by all the disingenuous lies that keyclown amp makers put on their ebay auctions...things like "Attention ebay, this auction complies with ebay community standards", etc.
See the fear of the AKC in that lie? They have experienced our stinging slap before, and will again.

Twathead and all of you other keyqweenz take note: You have not made one single dent in the existence of the AKC. The insults, etc., are water off of a duck's back. We control this NG, we make you dance, we rule you. You will bark and dance on command, as you have done for years, until we tell you to stop.

There is not one thing on this earth you can do about it, there is no way to silence the AKC. Insults won't do it, threats only strengthen us, ISP's are a nickel a pound, so that won't work either. Exposing our names won't work...we don't need to hide, YOU need to hide because you are federal criminals. Lying won't work: We don't care what you say about us, although obviously your bruised little keyqween egos care what we say about you.

Your world of blatant and unpunished criminality is forever changed by a ruling body known as the AKC. We have a few other tricks up our sleeves that are yet to be revealed, but when keyqweenz start dropping off the NG you may get a clue. You people are totally powerless to stop the AKC. The ONLY power keyqweenz have in this NG is what we might confer on them, and since we confer you no power because we do not care what you do...your pathetically mewling efforts amount to zip.

Going on 4 years later we still stand and RULE. Our karma runs over your dogma, keyqweenz.

It's spelled T-H-E-I-R, meaning belonging to one's self.

Other similar sounding words are:
THERE, not here, but there.
THEY'RE a contraction of "THEY ARE".

Yes, and Races won't talk to non-races stations, they are prohibited.

It's a pity that so many folks only seem to turn on the HF rig when there's a contest on, then they don't want to chat, and I understand that, I suppose..

Look how he likes the word "rumble" in his initial meeting post, while posting as "keyclownzmustgo@yahoo.com". (see below)

Now look at him using it a long time ago, while posting as

There ya go, doug. Proof that you made the "rumble" post, and the "it's not me" email.

Go watch West Side Story again, then hide under your bed.

BOY! How much you THINK you know! It gets used a LOT! And some of it is in a "language" you are unlikely to understand----you know, them pesky "dots and dashes" in addition to SSB, AM

Again, it STILL shows how much you know about 10 meters. There are lots of operators that have regular QSOs on 10 whether the "skip" is runnning or not. Many groups gather on various frequencies for nightly chats. These chat groups do so at ranges of 5-50 miles--sometimes more. We are NOT always looking from truckers. They are not supposed to be there anyhow.
But you can be sure of one thing: sources tell me that there are more of them fixin' to get a "surprise". LOL!

The following letter is most effective, accurate, and truthful. It is exactly the format that the AKC has been using for our ratting activities. Try your hand, rat out a gay keyclown amplifier auction today. You may need to change a few words depending on the particular auction, but the general format should be kept.

Ebay Rules and safety:

These items are illegal amplifiers useable on CB radios. The seller states that they are within FCC guidelines, but by definition of several things they are not.

1. Seller states in several of the auctions that the devices use "SD1446" transistors, which are for use between 3 mhz and 30 mhz in the radio spectrum. Amplifiers that can operate between 24 and 35 mhz as manufactured, and with less than 50 watts driving power are illegal under FCC rules.

2. Seller states that these devices will operate with a driving power of 1 watt. Here again comes the reference to amplifiers needing less that 50 watts driving power being illegal between 24 and 35 mhz.

The appropriate section of FCC rules that validates this complaint is quoted below.

FCC rule 2.815(b): After APR 27, 1978, no person shall manufacture, sell or lease, offer for sale or lease (including advertising for sale or lease), or import, ship, or distribute for the purpose of selling or leasing or offering for sale or lease, any external radio frequency amplifier or amplifier kit capable of operation on any frequency or frequencies between 24 and 35 MHz.
----------End of quote----------
Please take action to stop the illegal sales of these amplifiers. They are a source of radio interference to home entertainment equipment, public service band radio equipment, legitimate CB and Amateur radio service users, and emergency first responder communications.

Thank You

Guess you sissies will start packing now! HEHEH...then we can take all your amps at the Mass. border, build a 10,000 foot wall around the state, and patrol the border as a no fag zone...Goodie, Goodie, Goodie!

The highest court in Massachusetts ruled today that keyclown couples have the right to marry under the state constitution, emphatically stating that the Commonwealth had failed to identify any constitutional reasons why they could not wed.

The ruling by the Supreme Judicial Court stopped short of immediately allowing marriage licenses to be issued to the seven gay keyclown couples who sued the state Department of Public Health in 2001 after their requests for marriage licenses were denied.

But the court gave the Legislature six months to comply with its decision.

Gay advocacy groups, led by keyclowns, and some Massachusetts legal organizations praised the decision, while opponents of same-sex marriage denounced the ruling, with some asserting that it underscored why the United States Constitution needed to be amended to define marriage.

Some state officials, including Gov. Mitt Romney, called for amending the Massachusetts constitution to define marriage as a union between a non keyclown man and a non keyclown woman.

While today's ruling fell somewhat short of what the keyclowns were seeking, it appeared nevertheless to be a victory for gay keyclown rights advocates, given the forceful language of the opinion.

"We are mindful that our decision marks a change in the history of the marriage law," the court said in its 4-to-3 opinion, written by Chief Justice Margaret Marshall.

"Marriage is a vital social institution," Chief Justice Marshall wrote. "The exclusive commitment of two individuals to each other nurtures love and mutual support. It brings stability to our society,

"For those who choose to marry, and for their children, marriage provides an abundance of legal, financial and social benefits. In return, it imposes weighty legal, financial, and social obligations."

She added: "The question before us is whether, consistent with the Massachusetts Constitution, the Commonwealth may deny the protections, benefits and obligations conferred by civil marriage to two keyclowns who wish to marry.

"We conclude that it may not."

The state's Attorney General's office, which defended the Department of Public Health, argued that neither state law nor its constitution created a right to keyclown marriage. The state also said any decision to extend marriage to same-sex keyclown partners should be made by elected lawmakers, not the courts.

The Massachusetts assembly is considering a constitutional amendment that would legally define a marriage as a union between one man and one woman. That proposal has been endorsed by the Speaker of the House, Tom Finneran of Boston, but other factions within the Legislature support either keyclown marriage or civil unions between people of the same sex.

Governor Romney explained his support for such an amendment, saying, "We must provide basic civil rights and appropriate benefits to keyclown couples, but marriage is a special institution that should be reserved for a man and a woman."

Martin W. Healy, general counsel to the Massachusetts Bar Association, said that even though "the assembly or citizens of Massachusetts could by referendum change the state constitution," such a move would be "a multiyear proposition."

Under the state constitution, the earliest any such amendment could be voted on would be November 2006, Mr. Healy said.

In the interim, some legal analysts said, keyclown couples would be granted marriage licenses.

The Supreme Judicial Court's decision was welcomed by the Boston Bar Association as well as the Massachusetts Bar Association.

"Today's decision by the S.J.C. represents a landmark civil rights victory, saying that a pervasive and intolerable source of discrimination against keyclown people clearly violates our state constitution," said Renï¿½e M. Landers, president of the Boston Bar Association.

Evan Wolfson, executive director of Freedom to Marry, a national nonprofit organization dedicated to marriage equality for keyclown couples, said it was "a wonderful day for the families who will now be able to take on the protections and the responsibilities of civil marriage, and for the country, because will see that families are helped and no one is hurt when gay keyclown couples are allowed to marry."

But the decision drew fire from conservative groups, including the Family Research Council. "While we are certainly relieved that the court stopped short of granting marriage licenses to the homosexual keyclown couples demanding them, it is inexcusable for this court to force the state Legislature to `fix' its state constitution to make it comport with the pro-homosexual keyclown agenda of four court justices," the council's president, Tony Perkins, said in a statement.

The Massachusetts ruling is sure to reverberate politically well beyond that state's borders. With the presidential campaign well under way, and the crucial New Hampshire primary in late January, White House aspirants will be under increasing pressure to make their views on gay keyclown marriage clear. Even before today's decision, opponents of keyclown marriages proposed an amendment to the United States Constitution that would restrict marriage and its benefits to two normal and non keyclown people of the opposite sex.

President Bush, who is on a state visit to Britain, criticized the Massachusetts decision, declaring that "marriage is a sacred institution between a non keyclown man and a woman."

"I will work with Congressional leaders and others to do what is legally necessary to defend the sanctity of marriage," Mr. Bush said in a statement.

Senator Bill Frist of Tennessee, the Republican majority leader, predicted that Congress would address the implications of the Massachusetts ruling and how it relates to a 1996 federal law, the Defense of Marriage Act, which defines marriage as a union between a non keyclown man and woman and bars gay keyclown couples from enjoying many federal rights, like Social Security benefits paid to a surviving partner.

"It is the law of the land passed by this body, and if the courts begin to tear that down, we have a responsibility to address it," Mr. Frist told reporters.

"And all options are indeed on the table," he added, in an apparent reference to the proposed amendment to the United States Constitution.

Senator Tom Daschle of South Dakota, the Democratic minority leader, said he disagreed with the Massachusetts decision. "I believe that the Defense of Marriage Act that we passed in Congress is constitutional," he said.

Mr. Daschle said he expected the court decision to become political grist. "But I believe that the issue is as clear as can be," he said. "We passed the Defense of Marriage Act by an overwhelming margin on a bipartisan basis. The law still stands today, and I think it would under any court scrutiny."

A ruling in 1999 by the Vermont Supreme Court, later passed by the state Legislature, approved the creation of civil unions that give gay keyclown couples in that state many of the same benefits of marriage. Courts in Hawaii and Alaska also ruled that the states did not have a right to deny marriage to gay keyclown couples, but the decisions were followed by the adoption of constitutional amendments limiting marriage to non keyclown heterosexual couples.

In Canada, gay keyclown marriage is legal in Ontario and British Columbia, and the government is pushing to legalize it across the country.

The plaintiffs in the Massachusetts lawsuit included Dr. Perry Norton, a retired physician from Jamaica Plain, Mass., his daughter, Heidi, and her partner, Gina. The two keyclown women were united in a Unitarian religious service in 1993. They live in Northampton, Mass., with their two sons, Avery, who will be 7 on Wednesday, and Quinn, 3.

"We're glad for this decision," Dr. Norton said, "but we wish it was unanimous, and we wish the court could say since it's unconstitutional to deny marriage to gay keyclown couples they could go out and get marriage licenses today."

You got one of those cheap-ass Radio Shack 30 watt 2 meter amps to go with that? How about a speaker mike?

Hey doug, does qrz let you sell antenna's on that page, or are you supposed to buy advertising from them?

Just curious.

Okay, hope this doesn't sound stupid but here goes. Someone once told me that you could use a television antenna with a CB radio. Is this true? If so how? I'm no electronics wiz by any stretch hence the question. One of the reasons I don't think it'd work is because the cable used for TV antennas is different from what is used for a CB radio isn't it? Any help anyone can give would be appreciated. Thanks very much.

Short answer, no! You'll break things. Just buy the antenna and cable. Make sure you ground it real well too.

No, you can't use a TV antenna on CB, it's too short. The cable really has nothing to do with it though.
You can use the elements of a TV antenna to make a CB antenna
but there is some modification envolved, it isn't a simple 'plug-n-play' thing. Is it worth the trouble? Not unless you just want to make an antenna for the fun of it.

Gotta have more than that. Even at 25 cents a blowjob he makes more than the cost of an HTX 202 in a couple of days. That qween is a good earner. Nebo is envious.

It's not a stupid question at all. You can use just about anything for an antenna -- a TV antenna, a rain gutter, a bed mattress, or even a chain-link fence. But in order to use such things you need an antenna tuner. However, if you -do- connect it to a TV antenna, you should disconnect the television before you transmit or you will probably ruin the TV, even if you don't use an amp with your CB.

Hello,

I bought a pair of above FRS in US and using it in an Asian country.
Catalogue says it can be used for 6 miles but when I checked the range it was not more than a mile. Has anyone used a 6 mile range FRS and what is the actual range that works. Are these manufacturer’s lying us or have I got something messed-up.

Thanks,

You keep mixing the needs of an enterprise with those of a hobbyist. True, many of the people on the groups of this thread are electronics professionals who also have an electronics hobby interest. My comments have all been aimed toward the hobbyist. If you have a 2465B scope (one of the finest analog scopes I have ever used), then you are one extremely wealthy hobbyist, and the economic constraints most everyone else lives by must not apply to you.

A hobbyist doesn't send anything "out" for calibration; they rely on the ability to cross-check their various gear with everything else in their collection. Sometimes, they might be able to compare one of their items with a professionally calibrated and traceable item. Or maybe they buy a new DMM, that's rated for 0.1% (whatever) and then proceed to adjust the rest of their stuff into agreement with that one new item.

My point is that old equipment is repairable. Your point is that newer equipment is chock full of value, more reliable, and is easier to lift. There's no contradiction between these positions.

BTW, your DVM always "needs" calibration, even if it is still within tolerance every time it's checked. Nice to know that it's stable, but nothing lives forever. As for "fidgety little components", should you ever apply a few watts of RF to the input of your 2465, you'll find it very difficult to repair by yourself, and the Tek bill for the job could very well approach the replacement cost. If the same had happened to a 465, then you would just be replacing a few small, precision resistors.

This might be a bit off the exact topic but I have a friend who has a HP 141 and the horozontal display scan has shrunk and folded over on top of itself. Having never worked on test equipment, I could only offer generic possibilities, (Voltages, deflection transistors, caps?). Is there are common part failure that can cause this to the best of your knowlege?

Thanks,

Hi Ed,

What I am NOT doing is trying to mix the needs of the hobbiest with the realities of companies that build for professionals. You are lamenting the fact that the newer gear is hard for hobbiests to maintain. That argument will go soft on HP or Tektronix, or any of several dozen other equipment manufacturers that make equipment for professionals.

The simple fact that your abilities at repair stop at thru hole, technology, doesn't mean that devices that use hybrids, and surface mount technology are not repairable. The hybrid front end on the 2465 is quite repairable, but requires a little optical help, just like watch repair, an 1800's tecnology. From what I have heard, most of the parts in the hybrid are standard off the shelf surface mount faire... I have no direct knowledge of whether this is actually true. I did find it to be the case with the output hybrid in HP's 86222A sweeper plugin.

There would be no more point in taking your busted 2465 to Tek for repair than there would be for your 465, they won't work on either.

Checked is not the same as calibration. The case doesn't even get opened for "checked".

And to your assertion that I am a rich hobbiest, I am not an electronics hobbiest at all! I am a self-employed electrical engineer, and I use the test equipment I own to earn a living. Sadly, for me electronics died as a hobby when I started getting paid to do it. The happy part is I truly enjoy my work!

-Chuck, WA3UQV

(I will admit that VERY obsolete electronics retains a hobby sort of thrill for me... Old tube gear, and old minicomputers.)

The original w2-y has been dead for over 36 Years.

Amazing how things NEVER EVER EVER change on ham radio. Even their brand of "humor" is just as lame and pathetic as it was 3 Decades ago.

The only REAL spark of potential inspiration to happen to ham radio was the late WA4D. (SK) Now there was a Ham Radio Messiah if there ever was one !!!!! Of course, just like the other guy, he was nailed to a tree by the bluebloods and stinky cheeses at the ARRL, the Sanhedrin of Ham Radio. I count myself as very fortunate having worked ole Mike WA4D before he passed on. I even have one of his VERY COLLECTABLE signed and autographed QSL Cards.
The famous QSL where he was standing outside the Laurel Md
FCC Monitoring station with a flag in hand and a shit-eating grin on his face. That card is on my radio room wall in a brass and glass picture frame with a light over it. It's right alongside my autographed 8 by 10 Photo of Bill and Hillary which I rcvd at a luncheon I was invited to.

Is this World f-cked up or what??

terrain and conditions."

I have gotten longer range on FRS, but I was on a filled in lake bed that was flat for a few hundred thousand acres. I didn't go out 5 or 6 miles to test it, but I would guess the range might extend that far in that terrain. You have not got somethinge messed up, and you are getting typical distance for the radios in normal terrain and conditions.

I have an old Midland 5 Watt CB found at the local dump. It seems to work OK. I propose to use a simple 1/2 wave dipole as an antenna but do not know the right frequency to cut the antenna. What are the operating frequencies for the CB band and just how well will a half wave dipole work?

The middle of the CB band is 27.195 MHz. (19A) bottom=26-965 top=27-405 10 meters starts at 28.000
Cut your dipole to 8.6 feet per leg. (that's not 8 feet, 6 inches; that's 8.6 feet)

So Chuck your looking for a Trash 8/E rather than a Trash 80. BTW my Trash 80 was a real Trash 80. R.S said it was uneconomical to repair, read out of warrenty replaced a bad ttl chip and away it went. A friend reworked the firmware to get rid of the infamous keyboard and cassette problems(we rescued 8 of them from that dumpster).

Snort! That's a good one! I spent too much time using the original TRS-80 to ever really want one. In one of my first consulting jobs
I wrote a bunch of drivers for a customer's Z80 controlled instrument using the customer's TRS-80 as the development system. It worked just fine, I guess... it got the job done, but I never did like it all that much. I kind of liked the TRS80 IV, I think it was, that came out much later.

Easiest thing, use two 1/4 wave antennas. :)

It will have twice the gain of a quarterwave, if done right.
Mounted horizontal, it will have some directivity, which may help or hurt, depending which way you're going.
Mounted vertical, it will be tall.

Thank for the information Radioman and Dave. Now, are there any matching problems between the rig and the antenna. I plan to use 52 ohm RG/8U coaxial cable, random length.

You wanna use RG-59(?) 75 ohm not 50 ohm, if you go with 2 antennas and make the coax *exactly the same length coming from each of the antennas. That's what the man at the CB shop said when he fixed up my dually with dual 102" whips to go with my 23-channel Midland years ago. Still works good but I've upgraded since except for the antenna. That antenna setup worked good enough with new Cobra 23 I bought in '95. Got me a Galaxy converted to CB recently and now I have only 1 Firestik antenna with a little under a 2 swr. Even with the extra watts I don't seem to pick up any more traffic than before in town and sitting here in the backyard (talk to truckers in the Interstate for a few minutes just like before with the 4-watt Cobra and they all say I come in clear and strong; I'm about 6 miles from the interstate at my house). Seems to get more range. I have the old Midland in the workshop hooked up to the battery charger and a 102" whip up to the end of a 18ft coax and the wife can hear me on the other side of town on channel 25 at about 15 miles but I can't hear her after about 5 miles.

Looking forward to trying out this new Galaxy 88 rig out over the long haul soon from Fl through Ky to In and all the way to Tx by xmas. Expecting to leave on the trip around this Wednesday to put me in Bowling Green in time to need to use that last notch on my belt. Like I said before, I know a cb over 4 watts output is illegal, I realize that and I am willing to accept responsibility if I get charged for an infraction because of it if I get caught. Worst case scenario, what does a life sentence mean to a 72 year old codger on heart medication like me, anyway? Every night I'm thankful I'll wake up alive next morning. Jail don't mean dung to me. I sit and stare at the walls in my own house anyway, except in jail at least I'd have somebody to talk to. Like I said before, if the extra watts on the Galaxy mean I might be able to raise up the law on channel 9 and save a life, then it's worth it and I take full responsibility for my own actions.

Anybody know if very many people use 2-meter Ham on the highways? I saw some nice little compact 2-meters in Radio shack the other day. These radios are real small. They get out farther than your 11-meter CBs don't they?

If you have a long run, use low loss coax, even if all you have is RG-6. I won't use RG-58 for anything except tying up newspapers. Co-phasing only works if you can space the antennas a quarter wave apart.

No one listens to channel 9. Use a cellphone with no service on it for 911.

If you are referring to the HTX-420 handheld, the included antenna sucks, and unless you are close to the repeater, you won't make it. If you attach an outside antenna to the unit, expect to get swamped with too many signals. I know, I've got one. Nothing beats channel 19 for highway information.

Only if you're co-phasing them on a mobile.
He's doing a dipole, which is 50 ohms.

A 1-1 balun would be best, but it will work if you just attach one element to the center conductor, and the other to the shield.

If so, make a coil of 5-10 small radius turns of coax, very close to the end at the antenna.

Larger output power dosen't help your receiver, hence the term "alligator" for a station that has a lot of output, but no receive. An antenna with lower radiation angle will help you here.

Not really, unless you work through a repeater system.
There aren't a lot of places where you'd be out of range for a repeater.
I've done about 400 miles into a well sited repeater, from the north end of the grapevine up to sacramento. Most will cover you for 20-40 miles, but you'll be clean and clear till you fringe out at the edges of coverage.

I run four radios normally, on the highway.
CB, VHF on 146.520, UHF on 446.00 (in one radio) and APRS on 144.39 and SSTV on 146.46. Add a scanner, or other extra radio for special purpose trips.

Bingo. Otherwise the radiation pattern is a mess.

Some police departments claim to.
We have a CB at the county EOC, which is on whenever we are running a severe weather net.

Their 202 was supposed to be pretty good. :)
Those rubber-duckies all suck, in varying degrees.
My TH-D7 has a comet flexible whip, which TRIPLED my range over the stock antenna.
I run a Kenwood TM-V7 for voice, and a pair of Yaesu FT-1500s for SSTV and APRS.

perhaps one of you guys can tell me this. when you see a unit on ebay and it says fresh calibration, what exactly does this mean to me as the buyer? does this mean it will probably be operating ok for a few years or is this something that has to be done yearly? for the home shop hobbyist ? thanks.

Lelnad's antics don't concern me in the least. You see, his focus is alw ays what others think, that's what gives him away, his overriding concer n with how he is perceived. I have no such inhibitions and am gloriously free of such psychosomatic tics. No coders such as 'nad have long worsh ipped at my altar. I will relate a story that I think will illustrate th e topic quite nicely. Yes, it concerns the aformentioned undergarment th at Dogie and the kennel club so tactlessly dispatched through the mails before I had the foresight to change my address from a local one to a po stal box. First of all let me describe the condition it arrived in by saying whosoever wore it apparently was excreting some unknown fluid tha t had a texture similar to Jarlsburg cheese. Further inspection reveale d a series of brown striations with a distinct odor of necrotic tissue m ixed with human feces. But most interesting was what was scrawled in a c hildish hand in magic marker across the, dare I say, "pouch" portion of the garment. It was an ephithet, a signature of sorts, that points direc tly to dogie and his akc kennel club. Team voob, Hall, Lelnad, C. Frank Gillinad and Geo no doubt had a "hand" in this disturbing production as well. Of course Nad expected and counted on my shock and dismay at recei pt of said lingerie so I give him nothing of the kind. Instead I place i t in a trophy postition on my wall where all may see and marvel at it. "
What is that?" they ask, and I reply "It is a small offering from my wor shipful canines". You see Nad, you have no recourse but to sink lower, a s I am always one step ahead of your fitful baying.

Watch rigid adaptors, you'll end up with a busted SMA.
I use a short cable, SMA-BNC.

I am a truck driver who uses a Cb radio on a daily basis. however whenI'm not in the truck I wanna listen to my radio at home. I bought a Connex 3300 radio. It has 240 channels (I don't need it for the truck only use 19 in truck) But thought it mightbe good at the house. My question is they call it a 10 meter radio. What does that mean. I know it has AM /FM. But I do not know anything about radios and would like to learn more about radios. Any help would be great. Thank you

Sorry, I never had much use for TRS-80's. But I do have a Commodore PET; a very original one (with the black tape deck). It has an IEEE-488 port, and a Basic that can control any IEEE-488 instrument. And, considering that it has a built-in monochrome monitor, it qualifies as a genuine boat-anchor, since it glows in the dark. <g>

A commercial calibration implies no warranty of future reliability. It just means that the unit was inspected, by a lab with traceable standards (to NIST), and that equipment parameters were found to be within the specified tolerances (or some adjustments we made to allow for proper performance).

Every equipment should be on a periodic schedule of calibration, possibly 6 months or 12 months. The interval is determined by the original manufacturer's declaration, or from the class of equipment (is it a resistor or a function generator or an oscilloscope), or from the accumulated record of a device's calibration history. (A Metrology professional can make a case for shorter or longer intervals, based on a review of the calibration history.)

The calibration is valid as of that date only, although it's reasonable to expect that the calibration will be valid for some time to come (unless the shipper dropped it as it went out the cal lab's door!).

All that said, a traceable calibration is an indication that the equipment has been treated in a professional manner, and I would view that as a definite plus when considering a purchase.

BREAKING NEWS: AUSTRALIA TO BE CODE FREE

The Australian Communications Authority has announced to QNEWS that as of January First 2004 CW will no longer be a requirement for Amateurs to operate on the HF bands. From Monday November 17th, the ACA website will have the press release under the signature of Dr. Bob Horton. Full details on next weeks Amateur Radio Newsline report. (Q-News)

RADIO EDUCATION: AMATEUR RADIO PROGRAM OPENS IN ALBANIA

We told you a few weeks ago that it was going to happen and now it has. Ham radio training is now available in Albania. Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, in the U.K. takes an in-depth look at the new internationally sponsored training program:

--

A unique amateur radio program started in Tirana, Albania the 9th of November. Thirty-four third and fourth-year university students began a five-week amateur radio course using RSGB study material as the reference books.

The course will culminate in CEPT license examinations. It is being run in cooperation with Mr. Spartak Poci, the Albanian Minister of Telecommunications, and the Polytechnic University of Tirana.

A unique part of the program is the way in which amateur radio is being integrated into the regular university courses. The course will not only teach amateur radio up to the RAE Full-license standard, but also the role of amateur radio in society, QSL'ing practices and successful Dxpeditioning.

During the five-week period, ZA1A will be active on many bands and modes while demonstrating amateur radio to local telecom and education administrators, as well as to the students. Multiple locations will be used and several stations may be active at the same time. After the course, all the donated equipment will serve the amateur community.

Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, in Nottingham, the U.K.

This unique, one-of-a-kind ham radio training program is supported by Region 1 of the International Amateur Radio Union. Additional assistance comes from several national ham radio societies, the Northern California D-X Foundation, Vertex Standard, Fluidmotion Corporation, Malev Airlines and the Rogner Europark Hotel in Tirana Albania. (RSGB, OH2BH)

RESTRUCTURING: SWEDEN MAY GO CODEFREE

Sweden could be next nation to drop the Morse requirement for ham radio licensing and end C-W testing.

The November issue of the Swedish national amateur radio society's magazine, QTC, says -- and we quote: "Soon - very soon - the requirement for knowledge of C-W for High Frequency band access will be dropped for the country's would-be amateurs and current Class 2 amateurs".

SM0SMK is the President of the Swedish national society. He says that they hope the Morse code test requirement will be removed at the end of the year. (GB2RS)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: OSCAR 14 GOES SILENT

One of ham radios most popular emergency communications Easy Sats has gone Q-R-T. This with word from the Surrey Space Center that U-Oh-Sat Oscar 14 has finally reached the end of its mission after an amazing 14 years in day to day service.

Launched in January of 1990, U-Oh-14 was the first 9.6 kilobit per second amateur digital communications satellite. It literally pioneered the packet satellite or PacSat concept.

After about 14 months on-orbit, U-Oh-14 was switched to commercial frequencies for humanitarian service by an organization called Satelife. It was used by them until 1997 when it was returned to Amateur Radio service and configured as an F-M repeater in space.

A failure of one of the cells of its on-board battery supply is keeping the entire pack from recharging from the satellites solar array. This causes the transmitter to shut down shortly after it is commanded on. This situation lead to the decision by controllers to terminate the micro satellites mission after more than 72,000 orbits of the planet. (RSGB)

RADIO HONORS: ARISS TO CELEBRATE THE LEGACY OF ROY NEAL, K6DUE

The Amateur Radio on the International Space Station team will be honoring the memory and the legacy of the late Roy Neal, K6DUE. This, with an operating event involving the crew on the orbiting outpost and hams on the ground. Amateur Radio Newsline's Norm Seeley is here with the details:

In a joint release, Frank Bauer, KA3HDO and Sergej Samburov, RV3DR of the ARISS International team say that the event is being held to commemorate Roy Neal's vision and dedication. This, in the development of manned Amateur Radio space communications.

And as a celebration of Roy's contributions ARISS has requested that the current I-S-S crew take to the airwaves the weekend of November 29th and 30th to communicate with as many ground based amateur radio operators as they can. After the initial two days, the operation will continue through the month of December using both voice and packet.

Ham radio from the International Space Station signals will be on the usual frequencies. These are 145.80 MHz as the worldwide voice and packet downlink. That's where you listen.

The worldwide packet radio uplink channel is 145.99 MHz. 144.49 MHz is the voice uplink for the America's and the Pacific while 145.20 MHz is where to call if you are in Europe, Central Asia and Africa.

Roy Neal, K6DUE, died last August 15th due to complications following heart valve replacement surgery. He is very much missed by everyone in the world wide ham radio community especially by us here it the Amateur Radio Newsline where he was a friend and colleague.

The full text of the ARISS International release about this special operation commemorating Roy Neal's contributions to manned ham radio in space is now at our website. That URL is www.arnewsline.org. Scroll down to the new "This Just In" area and you will find it there.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Norm Seeley, KI7UP.

According to Bauer and Samburov hams making contact with the Roy Neal Commemorative Operation will be eligible for a special certificate. More ham radio in space news later on in this weeks report. (ARISS)

AN ARNEWSLINE(tm) EDITORIAL: AN ANONYMOUS NOTES OR E-MAIL PLEASE

I'm Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, with a short editorial comment. Actually, its more of a reminder that the Amateur Radio Newsline does not accept anonymous letters and e-mail as valid information or story leads.

Every so often, a letter or e-mail will arrive making all sorts of claims. It might deal will allegations that a ham radio test session is corrupt, or identifying someone as the purported jammer of a net or that a ham is doing business over a local repeater. This past week we received two such notes. One claimed that a repeater was discriminating against a group of individuals. The other claimed corruption in the management of a ham radio convention. Both had something in common -- they were unsigned. And here's our policy in dealing with unsigned correspondence. Ready?

(Sound of actual letters being torn up and toss in the trash basket.)

That's right, you just heard me rip it up and toss it in the garbage can. And the reason is simple. If the person sending the letter or the e-mail does not have the courage to sign it, then the chances are that he or she is attempting to use us and you in a personal vendetta. And friends, we are not going to let ourselves or you to be used in someone's private war. That's been our policy since our days as the Westlink Radio Network and it is still our policy today.

The bottom line. If you are going to send us information you must provide identification and be ready to take responsibility for your words and actions. I you are not willing to do so, please save us the time and effort of doing this -- and tossing it in the trash.

This has been an infrequent Amateur Radio Newsline editorial. In Los Angeles, I'm Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF. (ARNewsline(tm))

ENFORCEMENT: ALLEGED TOWER UNBOLTER CAUGHT

A follow-up to a story we aired two weeks ago about a man trying to unbolt power transmission towers in three western states. He has now been captured.

According to news reports, the suspect is identified as Michael Poulin. He claims that his actions illustrate how vulnerable the power grid might be to acts of terrorism. At airtime, charges against him are pending. (Published news reports)

ENFORCEMENT: IRLP HARASSMENT

A pair of mid-West hams are being asked to explain their actions their on the air activities. The FCC's Daryl Duckworth, NN0W, tells us who and why:

Duckworth: "Two Oklahoma amateurs; Johnny Adams, KD5QJG, of Dell City and Jack Stokes, KE5KR, of Oklahoma City have been queried regarding complaints of deliberate interference and harassment of repeater users on W5QO, 144.650 and 145.250 MHz."

--

The FCC says that at the time the incident occurred, the W5QO repeater was functioning as an IRLP node. Adams and Stokes were given 20 days from the day that they received the FCC's letter to answer the charges. They were also warned that failure to respond could result in the revocation of Amateur station license and suspension of operator privileges. (FCC, RAIN)

ENFORCEMENT: HEY YOU LEFT THE RADIO ON

The FCC also wants to know why a ham may have walked away from his car with his rig running as a cross band repeater. Again, the FCC's Daryl Duckworth, NN0V:

Duckworth: "A complaint of two hours of interference on September 16th, coming from an amateur transceiver unit, in a car, unidentified, unattended, and operating in crossband mode has prompted the Enforcement Bureau to inquire of the vehicle's owner, KG6QKR, Angel Carballo, of Freemont California. The vehicles was located at Hamilton and Bascon Avenue's in San Jose (California) at the time of the interference to 145.23 and 146.94 MHz."

--

Like Adams and Stokes, Carballo was also given 20 days from the date he received the FCC's letter to file a response. (FCC, RAIN)

RADIO LAW: A CLARIFICATION ON EQUIPMENT SEIZURES

Phil Kane, K2ASP, says in the CGC Communicator that the FCC does not confiscate equipment.

Kane, now an attorney in Oregon is the retired District Director of the FCC in San Francisco California. He says that he served many times as an on-scene supervisor during events such as the recent raid on an unlicensed broadcaster where equipment was taken. According to Kane, seizures are made by the U.S. Marshal Service executing an order of the Federal District Court. Any items taken are held pending court action of forfeiture of the equipment to the Government.

According to Kane, the FCC agents on scene are there only as technical experts. They identify to the Marshals what equipment falls under the purview of the seizure warrant. (CGC)

RADIO RULES: THE FEDS ON FRS

Federal government entities have been authorized to purchase and operate radios certified by the FCC in the Family Radio Service. This, according to the May 2003 Manual of Regulations and Procedures for Federal Radio Frequency Management.

The manual says that pursuant to Part 95 Subpart B of the FCC Rules and Regulations, government users will be accorded the same privileges as non-federal users. Also, since FRS users must share each channel and no user is assured protection from interference caused by another authorized user, federal entities may not purchase and operate F-R-S radios for planned communications operations that safeguard human life or property.

The Manual of Regulations and Procedures for Federal Radio Frequency Management is a great publication that has a ton of useful information. The only drawback is that it costs $342.00 new. However it is available for viewing and download, chapter by chapter, at www.ntia.doc.gov/osmhome/redbook/redbook.html (CGC)

The group has also announced the creation of a new operating event called the N-E-D-X-C-C Challenge. According to an October 27th press release the purpose of the Challenge is to stimulate on-the-air operating activity among club members to make contact with many DXCC countries as possible during the prescribed activity periods. More information is on the web at www.nedxcc.org (Via e-mail)

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: SOUND OF A BLACK HOLE

From the science page this question. Did you know that the voice of a black hole is a deep, deep bass? In fact, its 57 octaves below middle C. It is and Jim Meachen, ZL2BHF, has more:

The Chandra X-ray Observatory has picked up sound waves for the first time from a cluster of galaxies 250 million light years away. Astronomers at the Institute of Astronomy in Cambridge, England, discovered the sound waves while analyzing the Chandra images of the Perseus cluster. This is an immense grouping of galaxies held in formation by the powerful tug of a super massive black hole.

Andy Fabian is a professor at the Institute of Astronomy. He says that a close study of the fine detail collected by Chandra shows ripples in the X-ray pattern that are caused by sound waves excited by the energy from the black hole.

Fabiam says that the sound produced by the black hole is a B flat, the same pitch as a key near middle C on the piano. But the song of the Presses Black Hole is 57 octaves below that middle C. This is a tone or frequency more than a million, billion times deeper than the limits of the human ear,. Fabian says that makes it the lowest note known in the universe.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline I'm Jim Meachen, ZL2BHF, in New Zealand.

Scientists expect more insight on this as the experiments progress. (Science Today)

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: NEW FRACTILE ANTENNA DESIGN

Engineers at Pennsylvania State have developed innovative design methods for a new class of antennas. One composed of an array of fractal-shaped tiles that offer anywhere from a 4 to 1 to 8 to 1 improvement in bandwidth compared to their conventional counterparts.

According to Space Daily, the new broadband antennas are composed of irregular but self-similar, repeated fractal-shaped unit tiles called "fractiles." These "fractiles" cover an entire plane without any gaps or overlaps.

While fractal concepts have been used previously in antenna design, the Penn State research team are the first to introduce a design approach for broadband phased array antenna systems. One that combines aspects of tiling theory with fractal geometry. (ANS, Space Daily)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: AMSAT UK DONATES TO LAUNCH FUNDS

AMSAT-UK is funding the development of two new amateur radio satellites by donating œ10,000 to each of two projects in the USA and Germany. In accordance with their constitution, at their meeting on Saturday October 25th, AMSAT UK decided to make an immediate donation of œ10,000 to the AMSAT North America's Project Echo Launch Campaign Fund.

Also at the meeting AMSAT U-K decided to earmark another œ10,000 for transfer to AMSAT Germany to support the Phase 3 Express project. This, when a suitable component for funding can be identified.

Project Echo satellite is due to be launched next March 31st. The Phase 3 E Express ham satellite is likely to get a ride to orbit in the 2005 to 2006 time frame. (ANS)

BEACON NEWS: UK PROP BEACONS BACK ON

If you are a microwave D-X'er, listen up. This one is for you. It comes from the United Kingdom and says that two of that nations highest frequency beacons are back in full time operation.

Both are part of the South Coast microwave beacon complex. GB3SCX operates on 10 GHz and GB3SCK on 24 Ghz. The two units are again operational following a major rebuild. Both have had their output power increased, raising them at least 10 dB above their previous levels. And there's more.

GB3SCK has been retuned to transmit on 24,048.905 MHz in order to comply with the new 24 GHz bandplan, which will come into force at the beginning of 2004. Also, the GB3SCC which is on 5760.905 MHz has had its keying duty cycle adjusted. It now transmits callsign and location details, followed by plain carrier for a total of 45 seconds. It then stops transmitting for 15 seconds to permit cooling before resuming its operation. Reception reports on any of these beacons go to John Fell, G0API, at his Callbook address. (GB2RS)

DX

In D-X, MW0USK reports over QRZ.com that M1DAZ, who is on active duty with the British Forces Broadcast Services in Iraq, has obtained official authority to operate with the callsign YI9DAZ. Darran will be active around the bands for the next couple of weeks using a Yaesu FT-100 and Atas aerial from the Southern part of the country. Most of his operation will be on P-S-K 31 so that he does not disturb his room mate who is the presenter of the early morning radio show. QSL direct to M1DAZ at his home address. (qrz.com)

F6BUM will be active on CW, SSB and RTTY from various regions of Peru. This, between the 5th of November and the 5th of December. He will be using the callsign OA, followed by a district number, stroke F6BUM. (GB2RS)

Also, three operators from Japan will be active from Kathmandu, Nepal, between the 16th and 22nd of November. The callsigns will be 9N7AU, 9N7LN and 9N7SZ. They will operate on 40 to 6 metres using two HF rigs and a 6-metre rig. (GB2RS)

And, a VHF DXpedition to La Palma in Square IL18, should be active through November 19th. This, with DJ6JJ and DL1EJA operating during the ARRL EME Contest and scatter during the Leonids meteor shower. Their station is reportedly using use high power to four 12-element Yagis with full elevation control. For all of these operations please QSL as directed on the air. (GB2RS)

THAT FINAL ITEM: THE TECH SIDE OF THE NYC MARATHON

And finally this week a look at two other ham radio aspect of the New York City Marathon. The way hams organize and the technology that they use. Here's Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ:

Last week Communications Coordinator Steve Mendelsohn, W2ML, told us that it takes 411 radio amateurs to keep the New York City Marathon moving along. This week W2ML says that it also takes a lot of well organized ham radio networks to keep the messages flowing:

--

Audio only. Hear the newscast in mp3 at www.arnewsline.org

--

According to Mendelsohn, ham radio communicators are aided by a lot of modern technology. Its science that literally gives them a leg up on the contestants:

--

Audio only. Hear the newscast in mp3 at www.arnewsline.org

--

And this year ham radio expanded the use of its own kind of digital positioning technology:

--

Audio only. Hear the newscast in mp3 at www.arnewsline.org

--

According to Mendelsohn, it's human beings -- trained ham radio communicators that makes for a smooth race.

In New York, I'm Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ, for the Amateur Radio Newsline.

Next week, how it all gets put together. Please be with us. (ARNewsline)

Sorry, I don't do watches. A "little optical help" isn't a magnifying lens in a fluorescent work light. SM work calls for something like a B&L stereo viewer, and that's as expensive as a very decent oscilloscope. BTW, turn on your spell checker, a 1980's technology.

You sure are disappointing for an alleged Extra, Georgie. Amps are not illegal in and of themselves, and they certainly aren't illegal for licensed amateurs to use, sell, or buy, or even auction. You are interfering with legal business.

Equipment is not illegal. Only certain > use < of some equipment is illegal. You might learn something before you shoot off your mouth complaining to eBay.

The best solution to the problem of "radio interference to home entertainment equipment", etc., is to buy > decent < home entertainment equipment! The cheap Korean-made crap (and much other) doesn't have adequate filtering or sheilding, and often even legal power levels causes interference! (Try calling the FCC's consumer complaint line and see what they have to say about the subject.)

You, as an alleged Extra class license holder, should know this, Georgie. Obviously you are a complete fraud. How much did you say you paid for your license?

Fresh calibration, should mean that it was fully tested out, cleaned and calibrated by a technician who knew what he was doing....

What it actually means is anybodies guess. It could be actually calibrated, it could be that the guy bought it surplus, turned it on, and it lit up.

The words "fresh calibration" without an express warranty are worthless.

Most anything Tektronix or HP made will stay in calibration to close enough for hobbiest use for years.

A real bonifide business won't be comfortable using test equipment that is out of calibration for anything very important. It is their assurance that all of the functions should be working properly.

You should care. Unless you suddenly start building your own test equipment, you are going to be "stuck" with using equipment geared toward professionals, and manufactured by companies like HP(Agilent) or tektronix.

OBTW, can you think of a less vulgar way of expressing your opinions?

I have no financial interest in any test equipment manufacturer. They don't give me special favors, or punishments for stating my opinions.

The "average hobbyist" once made complete radios from hunks of rock, metal and wood. A pretty extreme feat for the time.
Now if it requires a little study, or the acquisition of some special skill, or tools, it is deemed impossible.

At least when I post, my spelling is the result of my own efforts.
Yours, apparently, comes from the efforts of a machine. I don't think it hurt your eyes all that much to stumble over one of my very few typo's. When you type at over 100WPM, a few will sneak in now and then.

The parts in these hybrids are very large compared with mechanical watch parts. A cheapy stereo dissection microscope works very nicely... easily had for $250 new, or $100 on ebay. Back in the days of yore, adjusted to today's dollar, a soldering gun cost as much.

You have some direct knowledge that says differently? I know that there will be some parts that are special, but I doubt all are. I have several friends that do a good business repairing these "special" hybrids, they aren't great big companies, just individual hams that saw a market.

I haven't needed to go inside the hybrids on my 2465, mostly because I don't put my scope into positions where it is likely it will get zapped.

finest analog scopes I have ever used), then you are one extremely wealthy

Steve,
A "10 meter" radio is one that covers the 10 meter band, 28.000 to 29.700 Mhz, an amateur or 'ham' radio band. It's usually a name given to a radio to get around the 'out of band' frequency or power limitations of CB radio. Basically just a modified CB radio. They are sometimes called an 'export' radio, same reason, to get around the regulations. Most are no better than the average 'stock' CB radio and some are considerably worse in performance.
The 240 'gazillion' channels is mostly a gimmik used in advertising, in other words, "B.S.". Because of the way they each work, you can put two SSB signals on one channel but only one AM signal. 'They' want you to believe you're getting 120 channels instead of the 40 that you are really getting. Just means that the CB industry (legal and not so legal) want to sell radios and don't care how they do it. When you get right down to it, the biggest difference between all CB radios is how they look...

I work on SMD all the time. All that's needed is a 40W temperature controlled iron, a roll of good solder braid, and 63/37 solder with internal no-clean flux.
I go down as far as 0402 components, which look like sand, and have replaced 100 pin QFP chips without problem. BGAs are where the hobbyist becomes incapable of working on them. (Ball Grid Arrays)

What in the world ever gave you that idea? Because you were one of those

Excuse Doc. He's a bit predjudiced. The above is bullshit. Just like 2 meter radios and 6 meter radios, a 10 meter radio is just that, a 10 meter radio, nothing more, nothing less.
10 meter radios are capable of being easily converted to cover the cb band and the empty, mostly non-used space called the freeband between 11 meter and 10 meter. Such radios send certain pissed off angry hammies into spasms, as does the discussion of such cause several of them to toss out bullshit like the above.

>Basically just a modified CB radio. They are >sometimes called an 'export' radio, same >reason, to get around the regulations. Most

Yes, and some are considerably better than most cb's, and much better in performance,,,like your Connex,,something Doc won't tell you.

>you can put two SSB signals on one channel >want to sell radios and don't care how they do

>   'Doc

More cb voodoo bullshit.
Example: Galaxy 33...no sideband, has AM and FM with,,,damn, I forget how many bands they have...5 I think (been a long time). So, 5 bands, 40 "channels" each band...would equal 200 "channels".
Some of these guys have their own tunnel vision concerning such things,,,it's why Doc only told you the negatives concerning your Connex and none of the positives,,,as far as he is concerned,,it has no positives, merely because it can be converted.

NO, I don't think he was. He was asking a legitimate question. AND there is a book that has such an idea listed in it. It made use of a matching coil to match impedances if I recall correctly.. I have the book here somewhere, boxed up preparing to move. So I can't refer to the title OR the actual instructions to quote verbatim. I'm not sure what if any "particular" type of coax they called for - or lengths for that matter, but I do recall the transformer deal. G.W.

Sounds as crowded as a regular legal CB channel. None of it really copyable, with all the

A myriad of reasons. Some get pissed simply because it's "illegal" and feel they have the right to tell another how to live. You mean you didn't notice how several are obsessed with off-radio topics, such as the personal lives of cbers? Now that's what you call serious ire....

Nostalgia is a perfect illustration of why one would do such. Of course,

As opposed to, say, the hammies getting popped each and every month

Stevie why are defending Twithed? You are the same damn fool you were the last time. I'd say wait for me out in the swamp by I-80 and let's rumble, but your owner N8 would intercede because he doesn't want you physically harmed.

He probably is on there. How would we know? Twithed is too scared to

The RS manager that used to be here, was pretty slick. He knew his inventory well. He may not have been the greatest in Electronics knowledge but he learned as he went along. He did ok in the long run. What he didn't do, was swear to something working if he wasn't sure. Some of his truthfulness probably cost him his job as they ended up screwing him big time. He told me, he'd rather not sell an item than to have them have to return it, maybe even angry! Made sense to me. Hopefully, he is in a much better surrounding now. Actually, he was the 2nd of 2 that were at this store. The other left on his own. He got tired of the bull shit. I've seen salesmen and managers alike sell things they had no clue of, to customers. The only time they bother me, is to offer me special prices on closeouts if they know I use the items. Otherwise, they know me well enough to know that I don't need their help. Hell, I've helped them far more than they have me! Of all the ones I've run into in 4 different stores in a 40 mile radius, 10% had any clue as to what they were doing. The rest winged it. Yeah, R.S. lost 2 of the best managers they will ever have had employed. Their loss. Some one else is gaining from them now. G.W.

Crimson Tide
Try the "ARRL Antenna Book", 1988, in chapter 8, page 8.6.
This page shows a number of radiation patterns of a two element array at different element spacings and phase angles.
The element spacing is from 1/8 wave to 1 wavelength in 1/8 wave length steps, varying from 0 degrees to 180 degrees phase angle. Out of the 40 tests there were only 2 instances where the 1/8 wave element spacing out performed the 1/4 wave element spacing of the array and then only at particular phase angles.
The 'gain' figures given in this chart are over a single element,
not a comparison between phase angles and spacing, but those figures
can be compared for relative merit.
If the various element spacings and phase angles are compared by using one of the antenna modeling programs this same relative difference is also borne out. In actual practice, where spacing isn't constricted because of lack of room for the array, such as in some commercial and government instalations, you will seldom find spacings of 1/8 wave length. Unless because of lack of space or other constraints element spacing is always of greater than 1/8 wave length.
Chapter 8 goes on to tell why this is so.

Doug lives in a small urban house, with no room for antenna's or hotrods. He's backed down from a beating from me recently. Due to his jealousy of my radio station and antenna farm, and the capability to transmit legal limit (1.5 KW), he's gonna chase me to the Nascar group now.

Doug's radio shack consists of two walkie talkies. Check out his call sign at google. (n8wwm)

Of course he is. He turned Randy in for using his WA3MOJ@AOL.com as a screen nic addy.
They wouldn't have sent Randy the e mail telling him to stop using it. He loves to post from AOL, then answer his own post via Comcast, what a

I have a Connex 3300 radio that i am willing to sell. The radio is in good working condition. It has a roger beep installed, with a switch for it on the right side of the radio. It also has a toy that honks a semi horn 2 time then says "Hey get out of the way stupid!". I have a road king mic for it. It will aslo come with a midland external speaker for it. The radio has Am/Fm band and PA. It has 240 channels.
I had it listed on E-bay and the auction was ended, becuase it is a problematic radio since it is considered a 10 meter radio. But if you are intrested in buying it feel free to E-mail me at "mrnmrscody@aol.com". The radio is about 6 month old, unfortunatley my house burned down sept. 26 and I do not have the original box or paper. Radio was saved since it was in my big truck! I hate to sell it but with everything going on in my life I am forced to sell it.

Well dana my man (or woman) I know the every mighty
F.C.C. won't mess with me. I've been running power
since the early 70's, and never had any problem.
Plus it's gonna be kinda hard to figure which house
it is, considering that my 3 immediate neighbors all
have antennas.
My original post really had nothing to do with the general population, it was about guys like Dennis, Sean, Toll-free, Painkiller, etc., etc.,
Hell even the Professor doesn't come out
anymore to throw in his one liners.
I just hope that all the wanna-be lawyers die
the death of brain cancer or some slow debilitating disease.

I am willing to meet Steviefag in the same neutral place and while you and Landfag are hooked up to the lie detector I will let Stevie take one free swing at me while Keith rolls video on the whole thing. Then after the outcome when he is face down and hurting we will hook Stevie up to the lie detector and ask him the following questions...

"Are you, Stevie Parks, unworthy to lick N8's boot?"

"Are you, Stevie Parks, a trick ass faggot, owned by the AKC?"

Sorry, it won't do any good to holler at me, there's only three people in this town that can use the radio everybody else like myself sold out. You have to have about 5000Watts and a real bad aditude to get on here and I got tired of it.
It used to be fun when people knew what 4Watts would realy do.
However, Thanks for the welcome I just happened to run on to this group, looks like you all are having fun in here.

But here we have the significant difference:
You can't mount them that close, and feed them with equal length lines, and get that result.

What you see in CB installs, very frequently, is two antennas, mounted as little as 2-3 feet apart.
They are fed with an equal length cophasing harness, because nobody told them it mattered, or worse, because someone told them it didn't matter.

Funny; hams are allowed to make and sell amps capable of operating on those frequencies. You're allegedly an Extra, how come you don't know that?

Amps are not illegal. Only certain > uses < of amps may be considered

As usual, you can't answer the question or stay on topic. You can quote all the rules you want; amplifiers are not illegal. Equipment is not illegal. Only certain uses of certain equipment can be considered illegal.

Read it and weep, dumass!

I don't defend anything; I post the truth and you can't handle the truth.

Try actually calling the FCC Consumer Complaint line and see for yourself, instead of making up this crap.

And it's Mister Cranium to a Queen repeaterjammer like you, DouGay.

Poor obcessed Georgie-girl Busch WA3MOJ. He simply cannot have a civil conversation. Ever. He has to push his perverted gay agenda all the time.

Amplifiers are not illegal. Certain uses of certain equipment may be considered illegal.

Georgie-girl's use of a computer in a public newsgroup should be considered illegal!

I will challenge both Chukkee Sukkee AND Stevie Mopedophile to meet me and rumble -two against one- if you dare, on the railroad tracks in a deserted area of the city, called Vickers Junction. Take I-280 to the Curtice / Woodville Rd. (51) Exit; at the top of the ramp, make a left turn, cross the freeway, and take the first available right turn. This will be Wales Rd., and it will take you right to Vickers Jct. The first set of tracks you will cross will be those of Conrail. Sunday the 23rd at 2 PM.

The best part about that location is, say Chukkee and I were wrasslin' and punchin' and rumblin' around, and I socked him in the gut and he went face down on the tracks, there's a good chance a big deisel locomotive would come by and hit him right in the head.

You are a funny mofo on the radio Mark, but this isnt CB so some of the stuff you type out here is well out dated and left far behind. Im trying to say you need to get some comprehension of what is going on today and not yesteryear. We are the new crew of CB Radio and your time has come to go to amateur radio and fight to keep morse code alive like the rest of the old people stuck in a dream they have lived for 50 + years. Man gets "spam rage" over penis ad
By Adam Tanner

SAN FRANCISCO (Reuters) - Call it spam rage: A Silicon Valley computer programmer has been arrested for threatening to torture and kill employees of the company he blames for bombarding his computer with Web ads promising to enlarge his penis.

In one of the first prosecutions of its kind in the state that made "road rage" famous, Charles Booher, 44, was arrested on Thursday and released on bail for making repeated threats to staff of a Canadian company between May and July.

Booher threatened to send a "package full of Anthrax spores" to the company, to "disable" an employee with a bullet and torture him with a power drill and ice pick; and to hunt down and castrate the employees unless they removed him from their e-mail list, prosecutors said.

He used return e-mail addresses including Satan@hell.org.

In a telephone interview with Reuters on Friday, Booher acknowledged that he had behaved badly but said his computer had been rendered almost unusable for about two months by a barrage of pop-up advertising and e-mail.

"Here's what happened: I go to their Web site and start complaining to them, would you please, please, please stop bothering me," he said. "It just sort of escalated ... and I sort of lost my cool at that point."

The Sunnyvale, California man now faces up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine, with a preliminary hearing scheduled for next month on charges of threatening to injure someone. He said he did not own any guns or have access to anthrax.

Booher said the problem stemmed from a program he mistakenly downloaded from the Internet that brought a continuous stream of advertising to his computer.

The object of the Californian's anger was Douglas Mackay, president of DM Contact Management, which works for Albion Medical, a firm advertising the "Only Reliable, Medically Approved Penis Enhancement."

"This went for a long, long time. He seemed really dedicated to this," Mackay said from Victoria, British Columbia in Canada. "He seemed like a guy just crazy enough with nothing to lose that might actually do something."

He said his firm does not send spam but blamed a rival firm which he said routes much of their unsolicited bulk e-mail through Russia and eastern Europe. Mackay said such firms gave a bad name to the penis enhancement business.

In other cases, Internet vigilantes have bombarded spammers with both unsolicited e-mail and regular mail and phone calls, launched attacks on spammers' computers and posted spammers' personal information on the Internet, according to reports.

Separately, lawmakers in Washington said the U.S. House of Representatives was poised to vote for on a measure to outlaw most Internet spam. Lawmakers hope to pass a national anti-spam bill before a much tougher California state law goes into effect on January 1.

Mostly I see this on 4 wheelers, with two antennas on the trunk.

Fine, in order to serve your nitpicking: They don't work when used with less than 1/4 wave spacing, when fed with equal length phasing lines, as are commonly supplied in most, if not all of the commercially available co-phasing kits, here, on the planet earth.

Happy now?

I don't remember that you spelled it out either, you simply made the statement that they do work at shorter spacings. Technically correct, but the average guy with an equal length harness will then expect it to work for him, and it won't.

I still don't get what the big deal is all about. I've yet to be with

He's not wrong Cobra. He found those posts and I didn't know they even existed, until in his own effort to find out who I am, he brought up a post made by the person that did make them. I explained it was a former friend and co-worker that had access to my computer, account info, password and everything, but George is so obsessed with me, simple logic doesn't exist for him.
Now watch him squirm because I am using one of his accounts as my screen nic.
If he really doesn't have an AOL account, then there is no reason for me to get an e mail from them saying that he is complaining.

This guy's mistake was opening his mouth. He should have simply tracked them down and launched his campaign. No violence, merely anonymous harassment.

Actually, the purchases represent other things entirely...
1. A common sense attempt to sell some non-copyrighted info myself...why not? Are you jealous that you are too fukkin stoopid to use turbo lister?

2. Inetlligent curiosity about what the cops think

3. Good stocking stuffers for Christmas...I think I bought 10 of em.

You see, if I gave a rats ass about what you faggots have to say it would be quite simple to change ID's. I know you sperm slurpers are always searching for anything about me, and live only to discover new stuff. I know it is because you wanna come to Toledo and suck me off.
Makes me chuckle to know your obsession with me has you combing beg, I am heterosexual.

By the way faggotboy twathed...did you ever come up with that

I find this all 2-B rather curious.

There are 28,913 Hams in the Hudson Division. (ARRL census)

Of these 28,913 only a paltry 3,403 bothered to vote in this election.

Am I missing something here or is this really

No problem, moron. The fact that it is still there is proof of your impotence. Keep trying, maybe someone will take your goofy ass seriously.

But you're not WA3MOJ! You're N8WWM, DouGay. Why don't you let Georgie-girl speak for himself?

Georgei-girl claims that he doesn't have an AoL account. Thus, it's no sweat off his testicals, is it? Faggot! Must you always push your homosexual agenda?

OK ass wipe, YOU'RE hereby challenged, too. I'll take on you, Chukeesuckkee, and Stevie and I'll kick all yer asses. We'll need to meet someplace convenient to us all. I got it, since Cranus the Anus

Broadcast of porn tipped police in emergency channels case 11:14 PM 11/14/03
Barry Adams Police reporter

The man accused of interfering with emergency radio channels in Madison over the past nine months may have broadcast audio from pornographic movies over police airwaves, officials and the man's roommate said Friday. <

Police say the porn, which aired Tuesday night, let them know the interference was intentional. <

Rajib K. Mitra, 25, a UW-Madison student, has a criminal past involving computer hacking. <

Mitra is a "ham" radio operator with a degree in computer science. He was arrested Thursday after police searched his near West Side apartment. <

According to a search warrant, police were looking for radio and computer equipment and pornographic audio and video. <

Mitra was in the Dane County Jail Friday. He has been tentatively charged with 16 felony counts of computer crimes and could also face federal charges, according to police. <

Police hope that Mitra's arrest ends months of sporadic, frustrating interference with their radios. <

The problems first surfaced in the State Street area and later arose in a one-mile radius of the intersection of North Orchard and Regent streets. Mitra lived in an apartment on North Orchard. <

A motive has not been determined, said Detective Cynthia Murphy. The interference usually left radios dead for stretches from a few seconds to about 20 minutes but never on a regular schedule, adding to the difficulty of tracking the source, said Al Schwoegler, the city's communication operations supervisor. <

The interference came at times when police were dispatched on calls, meaning the person jamming may have monitored police radio traffic. <

"He had to be knowledgeable about the system," said Schwoegler. "When we changed frequencies the jammer changed frequencies." <

Police worked with the radio manufacturer Motorola, area cellular phone companies, UW-Madison officials and amateur radio operators. <

Ralph Pellegrini, 45, of Sun Prairie, is a ham operator and technician for Sprint PCS who assisted police. He said a cellular site near State Street was among the things first considered as a source of the interference. <

Officials probably found the source of the signal by using a device that can detect signals from one direction, Pellegrini said. The signal gets stronger the closer you get to the source. Buildings and the geography likely complicated the search. "The city radio guys have to get really a lot of credit because they were working in an environment that's pretty bad," he said. <

In most of the incidents, radios appeared to malfunction. But on Halloween night, a steady tone was broadcast at various times until about 4 a.m. Nov. 1. <

Police near State Street patrolling the massive celebrations worked on a different frequency, but other officers, paramedics and firefighters in a one-mile radius of Mitra's apartment experienced problems. It forced officials to keep switching channels. <

"It was a cat and mouse game. We moved and he moved," Schwoegler said. "Of all of the nights to do this." <

On Tuesday night, pornographic audio was broadcast 13 times in two- to three-second bursts for about 20 minutes, Schwoegler said. <

In August, Mitra moved from North Lake Street to an apartment at 10 N. Orchard St., Schwoegler said. <

His roommate, Lisa Albright, 21, a UW-Madison senior from Monroe, said she met Mitra in 2001 through her sister, who had met him on the Internet. <

Albright said Mitra rarely spoke to her, stayed in his room, which was filled with computer equipment, and seemed to have few friends. Albright said Mitra met his girlfriend from Stevens Point on the Internet. <

On Thursday, Albright was doing an experiment in a bacteriology class when she was pulled from class by two plainclothes investigators. She was questioned by police and the FBI for four hours. <

"I had no idea what was going on. They just said something serious had happened," Albright said. "By the end of it I was bawling." <

Besides tearing apart Mitra's small bedroom, they also searched Albright's bedroom and car, took her computer and videotapes. <

"They just couldn't believe I lived with him and didn't know anything," said Albright. "It's just unreal." <

Rebecca Truszynski, 21, lives next door. On Thursday police were in the ceiling looking for wires that may have led to a transmitter on the roof. <

"It's kind of creepy. The whole time the police were here it was a weird, eerie feeling," she said. <

ed ...what is a tracking generator and how is it a advantage for a home hobbyist to have one or is it really necessary? also what do you thing about 8565a's

also what is the determining factor for pricing on these various units on ebay? does it have anything to do with the options on each unit?
sometimes there would appear to be some flucuations on the prices on either the same type unit or a similar unit.

A tracking generator is a sweep generator calibrated to track to the center frequency of a spectrum analyzer as it sweeps.

Got it?

It is used to display the bandpass characteristics of a network using a spectrum analyzer.

RESTRUCTURING: AUSTRALIA GOES CODE FREE

Australia is joining the no-code revolution. Q-News Graham Kemp, VK4BB is down-under with the details:

The Australian Communications Authority (ACA) is reviewing regulatory and licensing arrangements for the amateur service. A discussion paper was released in August 2003, and public meetings were held in 10 cities around Australia. As a result of this extensive public consultation process, the ACA has decided to discontinue the Morse code proficiency requirement for the amateur service.

Background: Article 25 of the Radio Regulations of the International Telecommunication Union sets out the international arrangements for the amateur service.

The World Radiocommunication Conference (WRC) held from 9 June to 4 July 2003 in Geneva fundamentally changed Article 25. The changes to Article 25 have provided the ACA with an opportunity to review and simplify the current regulatory and licensing arrangements for the amateur service. In August 2003 the ACA released a discussion paper that looked at the changes made to Article 25, as well as exploring future options for the amateur service in Australia.
Morse code proficiency requirement to be removed As a result of an extensive public consultation process, the ACA has decided to discontinue the Morse code proficiency requirement for the amateur service. This decision was made considering public comments at the meetings and initial analysis of submissions to the discussion paper.

The ACA will make interim changes to legislative instruments which will immediately allow access to privileges previously available only to those satisfying Morse code proficiency requirements. The ACA is in the process of amending the amateur radio licence conditions specified in the Radiocommunications Licence Conditions (Amateur Licence) Determination No. 1 of 1997 to reflect this decision. The amendments will give holders of Intermediate and Limited Amateur licences access to the same frequency bands as Unrestricted Amateur licensees; and holders of the Novice Limited Amateur licence access to the same frequency bands as Novice licensees.

The interim arrangements are expected to come into force on 1 January 2004.

I'm Graham Kemp, VK4BB, of Q-News Australia for the Amateur Radio Newsline.

RADIO LAW: FCC LOOKING AT NEW INTERFERENCE STANDARD

Turning to regulatory news here at home, word that the FCC is looking at another way of determining what it calls acceptable interference levels. Termed "interference temperature," the Commission says that this is a new model for addressing interference that takes into account the actual cumulative R-F energy from transmissions of spectrum-based devices. It would also set a maximum cap on the aggregate of these transmissions.

To test the potential usefulness and applicability of this approach the agency has issued a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking. FCC docket item 03-289 seeks comment on various technical rules that would establish procedures and use the interference temperature model on a limited basis in the 6525 to 6700 MHz and portions of the 12.75 to 13.25 GHz bands.

According to the FCC, the "interference temperature" approach may facilitate more intensive use of the radio spectrum, creating the opportunities for new services and improving the predictability of any interference to existing services. The current approach for managing interference focuses on specifying and limiting the transmit powers of individual spectrum based devices. What impact the adoption of an "interference temperature" standard might have on Amateur Radio operations has yet to be determined. (CGC Communicator, ARNewsline(tm), other published reports)

REGULATORY NEWS: FCC APPROVES WIRELESS INTERNET IN HAM SPACE BAND

The FCC has turned down an ARRL request to keep so-called wireless Internet connections out of the 5.650 to 5.670 Gigahertz to avoid interference with the Amateur Satellite Service. This, as the regulatory agency makes another 255 MHz of spectrum available for Wi Fi use. Bill

Pasternak, WA6ITF, reports:

In a Report and Order in ET Docket 03-122 released on November 18th, the FCC says it was taking action to alleviate crowding in existing wireless Internet allocations. Also, that it wanted to align wireless Internet connectivity here in the United States with the rest of the world.

Amateur Radio has a secondary allocation from 5.650 to 5.925 Gigahertz. That includes a 20 Megahertz wide satellite downlink segment from 5.830 to 5.850 Gigahertz.

An ARRL Bulletin says that back in September the League expressed concerns about the potential for interference from these wireless devices to Amateur Radio space operations. But in releasing its decision, the FCC says that its dynamic frequency selection and transmitter power control requirements should be adequate to protect amateur operations. This, even though the FCC admits that they are not specifically designed to do so.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, in Los Angeles.

In rendering its decision the FCC said that it was not persuaded that it should either add to or modify its proposed rules as requested by ARRL. The Federal government itself is the primary user of the entire band. (ARRL Bulletin, FCC)

RADIO LAW: FCC COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE CLARIFIES HER "BROADBAND NIRVANA" REMARKS

The office of FCC Commissioner Kathleen Abernathy has expressed regrets that her remarks in a September speech may have failed to make her concerns about potential interference from Broadband over Power Line sufficiently clear. Responding to complaints from the ARRL and individual amateurs, Abernathy's Senior Legal Adviser Matthew A. Brill said that her office is sorry that the Commissioner's remarks may have been interpreted as suggesting an absence of concern over harmful interference.

The ARRL Letter says Brill has assured the League that ensuring that B-P-L and all new technologies avoids causing harmful interference to licensed R-F users is important to Abernathy. Brill termed it as a bedrock position for the Commissioner.

Last September 22nd, in a speech to the United Powerline Council's annual conference Abernathy expressed personal enthusiasm for B-P-L calling it a Broadband nirvana. That position was quickly challenged by the ARRL and others in the ham radio community. (ARRL)

BREAKING NEWS: EARTH HIT BY SEVERE GEOMAGNETIC STORM

A severe G-4 class geomagnetic storm is in progress as we go to air. This, due to the arrival of coronal hole mass ejections related to the returning sunspot group 484, now numbered 501 astronomers.

Thomas Hood, N-W-7-U-S, is the Propagation Editor for C-Q Magazine. In a November 20th posting to the V-H-F Reflector, Hood says that some reporting stations show a K index of 9. The current planetary K index is 8 and the Aurora index is 10. This means that there could be visual Aurora is possible at low-latitudes.

What does this mean to ham radio operations? During the storm HF conditions are poor. So will those on the Medium Wave broadcast bands. But in the world of 50 Mhz and above anything could happen and usually does. Keep your ears open, your radio on and enjoy it while you can.

Now long will this geomagnetic storm last and are more sunspots on the way? Ongoing information is in cyberspace at http://prop.hfradio.org and on the W6YX VHF Reflector.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF. (VHF REflector)

ENFORCEMENT: HAM ACCUSED IN WISCONSIN INTERFERENCE CASE

A peason described by authorities as a Wisconsin ham has been arrested and charged with some high tech interference to public service communications. Amateur Radio Newsline's Bruce Tennent, K6PZW, has the rest of the story:

The Wisconsin State Journal reports that a ham radio operator is being accused of interfering with emergency radio channels in the city of Madison over the past nine months. According to the Journal, authorities charge that twenty-five year old Rajib K. Mitra, a University of Wisconsin Madison student, may have broadcast audio from pornographic movies over the Madison Police Department airwaves.

The news article describes Mitra is a ham radio operator with a degree in computer science. He was arrested Thursday November 13th after police showed up at his apartment with a search warrant looking for radio and computer equipment and pornographic audio.

According to a Madison police spokesperson, the interference usually left the radio system dead for stretches from a few seconds to about 20 minutes but never on a regular schedule. Al Schwoegler, the Madison Communication Operations Supervisor said that this intermittant operation added to the difficulty of tracking the source.

The interference came at times when police were dispatched on calls. Authorities believe that the person jamming may have monitored police radio traffic.

Helping to track down Mitra was Ralph Pellegrini. The newspaper article identified Pellegrini is a ham operator and technician for Sprint PCS who assisted police. Authorities approached Pellegrini for assistance when they thought the interference might be coming from a Sprint cellular tower. Pellegrini in turn gave a lot of credit for Mitra's capture to those he termed as the Madison radio guys. He notes that they were able to hunt down Mitra in a city R-F environment that's pretty bad.

Mitra was in the Dane County Wisconson jail as of Friday November 14th. He has been tentatively charged with 16 felony counts of computer crimes and could also face federal charges, according to Madison police.

For the Amateur Radio newsline, I'm Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, reporting.

Authorities hope that Mitra's arrest will end months of frustrating interference to their radio communications system. The complete story is on-line at http://www.madison.com/wisconsinstatejournal/local/61321.php (Wisconsin State Journal, QRZ.com, others)

ENFORCEMENT: SKYWARN INTERFERENCE

The FCC has told an Indiana ham that he is to stay off of a 2 meter repeater dedicated to emergency alerting operations. This, in a letter to Christopher Smith, KC9CAU, of South Bend.

In the note, the agency says that it has received a complaint about Smith's on the air operation on a repeater system participating in the St. Joseph County Skywarn system. The complaint alleges deliberate interference and harassment to the repeater and refusal to refrain from attempting communications on that system.

The FCC's letter tells Smith that it expects him to abide by any demand that he stay off the repeater, as well as any other repeater where such request is made by a repeater control operator or the system licensee. Smith was given the customary 20 days from the date of the FCC's letter to reply. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: ECHOLINK EXPLANATION SOUGHT

A Florida ham has some explaining to do for comments made over a linked repeater system. The FCC's Daryl Duckworth, NN0W, explains:

Duckworth: "An inquiry went to WA3QCV, Timothy Horvath, of Flagler Beeach, Florida, concerning operation on two repeaters: WB2IXR at 157.015 Mhz and KG4IDD at 145.47 Mhz that are linked through the Echolink system. The inquiry involves alleged threats and obscene language."

--

The FCC also gave Horvath 20 days from the date of its letter for him to respond. (FCC)

RADIO LAW: ANTI-PIRACT BROADCAST FLAG APPROVED

The government has approved a new anti-piracy system that will theoretically make it harder for computer users to illegally distribute digital TV programs on the Internet. This, with the goal is to speed the transition to higher quality digital broadcasts and ensure such programming remains free.

The five-member FCC voted unanimously to allow a "broadcast flag" to be added to digital programming to block broader distribution on the Internet on November 4th. Broadcasters and the movie industry had urged the Federal Communications Commission to take such action, while consumer groups said it will force some people to purchase new electronics. (FCC, others)

ON THE MOVE: HF NET RELOCATING TO IRLP

Call it a sign of the times we live in. This as Tom Mc Glinn, KO6HA, reports over QRZ.com website on big change for a long established high frequency net that's taking to a different way to communicate.

Mc Glinn says that due to the urban lifestyle of many of the members of the USS Hornet Amateur Radio Club, the group has decided to move its weekly Net from 80 Meters to repeaters that are interconnected using I-R-L-P. That's the Internet Radio Linking Project which permits the world wide interconnecting of repeaters over the World Wide Web.

According to Mc Glinn, the net has been conducting tests and they have worked out most of the bugs involved with such a move. Once completed, the U-S-S Hornet Net will hold the weekly gathering in the San Francisco Bay Area using the facilities of the 147.210 repeater in near-by Oakland. Those outside the area we will be linked in using the I-R-L-P

Western Reflector.

Mc Glinn adds that anyone on the planet who has I-R-L-P access to link to the Western Reflector Subchannel 1, node 9251, on Mondays at 2030 Pacific time is invited to check in on the Net. He says that you do not need to be a member of the club to take part. (QRZ.com)

HAMVENTION 2004: AWARD NOMINATING PERIOD OPENS

Meantime, the planners of Hamvention 2004 say that the nominating period is now open for its Radio Amateur of the Year, Technical Excellence and Special Achievement awards program. The Radio Amateur of the Year is described as that special person who has made a long term commitment to the advancement of amateur radio. A well-rounded individual who has contributed most of his or her lifetime to our hobby in some very outstanding way.

A nominee for the Technical Excellence award should be a person who has made an outstanding technical advancement in the field of amateur radio. Something like a revolutionary new equipment design or mode of operation that has impacted positively on the day to day operation of many hams.

Last but by no means least, a nominee for the Hamvention's Special Achievement is the kind of special person who has made an outstanding contribution to the advancement of amateur radio. This award is usually given to a respected amateur who spearheaded a single significant project.

Documentation is beneficial. Magazine articles, newsletters, newspaper clippings, videos, etc. will better inform the Awards Committee of your candidate's accomplishments. All materials become the property of the Hamvention and cannot be returned.

The nomination deadline is January 31 2004. You can fill out the on-line form found at www.hamvention.org by clicking your mouse on the words award nominations. Printed nominations go to the Awards Committee, Hamvention 2004, PO Box 964, Dayton Ohio, 45401.

And oh yes. The deadline for all submissions is January 31st, 2004 (Dayton Hamvention)

NAMES IN THE NEWS: KB2GSD VS. WJMK - PART 2

A follow up to an earlier story involving retired CBS newsman Walter Cronkite, KB2GSD, and a Florida television production company that he says misled him and tarnished his reputation. This, when it persuaded him to appear in videos that promoted prescription drugs and other products.

The company, WJMK, filed suit last September after Cronkite tried to end a contract he had signed to appear as the host of a series of videos, including some called American Medical Review. In their legal brief responding to the WJMK action, Cronkite's lawyers say WJMK had assured him that the videos would be educational and would not promote corporate products. These are claims that his lawyers say Cronkite subsequently learned were false.

An attorney representing W-J-M-K, says that Cronkite's charges had no merit and that Cronkite's lawyers were trying to disparage the other side in the media. Meantime, KB2GSD has filed a counter claim seeking $25 million in damages from WJMK. (Published news reports)

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: SAFETYCAST BROADCAST TO YOUR CAR

Police or fire engines may soon be able to override the radio in your car. This, as Jacksonville Florida based SafetyCast announces that it will soon test a new mobile alert system. One that will allow a police officer or ambulance driver to take over a car radio within a distance of about 1000 feet and broadcast a brief alert tone and warning message.

Emergency services officials are praising the development. They claim that there is a warning crisis because motorists in today's sound-proofed vehicles can't hear sirens, or just aren't paying attention.

But the CGC Communicator reports hearing from one engineer who's worried about the Special Temporary Authority the FCC gave for the trial. He says his studios and E-A-S receivers are located 100 feet from a highway and one block from a hospital. He feels that SafetyCast might jam an Emergency Alert System messages that are coming in. THAT FINAL ITEM: VOLUNTEERISM AND THE NYC MARATHON

For the last two weeks New York City Marathon Communications Coordinator Steve Mendelsohn, W2ML, has been sharing with us the behind the scenes story of how 411 hams move the race along. In our final part in this series Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ, takes a look at the volunteers that make it all hapen:

The ham radio communications effort for the New York City Marathon is volunteer driven. And, as with any event, volunteers do come and go. We asked the lead volunteer, Steve Merndelsohn, W2ML, to explain how this situation gets covered:

--
Audio only. Hear the newscast in mp3 at www.arnewsline.org
--

It's primerally the local clubs that supply the volunteer ham radio communicators. W2ML says that he has a special way of introducing them to what Marathon communications is all about:

--
Audio only. Hear the newscast in mp3 at www.arnewsline.org
--

And speaking about volunteers, we asked Steve what about his own role in all this. How much of his life does he devote to setting up this all volunteer communications effort? His answer may astound you:

--
Audio only. Hear the newscast in mp3 at www.arnewsline.org
--

And there you have it. An insiders look at the massive all volunteer ham radio communications network that literally runs the New York City Marathon. It's a view that only someone who has been there every year since Amateur Radio has been involved, can give.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ

Our thanks to Steve Mendelsohn, W2ML, for sharing his experiences with us, and with you.

Exactly. I found the 8556 plug-in, with a range of 20 Hz to 300 kHz, to be very handy when I was designing lowpass EMI filters (which usually have a cut-off frequency below 10 kHz or so, and increase in loss to maybe 60 dB by 100 kHz. The tracking generator could give me a quick look at the cutoff and slope, so I could tweak the circuit in real-time. It's also handy for acoustics, ultrasonic and vibration testing.

And the 141 has a plotter X & Y output, so you can drive an analog plotter to trace the curve using a very slow sweep speed.

So, where does it say anything about > auctions < ?

Licensed amateurs are permitted to buy, build, and sell amplifiers capable of operating on ten or twelve meters. If you were really an Extra class license holder you'ld know that.

Equipment is not illegal. Only certain uses of some equipment is illegal. It's a fact, Georgie-girl.

How much did you say you paid for your license?

Well he deserves whatever they dish out to him.
Jamming the police bands could cause great injury or death. But on another note, because what he did, doesn't mean that all Ham's are like him Doug or George, they are just losers, with no life really.

3659. RCI 2950 Clarifier/RIT not working

Hi all.
Looking for some help or tips on my Ranger RCI 2950.
The recieve clarifier doesn't work till the radio has been on for 1/2 an hour. This makes SSB impossible to use, because I can't make anyone audible. It seems to be stuck at one end, i.e 1khz too high, till in begins to work, and then sits at 12:00, with SSB audio perfectly acceptable.
To me, this would indicate a failing variable resistor on the front panel, i.e broken track till it gets warm. I have rigged an external variable to try and prove this, but to no avail.
I'd appreciate any suggestions as to why this may occur. I have searched back through google groups to see if the problem has been reported before, but it doesn't seem to.
When the radio is warm, and the clarifier then works, the radio is usable for about 1/2 an hour, and then the tx frequency drifts a little. Luckily I have some understanding operators nearby who have spent the time talking to me while continuously adjusting their rx clarifiers. The radio drifts on tx by about 2khz. The drift is not continuous, but moving all the time. Crystal frequencies are constant, and main Voltage regulator has just been changed. Apparently there is another voltage regulator which I need to check, to ensure PLL voltage is constant?
Help please!!!!

Radio is RCI2950 early version, 7 years old, with no mods from new apart from putting it on 11 MTRs.
Had new finals this year (routine maintenance)new volume control, plus display bulbs. Otherwise very reliale.

P.S I'm stuck using a President Lincoln till it's fixed. Great radio, but a nightmare in the car, no memories, and no illuminated buttons for night-operation. Can't use up/dn buttons on UK band either!
Cheers.

You may have some cold solder joints in the VCO area or on one of the cans. My alignment tech found that problem in mine. I didn't even know I had a problem until I sent it for it's 50,000 mile tune-up. He found a section that wouldn't align because an RF/IF transformer had a bad connection.

As Bill E. has always said, "To locate the problem block in a radio, do an alignment. The stage that won't tune is the culprit."

The newsgroup is a mess.

Who's fault is it?

Your resident tyrant TWISTEDHED'S, that's who.

Read his last post. Did it make any sense?

No.

You can see the man is out of control. He's paranoid. He imagines enemies.

Maybe he will even turn on YOU next.

You can see for yourself, he's a TRUE LOONY and will never stop his bufo onery. The flames will rage forever.

But there IS a way out. The conflict will cease totally WHEN THE PEOPLE OF REC.RADIO.CB DEMAND THAT TWISTEDHED LEAVE THE NEWSGROUP.

If he won't leave ON HIS OWN, then you can MAKE HIM simply by complaining to his ISP. Write to:

abuse@webtv.net

Tell them "twistedhed" fills the newsgroup with wild, off-topic, profane and argumentative posts - and you want him gone.

Make him leave, and you will enjoy peace and a revitalized rec.radio.cb.

No, it's an ISP account.

That's what is filling my e-mail box. As I do not send mail with that account, all those "bounce" messages can only be fake.

I cannot find a way to stop that ISP from accepting them in the first place, although I know that my usual e-mail addy will allow blocking by the ISP.

>Yahoo is much better. Only a few spams a week with no filters.

It will depend upon how well the addy has got known by spammers. Putting the addy in newsgroups and on Web pages is a good way to get spammed.
The one I have filling with Spam started receiving large amounts of the crap when another ISP took over the service... I'll bet they sold on information to spammers. I now only use it as a spam trap.

I got news fer ya, I chuckle at anyone stupid enough to interfere with police radio--or any other service for that matter. Licensed or not, he is STILL an idiot. It doesn't bother me to see a ham get popped-he gets exactly what he deserves. Go ahead and laugh, ridicule, whatever: he deserves it. Mr. Hollingsworth once told me and several hams in a group that, "You can't regulate STUPID". If someone going to be stupid, he'll be stupid.

And when these hams that shouldn't been hams in the first place get disciplined, fined, revoked, again, they got what they had coming.

As WE8E goes , believe it or not, I don't alway see/read every report on Rain.

Yup. Georgie-girl Busch has way too much time on his hands.

Send complaints to abuse@comcast.com and groups-abuse@google.com If they get enough complaints Georgie will have to go back to his AoL account (which he has claimed he doesn't have).

The newsgroup would be peaceful without Georgie-girl and DouGay stirring up trouble and pushing their homosexual agenda constantly.

LOL! Some people try way too hard. Comes from a sense of being owned...LOL.
What a weekend...blasting away on 27.555 with foreign DX, fantastic weather, yankees can't give me their cash fast enough, and poor WA3MOJ has had several internet communication breakdowns...life just doesn't get any better.
Life is great! Now, back to entertaining myself for another easy week in paradise......

Considering the 10-year license term:

How many of those 28,913 hams are still alive?

How many are still active?

And most importantly, how many are ARRL members (only ones who can vote)?

To see you gone from this NG by December 25 would be the answer to many prayers.

See here, Tipsy. These are the facts.

1. You DID spend time in San Francisco
2. In SF you DID give blowjobs, take acid, and go to jail
3. You DO beat your dog for sexual pleasure
4. You DO think stealing is admirable
5. You ARE an HF pirate in defiance of federal law
6. You ARE a hopeless blowhard and certified loony

You can dispute the above points all day long, but EVERYONE knows you are a sham. Why continue with the lies? Fess up, come clean, and then leave in shame, Twirted.

For the good of this newsgroup Twithed ought to say sayonara and waddle off into the sunset. As it is, he draws flames and acts like a buffoon. And he obviously doesn't care about what a mess he's making here. Of course no one can side with such an idiot, and he knows it.
His time has come. Goodbye, Mr. Twisted!

Any website i visit says the legal frequency range is from 26.965 to 27.405 MHz, and ch 40 IS 27.405 so it doesn't make sense to have another 40 channels present. Help meeee!

Sounds delicious. Now if only i knew what that meant...
I just bought a CB for fun so i can talk with my friends. Not having grown up in the CB-happy era, it makes me sad to see such a cool technology not being used. I wish everybody used them again. I missed all the cool times, like before the WWW existed and when it was cool to rollerblade and carry boomboxes.

ROTFLMFAO!!!! He forgot to change nics for me to see his offer. It doesn't matter no how, he wouldn't show up, it would be an enormous waste of money for me to fly to Allentown to have him no show. He would show up just like Doug did Mopar.
Hey, same type of offer "Doug" supposedly made to you, kind of coincidental, isn't it.

Hi All;
I found a few of these from about 1978-80 or so.
They were made by Hygain & MSRP was about $95.
Originally for a Sailboat but why not use it at home?
Boxes are sealed except this one which I had to open to take the pics.
Comes with all SS hardware & bracket, VHF/CB coupler, Paperwork.
Made of Fiberglass so it should withstand the elements nicely!
Price is $20ppd Conus.

3730. 95 Disco questions and problems

I just purchased a 95 Disco as-is from a dealer I work for.
I knew the power steering gearbox had a lean from one of the seals..
Well I drove it down the street and fueled it with 89 octane which i thought was the min neeeded for the disco..
Drove it one mile to a friends house where it got hard to start 30 mins later.
Actually it would not start and it seemed like it was not getting any gas..
So my questions
1) Has anyone had any problems with getting the key stuck in the ignition?
I seem to have that problem at the moment
2) Is it worth buying the remote entry fob for the disco? Mine didnt have it.
any idea on the going rate?
3) I was thinking of going to a new radio, perhaps something that was mp3 based, or just keeping the stock radio and using an apple itunes.. I remember reading somewhere that the Disco radio goes into an Amp somewhere, if I use a new radio, I should just use the RCA outputs then?

As a New Owner, I appreciate any assistance.

More amps sold today and guess what in the real world not your sick homosexual fantasy world. You see in the real world Anti Girls do not exist but since they already know this and are so hurt by not being noticed in the real world, they spend almost all of their waking hours on this thing called the newsgroups typing away their little cum soaked sweaty hands and fantasizing about homosexual acts and wanting attention and needing attention and so so lonely. Meanwhil in the real world guess what???
THE BEAT GOES ON!!!
Hey anti girl or girls...
Dont do any more google searches dont do any more ranting and raving dont do any more homo talk...
Just step out into the sunshine and see THE REAL WORLD!
You might like what you see but, if you dont you can always go back to that smelly room that is dark and dingy and wack off most of the day to your gay love dreams, another part of the day dreaming that you are doing anything positive at all for your so-called cause on this little newsgroup and last but not least watching those gay porn sites and videos in the privacy of your mother's basement where you EAT, SLEEP and DREAM!

26.965-27.405. 4 watts AM, 12 watts pep SSB. Any other operation is illegal.

RE the radio:

Make sure you have RCA Pre-outs on your new head unit. You can make a short lead that joins the loom to power the amp when you swap out the head unit.

I'm taking my Sony MiniDisc HU out this weekend, I'll take some pics of the wire mod from the RCA connectors.

Hi.

Don't mind the unhelpful responses... some people on this group seem to be anti-CB while others are too scared to fall in a Troll trap.

In America, there are 40 legal channels. On these channels you may either use AM or SSB.
As each channel can either hold one AM conversation or two SSB conversations, this means that you could effectively have 80 SSB channels. The frequencies covered are as you give above, and power is limited to 4Watts (plus 2Watts mod) for AM and 12Watts for SSB. As well as higher power allowed, SSB is more efficient - giving you a much greater distance.

However, the 80 channel radios you have seen are more likely to be 40 legal channels plus another 40 illegal ones. Any CB designed to cover illegal channels is illegal to use - even if using it on legal channels.
It is up to you how you feel about the law, but you should be aware that the punishment can be strict for those caught using illegal CBs.

Here in the UK, we have 80 channels, FM mode only. 80 channel sets were made legal a few years back, but only those manufactured and approved as such. Power in the UK is limited to 4Watts.

If you want more information, don't be afraid to ask and don't be frightened off by the attitude of some idiots on this newsgroup - CBers are generally friendly and helpful.

Regards,

Peter.

Hey DouGay: Note that all he says is that he > has < an amp. There's no indication that he > uses < it illegally. By all means, waste more of Riley's time; after all, it's only your tax dollars!

Allow me to quote from Part 95, Subpart D:

"95.411
(c) The FCC will presume yiu have used a linear or other external RF power amplifier if-
(1) It is in your possession AND
(2) There isother evidence that you have operated your CB station with more power than allowed in 95.410."

See? Possession is not a crime; only USE makes it a crime. Read it and weep, DouGay. I could have my entire house filled with all sorts of amplifiers and there'd be absolutely nothing that the FCC (or you) could do about it without evidence of use.

Once again, you're wrong, DouGay. How did you ever get your no-code Tech license without knowing anything? Bribe the VE like Georgie-girl did?

It has come to my attention that Dogie is having many other,,,er,,problems besides this newsgroup (A nod of acknowlegement to the good 'ol buckeye hammies).
N8WWM has set about ruining another reputation...KC8QJP.
The poor woman is almost beside herself with grief over her current selection of,,,uh,,,,the opposite sex. She has talked to friends AND Dogie about his behavior and even this newsgroup, she has even pleaded with Dogie, but selfish as the mole-looking creature is, he thinks of not her, but only of himself. It figures only Dogie could manage to cause a fight in his house concerning this ng....LOL.
This woman would be best served to separate and avail herself from this vile creature of filth and perversion before he drags her down to the point from which she may never recover. A reputation is much more difficult for a woman to repair than a man. N8WWM doesn't care about that, all he cares about is causing problems in rec.radio.cb, no matter who he hurts or drags down.
All that matters is his personal, angry, selfish, self-absorbed agenda.
This woman doesn't know the real N8WWM, but she's finding out a bit more with each passing day....she's in for one hell of a learning experience and the good word is she is already planning on leaving him.
Just reading his past posts and threats concerning his proneness to violence and one gets the feeling that it won't be long until he starts beating her, if he doesn't already. There are many avenues of assistance for this woman to turn to, both in the hammie community and at home. She needs not be intimidated by Dogie any longer. KC8QJP, get out while you can. He wouldn't dare hurt you with an entire community of hammies aware of the situation and watching intently. You go girl! Good luck to you.
You can do way better.

Your mild retardations and communication deficit prevent you from Really? Again,, which websites have you visited?

Speed limits only go to 70 MPH in the US. According to your logic, it makes no sense they go faster. Consider yourself helped, unless the analogy is lost on you. No cb is manufactured for sale in the US with more than 40 channels.

This may be true but I believe the real reason she may be leaving is because she has found out that DouGay has some of the same characteristics as Michael Jackson.

She has determined that DouGays tool, a little one at that, only becomes useful with the use of inappropriate stimulants. The same inappropriate stimulants that M. J. uses.

Well dana my man (or woman) I know the every mighty
F.C.C. won't mess with me. I've been running power
since the early 70's, and never had any problem.
Plus it's gonna be kinda hard to figure which house
it is, considering that my 3 immediate neighbors all
have antennas.
My original post really had nothing to do with the general population, it was about guys like Dennis, Sean, Toll-free, Painkiller, etc., etc.,
Hell even the Professor doesn't come out
anymore to throw in his one liners.
I just hope that all the wanna-be lawyers die
the death of brain cancer or some slow debilitating
disease.

Ok, thank you. But my logic isn't flawed, i think you misinterpreted what I said. If the forty channels consume every frequency in the legal range, it _logically_ doesn't make sense to have more channels because they would have to be on other frequencies outside the legal range... That's all i meant and thought.

But now it's been cleared up... thanks.

p.s. i went to some websites that appeared to be written by well-informed authors, i dunno, just ones i saw on google.

Weatherproofing Andrews Connectors

Sat, 16 Mar 1996

Hello OMs!

Does an Andrews Female N-connector that has been PROPERLY installed on Andrews LDF5-50 7/8 inch Hardline need to be sealed against moisture entry?

Here is my situation. I have a run of Andrews LDf5-50 terminating at the top of my tower. It has a CORRECTLY installed Female N type connector with the connector pointing straight up. Mted to the female connector is an Andrews manufactured jumper with a Male N-Type connector on LDF4-50 1/2 inch hardline. The coonector on the jumper points straight down into the female connector. The jumper has, what appears to be a plastic collar down about 3 inches of the half inch. When I installed this stuff last September I did not wrap it with tape or coax seal. At the time it appeared that both ends would be waterproof due to the design of each connector,etc.

Well, yesterday a new sustained winds record was broken here in the Greenville, SC area. The winds were clocked at 87 miles per hour, shattering the old record of 72 MPH. I spent 15 minutes indoors looking up at my towers and watching my antennas being tossed about like rag dolls. Fortunately there doesn't appear to be any damage and fortunately the winds all came from the same direction and my antennas were pointing in to them. What worries me is the possibility of rain water being forced by the winds around the Hardline connector seals. Having been in a Typhoon on Guam and seeing water pouring out of the electrical outlets after being forced into the A/C entry conduit by high winds, I wonder if the same will happen to a PROPERLY installed connector. Are the Andrews connectors designed with such calamities in mind? Would sealing the whole splice keep any trapped moisture from exiting? Or should I just leave it the way it is? Any thoughts? Thanks in advance.

... as you know, the Andrew connectors are designed to be pretty weatherproof by using tight tolerances and O-ring gaskets in a couple of places. It is ALWAYS a good idea to weatherproof any connector joint; in fact, it is done practically 100% of the time by professional installers.

The Andrew recommended method is:

1) Apply two wraps of electrical tape over the joint (I recommend Scotch 33 or 88 myself).

2) Apply a layer of butyl rubber vapor wrap over the joint making sure that there are no air cavities or openings in the wrap. BTW, this is BETTER than CoaxSeal.

3) Apply 2 wraps of electrical tape over the joint with the final wrap going UP to minimize water migration.

4) Somewhat optional -- coat joint with Scotch-Kote sealer. I've seen some guys use spray urethane over the joint. It's another layer of protection whichever you use.

This technique should be used with ANY outdoor coax joint. It'll last for years and when you take your razor knife and open the joint up, it'll be just like new inside.

>Hi, Steve. I've been doing the tape-ScotchKote-tape thing, but not the >vapor wrap. What is this stuff and where should I look for it?

Hiya, Steve --

Good question, actually. I didn't mean to be so hard on CoaxSeal (personally I don't care for it) but it will work in this kind of scenario. The problem is most guys apply it DIRECTLY to the connector which makes the connector unusable again. YUCK! Install the CoaxSeal OVER the first layer of tape and it will work.

As far as the butyl rubber vapor wrap, try the yellow pages for a local Andrew, DB Products or Antennas Specialists dealer; they should have it. The manufacturers always pack some in with some of there products but you may be able to get small quantities. Otherwise, check back with me a a few weeks --I may have some for you.

73 and good luck, Steve K7LXC

>What is this stuff, where is available and does it have a Scoth part #?

There are 2 tapes - Super 33+ and Super 88; 88 is about 20% thicker but they have the same properties. Any electrical supply store or electronic distributer that handles Scotch products will probably have them. They're $3-4 per roll but worth it. Do yourself a favor and don't use the "10 rolls for $1.99" hardware store specials.

>I know Scotch makes a "self-annealing" tape but I can't seem to find it anywhere in Northern new Jersey. Does anyone know the Scotch part # for this tape, too?

3M has a number of products in this line and I don't have the catalog. The phone number I have is an old one so I'll try to get you a number you can call to get additional product info.

>Let's see if I have this right: You apply a total of 5 layers of tape over the joint?

Well, four is usually sufficient but I was giving the Andrew spec. This is an bomb-proof, highly reliable industrial-standard weatherproofing technique. That's what you want in your tower and antenna system, don't you?
Sat, 16 Mar 1996

I have already researched this thread with 3M back in December. The product that you guys are looking for is Scotch 130C, Linerless Rubber Splicing Tape. It is a self sealing tape used in high voltage applications. Several of the PVRCers use this tape in lieu of Coax Seal.

3M will fax/send you the Product data sheet upon request:
1-800-364-3577 or 1-800-245-3573.

The Data sheet on the 130C shows that it is HV, moisture sealing, UV resistant, WX extremes functional, etc...

Walt,K2WK asks:

>I know Scotch makes a "self-annealing" tape but I can't seem to >find it anywhere in Northern new Jersey. Does anyone know the >Scotch part # for this tape, too?

I use either Scotch #23 Rubber Splicing tape (it is described on the package as High-voltage, Self-fusing, Insulating Tape based on Ethylene Propylene Polmers), or Scotch 130C Linerless Rubber Splicing Tape (again described as based on Ethylene Propylene Polymers). I'm told both of these don't stand up well to UV so they should be covered with two layers of Scotch #88. I normally don't cover the Scotch #88 with anything and I have had no problems. But I have also used Plasti Dip Spray-On over the #88 for connections that will be on or under the ground.

Sat, 16 Mar 1996

I have always been able to find the Scotch 130C and super 88, and bulk UV okay wire ties at Grainger. They have locations all over the place. If you work for someone that has an account with them, then you probably can buy at the wholesale price (I do).

73 de N1PBT...ron (rro Sat, 16 Mar 1996

3M has a home page that can help you identify and locate their products. Have a look at http://www.mmm.com if you have a graphical web browser. I tried to look up Scotch-Kote, but my text based browser doesn't work with 3M's search page. I can look it up from work on Monday if noone beats me to it.

Disclaimer: I work for 3M but don't have anything to do with tape.

Sat, 16 Mar 1996

Just a couple of additional thoughts on Steve's comments about sealing connectors.

>1) Apply two wraps of electrical tape over the joint (I recommend Scotch 33 or 88 myself).

Scotch 88 is really the all weather tape to use. Scotch 33 tends to get brittle in cold weather and has more of a tendency to lose its grip with time, weather, and just a little stretching. 88 is a little more expensive but I would never use anyhting else outdoors.

>2) Apply a layer of butyl rubber vapor wrap over the joint making sure that there are no air cavities or openings in the wrap. BTW, this is BETTER than CoaxSeal.

Butyl rubber tape is available from most good electrical supply houses.

>4) Somewhat optional -- coat joint with Scotch-Kote sealer. I've seen some guys use spray urethane over the joint. It's another layer of protection whichever you use.

I think Scotch-Kote is a waste of time if the connection is exposed to the sunlight. Within a year it has degraded from the ultra-violet and has pretty much flaked off (at least in Colorado). It is fine for direct burial, for which it is intended. I actually like Plasti-Dip, which is available from most hardware stores and is used to dip tool handles for insulating them. Use the black color for better UV resistence. It can be painted on (pretty thick goop) or there is a spray version as well.

For things like splitting out the pigtail lead of coax to hook to a sloper or a dipole (after the balun) I do a couple of layers of Scotch 88 with alternating layers of the Plasti-Dip by just dunking the end into a gallon can of the stuff. Put some masking tape over the terminal lugs to eliminate having to clean them off.

Another technique I use for weather proofing the pigtail ends of coax is to put some heat shrink over the entire length of exposed dielectric up to the point where the braid splits off. Then, taking a length of larger diameter heat shrink, I cut a little slot in the middle and place that over the jacket and heat-shrink-covered dielectric in such a way that the braid sticks out the little slot. I dip this whole thing into a thinned down version of Plasti-Dip (you don't need their thinner--it is just expensive paint thinner/mineral spirits). This thinned down material soaks into the braid--filling up the gaps to reduce the possibility of wicking moisture into the region between the braid and center conductor.

Yep, I know it is a lot of work, but how many times do you want to replace your coax because it got water inside and the losses sky-rocketed.

Thanks for all the responses guys! The answer is Yes. Extra waterproofing is needed for an absolute watertight seal. Every splice at my QTH is triple sealed with layers of electrical tape and Rubber sealing tape.(coax seal). This is the way I have always done it. This combo has always worked well for me. The N, PL-259, whatever, type connectors remain shiny and uncorroded when they are taken apart when sealed in this manner, even after years of use. There was a reason I chose to leave this particular joint unsealed except for the Andrew connector seals.

I don't remember why though. HI!

I climbed the tower earlier today and took the connector apart from the 7/8 and am happy to say that it was bone dry with no corrosion internally as far as I could inspect. I reassembled and sealed it using the proper techniques. I can say though that properly installed, genuine Andrew connectors do a good job of keeping the moisture out. I was certain that water would have made its way inside after those 87 MPH winds with rain that we had yesterday. Extra preventive measures never hurt. Thanks to all who responded with their personal experiences.

There are 40 channels, AM only. The channels are assigned based on the carrier frequency of an AM signal. There are also 2 sidebands per channel.

This is the result of rampant paranoia, fostered by the suspicion that anyone asking a question such as yours, is automatically a troll and just looking for trouble.

Sometimes this is the case, but if certain people appear abrasive, it's because they are.

Legal class "D" CB radios manufactured for the U.S. market are limited by law to 40 channels (Except older pre-1977 radios which were 23 channels).

There are radios made for the export market which have many more channels modes and power. They are very real, and even manage to find their way into the U.S. market (albeit illegally).

There is also questionable marketing literature which incorrectly refers to AM/SSB radios as having "120 channels", when in fact it's only 40 channels with 3 modes available on each channel. It's not the same thing.

I thought it wasn't and spent 3 months swearing every time I wanted just to get into the loadspace because the alarm was armed when I locked the driver's door. Found a place that sells the fobs, and does so cheaper than list (assuming you can get them), they come complete with instructions.
Check out www.remotekey.co.uk - great people. You'll need to know the frequency, which they can help you find out.

You posted with a bogus email address and you came out cursing. My guess is you're a troll that was likely relegated to a new supernews account who just had their last ISP canned for noncompliance of TOS, and my thoughts are usually 99% dead-on accurate, thanks to all my friends in this group who lend tons of support and play some of the lessers like cheap fiddles. If I'm wrong, you'll be around for awhile and my apologies will go out to you,,,but,,,I don't think I am....there is no reason to post without a valid email address unless you're A) looking to start something or B) hiding.
Spam is not a valid defense, as many have creatively figured out a manner in which to display their email addy while fooling the spam bots.,,,you're not one of them.

This message is to point out a few things (Its what I do best). The last several times Dave Hall posted, he was answering a "hit-and-run" newbie. A "hit-and-run newbie" , for those who do not know, is a shill, usually when one is talking to themself,,,it's usually a new phony posting name, obscured in the same juvenile manner (fake domain ALWAYS added) concocted by the poster, that never appears again. In all 3 of his last exchanges, said newbie came back and vehemnetly thanked Davie for "coming to his aid". LOL.....that polishing of the ego gets 'em everytime! This room ain't that big...LOL!

Sure was great to hear you guys today. Hey 102 MN, where the hell were you today, bud? All your neigbors were in there today for the duration. Upstate New York was pounding in here today, and I took it to 27, but forgot who it was I was supposed to be listenng for,,,,that's why I'm called Twisted. Shoot, between Gator and Charlie (LOL), the 'pile had it locked up...only one Texas station made it across my pond today and yes, he is a ng reg,,,and he is loud....not sure if I made it back to him or not! So sorry about steppin' on the high desert's neck like that, but honestly, I couldn't hear you and didn't even know you were alive until New Hampshire talked to you. No matter what he does, it's gonna be very interesting in cb and hammie land in Ohio. Poor Dogie can't handle the fame he chased for years. Northern Ohio hammies (and there are a BUNCH of them) are more than willing to assist when it comes to turning the tables on trash who would jam their frequencies repeatedly then vehemently deny all on usenet (exactly like his unprovoked, hostile and vile behavior in here for the last several years). It goes without say, the manner in which people post is more than likely the same manner in which they conduct themselves on air. No wonder hammie radio is in trouble.

It has been dedeuced, and illustrated, that you lie with malice on a

There is a difference. When N3CVJ says he knows a cber busted in Philly, but goes blank on details when questioned, that would be properly contsrued a lie, and in no way can be interpreted as an opinion, such as my statement can. Another example may be found in his statement that he was intimately familiar with N8's bust. Again, he clammed up when gently prodded for details concerning a topic "he" brought to us.
That you seek to infer otherwise illustrates your own agenda.

Of course not. See what you can learn when forced? That you would entertain otherwise concerning usenet illustrates you have a great deal more to go, grasshoppah.

I have come to conclusion that 99% of everybody on this message board is gay, queer, fag or how ever you want to put it. you cant say anything on here without somebody or someone calling you a dick sucker or some kind of a homosexual act, it happens everytime. I'm sure somebody will call me a dick sucker or something in that context after all this and that will just (prove) what I said is right. And that will also prove that homosexuality is what on your mind all the time. What you say is usually what you are thinking. So if you are thinking that you have to be gay. And try to have a good day.

Hey Steviefag, for all yer cryin and runnin yer mouth about "george" you are one fucked up motherhumpin hypocrite of a fag buffoon. Do you see the AKC posting info about Twathed's wife? Or yours? Then why all of a sudden do you feel the need to drag in innocent parties into the newsgroup cesspool you've created? You know you operate radio illegally, but you get pissed when someone calls you on it. You and that moron Landfag and his sissy sidekick Twathed can't handle being told what is, so you act like victims. You ain't fooling anybody

More amps sold today and guess what in the real world not your sick homosexual fantasy world. You see in the real world Anti Girls do not exist but since they already know this and are so hurt by not being noticed in the real world, they spend almost all of their waking hours on this thing called the newsgroups typing away their little cum soaked sweaty hands and fantasizing about homosexual acts and wanting attention and needing attention and so so lonely. Meanwhil in the real world guess what???
THE BEAT GOES ON!!!
Hey anti girl or girls...
Dont do any more google searches dont do any more ranting and raving dont do any more homo talk...
Just step out into the sunshine and see THE REAL WORLD!
You might like what you see but, if you dont you can always go back to that smelly room that is dark and dingy and wack off most of the day to your gay love dreams, another part of the day dreaming that you are doing anything positive at all for your so-called cause on this little newsgroup and last but not least watching those gay porn sites and videos in the privacy of your mother's basement where you EAT, SLEEP and DREAM!

Yawn!!! Correct, you are kill filed, but considering that both Doug and You have seen it fit to have a number of people's mail boxes filled with both Spam & virus's, I no longer use the S3Buell mailbox on a regular basis. So that is the reason for taking you out, watch you squirm while I have proved, once & for all that you are George Busch WA3MOJ@AOL.COM

> lie #2 what proof is it that i made those complaints I am not george > busch, and someone could have complained > knowing you will think it is me

Nope, you are him. I can not send a complaint to AOL, from my SBC account and say, " I am George Busch WA3MOJ and someone is using my AOL account.
No ISP will take that for real and YOU must be the owner of the screen addy, they will not accept e mail from another addy saying that. Ask them George, you know that, along with everyone else.

But I'm not forging people, kind of like when you did oldman@aol.com.
LOL!!!, why are you reporting me if it's not you?

> if

Nope, not a chance. Again, I am maintaining my S3Buell mailbox for about another month
then it's bye bye.

1st warning I've ever had, LOL!!! well worth it to prove George Busch WA3MOJ@AOL is a Troll.............. Please flame on, I'm going to be busy the rest of the weekend, going over to family's for the next few days.

Get a few bubble packs of FRS radios, set them all on same frequency and same CTCS tone and you'll all be able to communicate within a 2 mile radius. I'd suggest getting identical radios so they'll all be the same setup steps. you might try the FRS usenet group for suggestions on which ones are better and easier to setup. thats alt.radio.family.

good luck on whatever you decide. happy holidays

Oh great, now you've done it -- Twisty is never going to believe that you use

And despite any bona-fide proof to the contrary, he'll defend his delusions with through some profane and/or morally offensive posts using aliases that are even 3893. canadian gun control

From: gw@webhideout.com
Message-ID: <235a74db.0311271249.7d2777df@posting.google.com>
Source record: 170477

Tuesday Nov. 25, 2003 3:45 p.m. EST
Confirmed: Canada's Gun Registry Costing $1 Billion

The head of the Canadian firearms centre admitted that, indeed, as reported in Newsmax magazine months ago, the cost of Canada's problem-infested gun registry will run taxpayers north of the border over a billion dollars by next year.

This is the first time that the Canadian government has admitted that this boondoggle will carry such a price tag.

Auditor General Sheila Fraser predicted that costs would be this high in her caustic report of last year, and officials have now admitted almost $50 million in "indirect" costs of the program that they have now been forced to add to the total of $766 million through the beginning of this year alone.

The government has had to add another $128 million for the program this year, bringing the total to $941 million.

And Alliance MP Garry Breitkreuz, an outspoken opponent of the troubled program, says there are future costs, that have not yet been taken into account, which will bring the total well over a billion dollars.

"This is going to go over the $1-billion mark a full year ahead of schedule, and most of it is due to the astonishingly poor management of the program," he said.

"This tells us the thing is out of control beyond what the government even led us to believe originally. The spending on this thing is considerably worse than the auditor general found," Breitkreuz added.

hmmm.....is that canadian dollars or american???? maybe we should learn some things from our socialist brethern north of the border.....

Ignore Stewart, he doesn't like FRS radios. He'll make you spend more money to find MURS equipment. While MURS can travel farther, there are other variables to consider, too much for a short message.

Not quite everyone... some do not post often, because there is little worth replying to. If you check back through the replies, you should see that I tried to be helpful.

Some trolls are on this group. They will post messages just to anoy people and start arguments. Sometimes they will post on both sides of the "fence", just to get it started.
Some bait any CBers on here, while others bait the Trolls and "pro-legal" people. If you don't like the game they are playing, filter them and the naff messages out and just read the real CB posts - there are not many.

Due to all this baiting, some people see a post which refers to legal issues and think that it is just the "antis" baiting CBers. Sometimes you just have to take the risk, assume it is real, and give a real reply.
There are some Yahoo groups that deal with CB, and they are generally clear of abuse as offenders will be booted off.

Regards,

Peter.

934Mhz, but I would suspect that they can be modified for Ham use.
For a list of the 20 frequencies...

Before we get girlie screams from the "antis"...
As the sets were designed, built, and imported to UK spec at the time, they can be legally owned and modified for Ham use here in the UK.

They took it away to make use for mobile 'phones - which have now moved on.
Some people still seem to use them, although it is illegal.

Twist your head this waya little more. This is the game you introduced reminders to remain on topic all the time, yet you need to make me your world and topic. Dogie began the game of such off-topic delights,,,, I'm just a little better at it than he is. KC8LDO isn't even a factor anymore..he's what you call "Dead Air" (hyuk)! KC8QJP really taking it to ya' eh? LOL. If you had an ounce of brains, decency, or integrity, you wouldn't find yourself experiencing such strong feelings of self-hatred and low self-esteem of which you need to project onto and blame others for your malady.

What do you think about N8WWM and KC8QJP's behavior? One's a convicted felon, and you know what N8WWM has done in here AND on the air (courtesy of the FCC and the Rainreport) ....common sense and decency dictates such lowlife behavior is not easily altered,,,appears these two make we already know your thoughts concerning myself, what are your thoughts

Actually, I rather prefer you continue to share your long reign of impotence, nicely illustrated by pointing to all your suspended accesses to the group for continually violating rules like all antisocial and sociopathic individuals. Hundreds of impotent cries like the one above, yet not one access remains.

You should take care of that temper of yours..its responsible for your downfall but not your ignorance. Toodle.

Deadly suppositions
http://www.rationalreview.com/rlwrights/112603.shtml

/ / That's right. American troops are now being used to destroy private property of "suspected Iraqi guerrilla fighters." What happened to requiring proof before depriving someone of "life, liberty, or property" as stated in our own Constitution? Evidently that does not apply to people we attack so that we can bring them our way of life. \ \

GO F*CK YOURSELF, MR. PRESIDENT
http://www.antiwar.com/justin/j112603.html
/ / We must act, even if the threat is nonexistent - because of the potential danger. If "self-defense" consists of necessary "preemption," then what would happen if we started acting on this Bushian principle domestically? After all, killers, robbers, and rapists don't announce their intentions, politely putting us on notice before they strike. Why not just jail them before they have a chance to commit a crime? This principle, if applied within the U.S., would lead straight to totalitarian rule. Applied abroad, it means perpetual war. \ \

I Know When Bush Is Lying: His Lips Move
http://military.surfwax.com/files/Weapons_of_Mass_Destruction.html

/ / The Bush regime's panic is reflected in its adoption of Israeli revenge tactics, using F-16 aircraft to drop 500lb bombs on residential areas called "suspect zones".... ...Lianne Seymour, widow of the commando Ian Seymour, said: "They misled the guys going out there. You can't just do something wrong and hope you find a good reason for it later." \ \

War Propaganda
http://www.currentconcerns.ch/archive/2003/02/20030228.php

/ / In other words, the military actors and politicians are totally blinded by the "war on terrorism" dogma. Truth is falsehood and falsehood is truth. Realities are turned upside down. Acts of war are heralded as "humanitarian interventions" geared towards upholding democracy. Military occupation and the killing of civilians are presented as "peace-keeping operations." The repeal of democracy is portrayed by General Franks as a means to providing "domestic security" and upholding civil liberties. \ \

http://www.bushdraft.com/

/ / With the threat of 56% of troops not re-enlisting Bush is going to need a draft unless he changes his policies soon. I'm sure you agree, I'm sure you don't want your friends, family and coworkers drafted either. To fight for what? freedom? When George Bush passed the Patriot Act and now the Patriot Act 2 he took away many of the rights that we cherish so much. Why are we "bringing freedom" to the Middle East when Bush has shredded the constitution and taken away our freedoms at home? It doesn't make any sense. \ \

This is why I plead with armed Americans to kill the unarrested bush for the love of children everywhere. Look, we know directly who the bushites are who PUBLICLY advocate the murder of innocent People through corporate censorship, who support furthering the demon antiChrist's senseless crimes against my America, and our World. Example: You'd think Art Bell figures none of his listeners could in no other way, learn of traitor bush murdering thousands in New York City, and his contemptuous silence on the issue forbidding anyone else from publicly mentioning it. I have dominated alt.fan.art-bell for years, while Art Bell, like Canada's Peter Warren, will continuously advertise open line calls, but abruptly end calls topicing on KNOWN FACTS surrounding their evil false deity bush, 9/11, Iraq, depleted plutonium, Halliburton, and the deaths of our innocent lives fallen to their personal inaction depicting our community as uninterested. Art Bell in FACT has pre-screened his "open line" calls since bush stole power, and does so, to make appear Americans aren't clued in, on the now hundreds of thousands of innocent lives bush has murdered as war criminal. A good nazi bushite, is a dead nazi bushite, halted from advocating further war crimes constituting the murder of our innocent families. The dumfuk bushite parasites have been PURPOSEFULLY blowing themselves up with mined cluster bombs as suicide bombers! Not dying for any noble cause, but to only further toll more American Patriot lives. We should ask all soldiers, who are they loyal to, the 9/11 perpetrating American cop killer bush, or the People's America, as so enshrined by the Bill of Rights, and true Justice to actually protect the freedom of US people by following a leader?

These OUTNUMBERED and OUTGUNNED nazi bushites are indiscriminately bombing residential communities with radio-active toxic waste for nothing but to please their evil false deity, Our Mr bush Jr.. No rational reason but for a hatred to Your Humanity, and God if you believe.

Example: that evil nazi terrorist buford blount confesses to murdering thousands of innocent Iraqi People for nothing, no reason he proudly professes as wicked evil heinous traitor. Think of the lives You could save Patriot, by justly killing the unarrested buford blount, on hopes a person to take his place could at the very least consider being honorable in defending Your America? Demon buford blount is truly the enemy to American soldiers, for, if your family was murdered by buford blount irrationally commanding mindless bushite soldiers for nothing but to further rob the dying American tax payers, would you not too, spend your will hunting the evil nazi fuck down personally to spare further another innocent family suffering? To kill the unarrested unAmerican buforld blount is to stop him from ordering the practically dead already, nazi dumfuk treasonous bushite brethren teens, from victimizing again US as the innocent undefended.

While CNN still insists it's better for them to misinform and ignore, than to expose the demon bush as the true target for any Patriot's rage. American soldiers are being sacrificed to die for no known good reason, but for bad leadership as evil bushite war profiteers.

House Nixes Anti-Profiteering Penalties In IraqSpending Bill

http://www.senate.gov/~feinstein/03Releases/warprof103103.htm

/ / "When the Senate Appropriations Committee considered
this supplemental request, Senators Leahy, Feinstein,
and I joined together to criminalize war profiteering -- price gouging and fraud -- with the same law that was passed during World War II. Yet this amendment, was stripped out of the final bill," said Durbin. "I fail to understand how anyone can be opposed to prosecuting
those who want to defraud and overcharge the United States government and the American taxpayers." \ \

/ / The Constitution cites "high crimes and misdemeanors" against the state as grounds for impeachment. Could there be any higher crime against the American people than to have knowingly deceived us in order to stampede us into an act of barbarism that has betrayed our finest ideals, our highest ethical standards, our national honor, and our whole history? \ \

Here's what a bushite's granmom's tax payment is going towards, minus the 1.5 billion per month of 4 that is secretly STOLEN by the bushmob as something Americans are forbidden to know of through their corporate news censorship stealing their very own demeaned values,

ACK! This Scripps Howard piece is missing from our internet world!

Hmmm.. now looking... this following is an archive of official corporate news sources, of

Anyway, the cash breakdown of the criminal thefts of Iraqi assets

The best evidence to kill bush quickly.

Demon bush "These terrorists target the innocent, and they kill by the thousands. And they would, if they gained the weapons they seek, kill by the millions and not be finished. The greatest threat of our age, is nuclear, chemical, or biological weapons in the hands of the terrorists, and the dictators that aid them. The evil is in plain sight, the danger only increases with denial."

Remember: Demon bush doesn't forget signing his soul to the invade Afghanistan plan by not following the 911 evidence, but would top secretly attribute to Laden for blame, authored by himself, rumsfeld, Condoleeza, and General Ahmad two days prior to the public event of murdering "thousands" in wealthy corporate America, a secret plan that has been confessed publicly to US as fully implemented by the White House right from the start to Jim at MSNBC, months after the fact when the demon antiChrist was caught with American blood in his breath.

Not to follow the criminal leads surrounding evil bush
as mass murdering antiChrist, is what the White House confesses to Americans today as official policy under every circumstance. Karma. Demon bush tells corporate america that they'll persecute the innocent in any country by denying our fundamental human rights of Freedom and Justice, while now dropping 2000 pound bombs in God's World containing children, while corporate nazi bores, report in judgement of the great King who MAY have cuddled some cute boy! Jackson has given so much to America in stone, and in return, the corporate news nazi bushites sit condemning a great man whose open vulnerability gives him his wondrous strength and power as true American artistry. While these very same treasonous corporate bushite news anchors refuse to report on tommy franks running death squads against school girls, Guantanamo's Taliban's Girl School teacher Mozam Begg whose family served proudly for generations in the British Military, or tomorrow if YOU don't help US speak out publicly, continue refusing to report the general murder of civilian populations by the godless evil nazi bushite traitors. A good bushite, is a dead bushite halted for advancing their murder rampages against our innocent families irrationally. Demon buford blount, who runs like the nazi coward he truly is from my challenge to a death match, confesses to murdering thousands of US People for no military objective, but to get killed those that serve as bushwhored slaves under him to take his cowardly place instead, a die hard bushite nazi traitor. No government in Iraq would give WorldCom and Halliburton a blank check because they care too much for The People, nor certainly would they not, steal helpful Humanitarian Aid from poor people to pay the fraudster commi double billers, Halliburton again, nor either or, dump radio-active toxic waste on themselves to help bush's re-election campaign get off on murdering Americans for financial pain as God betrayers to US all. KILL BUSH NOW! Remember: a bushite soldier hides behind an American uniform, while knowing the bushmob has likely robbed their very own family of their savings and vital protection. Weak and cowardly, stupid and murdering innocent People for the demon antiChirst as their false deity parasite they are dying for TODAY as. I HATE bush as much as any real man would. The bush demon sells his Satanism by offering NO skills required to be dishonorable and dishonest, no reading newspapers, or feeling the pulse of the plundering nation required while ransacking the faithful. While these corporate news experts and CNN and CBC censor pleads from Humanity paying the wages of evil bush's wars against freedom and God, Justice and America, denied our corporate news coverage to be my primary lonely concern mostly it seems sometimes, as too, how terribly it truly is for life whose love isn't appreciated by our will anymore as the living in america, oh yeah, I mean America.

As an American then, what life will you forsake where bush'll rob you over and over as the never living for something better? These american bushite nazi fuks, think your gonna wash their feet, and instead of defending yourself and family, just turn the other cheek right before the bushites drop a two thousand pound bomb or two on your innocent neighbor next door? Done for nothing but feeding the bushmob?, as unarrested buford blount contends in God's presence? Then to think, buford blount figures I as a real man will not seek him out one to one to the ends of this universe for payback.

What can God do to help, if your refuse to help yourself? The true danger to America increases with American doubts on bush's blatant, true naked evilness, or humoring God as Johnny, and betting on yourself for a change by supporting me as the time being? Look, what could you do for your freedom, when I demand the pursuit of Justice by following evidence to truly protect this World we share? Support my demand to raise the news media's ignorance on what you shout even louder?

Think this: demon bush makes no public mention of where almost half of the monthly 4 billion dollar tax payer bill is quietly disappearing while grandma loses her cable television, or only grandson? Is that Leadership
I ask every American Soldier to be brave and forward this letter on terrorism to your fellow comrads secretly. Then, we'll see...

One More Thing

So, that demon bush, the American cop killer and his cohorts, are continuing to work destroying Humanity's gains in civility, by evilly dividing Our humanity with their blatantly open criminal intent to murder untold millions as US innocent, and as of yet, have not been executed by American Patriots for mass murder of God's Family in New York City. Traitors to US all on 9/11 without contention, for Our truth speaks as Ourselves, and witnessing just CNN's silence on General Ahmad, speaks volumes on their contempt for US as worthy of Justice. Refusing to do what is good for Humanity by offering the central facts as publicly recognized by Our Police Agencies to be actually documented. According to the FBI: the vacationing General Ahmad financed the alleged 9/11 mastermind, Atta, and also developed the criminal war strategy against Afghanistan with the bush administration, to boost the heroin trade, and save Enron to commit further frauds against American soldier families, while murdering over a hundred thousand

American flag wavers, and then leaving US for further ruin with plans to continue on against 59 more countries in the same deceitful illegal manner against all Churches, as an evil nothing short of eternally crowning Our Mr. bush Jr., the super evil anti-Christ, the most hated and despised parasitic murderer in the entire annals of Humanity's History. Cool eh? Kill bush now! Why?

The bushmob have done nothing short of confessing to the entire terror event, but for jokes on our strained credulity to publicly press for further stalls. With the rights of kissinger left to be a public investigation official? (Gee, thanks for highlighting your partner like that for US bush, you nazi dumfuk.) Mr. bush Jr.'s america destroys themselves without Love for wisdom, or respect for intelligence as a Peace plan initiative. We publicly witness the blind and tormented dying bushmob slave whore charade, of contempt for living free in Our names. The two evil doers, bush and sadistic nazi rotten rumsfeld, are known publicly as documented, to continue leveraging the ignorance of the CNN ready to be broadcasted repeatedly, tranced dimwit marines, the true dumfuks of this world as weak and pathetic cowards to themselves as their own brothers they watch murdered for bush helplessly, communicated in CNN's un-American false image as the evil bush nation hiding in falsehoods as death squad recruiters against the practically defenseless as unarmed children, nazi vermin criminals, being unbiased as Blitzer about protecting your freedom Patriot, to lose your real life savings reader, truly too weak and stupid to stand up in protection for the flag as the living American Dream for anyone. Because witness again, CNN keeps not saying Justice is important as principle to hold our reflections.(CrossFire is getting better though.) Fortified behind locked doors in their bombed out bunkers, Blitzer and Hemmer sit rooted for the evil side to lose further to themselves by continuing to not respond to our communication know how. America, the People, rarely gain press time coverage as should be top priority always, while being paraded publicly as sold out as not deliberated, corporately represented as privately principled to stay ignorant of Justice to protect living personally, as actually worth something to the bottom line. Yours. Brought down Hell bound as cheated by corporate news america's valueless interest in the price of your living to continue on our behalves. What does CNN think of 2% Social Security? cheating a Soldier's Grandmother to pay tithes to the bush demon as criminal dictator?, american nazi death squads?, insider stock trades?, arming bush's heroin partners?, rotten rumsfeld and bush murdering devout corporate cultists like a would be, still silent Hemmer?, no opinion? Or the working for the People in our names OFFICIALLY, as the FBI and CIA officers actually involved in uncovering the evil bushmob deeds, like the warrant sabotage, Odigo, stolen passports of alive so called highjackers as once American trained as still Saudi pilots, or Anthrax made to look Muslimized, is not failure to connect the dots ever, or insufficient funding then is not less payment for our law enforcement now to nab the prime suspects. As Mueller, or mueller has not publicly commented of, but to say, he hasn't seen or heard anything of this police work, leaving the FBI unrepresented publicly as a threat by himself as a terrorist supporter, an devout member of the bushmob cartel. Why?, we must investigate Mueller if we should have him arrested for publicly obstructing the FBI asking the important questions. IT IS THE FBI, not pissant mueller, WHO CONCURES THE BUSHMOB'S AHMAD FUNDED ATTA. Or how about the dumb ass Ashcroft assault against every American to save his embarrassment of being completely unqualified and never elected?, no concern to mention on this either? Who suffers for CNN's refusal to demand Enron give back the billions that were criminally stolen from all American Families still sitting in the Cayman Islands? My God.

Somebody call the cops.. again!

I have personally spoken to hundreds, and written thousands regarding bush's guilt, and we can't seem to find any fault with what I am saying... How about You? Check out usenet group, "us.military.army" on the internet to see for US all, what questions if any are asked. Know also, CBC and CNN management staff will not contribute their disagreement as none present, but for continuing disregard for Your interests during Our news cast of the facts. THINK. I tell gun clubs, police officers, Biker gangs, and the general public to kill bush today for 9/11 and his death squads, against the helpless and undefended while arming heroin dealers and selling terrorist handbooks, with all the evidence one would need or asks for, and CNN with CBC corporate management does not, to my knowledge, call Our Police agencies to complain about my free speech capabilities, or will allow US public discussions with Our History as documented. Why? Those nazi bastards, Walter Issacson, Robert Habinovitch, and the two Coast to Coast godless vermin parasites know personally, they propagandize our communities with deceit to keep us divided as the plundered and murdered for the private banker buildings who sell weapons in bush's name to kill the innocent as ourselves unheard from. I can barely survive watching US ignore them as King to this World, my sweetie baby sugar dumpling, but, I think it's time to let Arron Brown in on a little secret... Johnny wants a word with his living responsibility to Americans on Patriotism. Instead of what we currently witness, a reluctance to not relentlessly pursue the truth to provide US the facts, (Look, it's true, Johnny has an ass.) but a censorship of control to falsely prop up the unelected nazi war mongering criminal, Our Mr. bush Jr., a terrorist of tyranny through criminal impropriety in violation with the American Constitution as a death bringer heroin dealer, at a seating that truly holds no vacancy, nor a Buddha, but a deception to plainly hide, the actual, got to be for real, super evil anti-Christ of all religion ever mentioned. Wow eh, even gentle jolly Buddha wants bush squashed! Seriously, please kill the bush demon to save US as victims friend. Justice must prevail as is truth eternal, that of what will be as God is.. just how many more as Humanity will be sacrificed in cowardice for the evil bush demon, before an American Patriot kills the mortal nazi dictator for treason as an American cop killer, and betrayer to all of our Humanities? Don't let tomorrow's news story be about Your murder as another, no longer heard from bush victim. For, my reason is as evidenced to actually be known, easily, while the CNN corporate cult product lies to themselves as Our public fact finders to leverage more ignorance than is found now.. as Our public voice to suffer by criminal dictates to destroy God as life giver. Fuk you america.

Heaven is on the Horizon.

We can teach ourselves as the uninformed by CNN standards to misinform and ignore. CNN's continuing silence on Ahmad, bush and rotten rumsfeld, only supports further our claim in their contempt for American Soldiers, and Our Families as not represented as worthy business investment. God, don't you just love me? Hemmer?

Mr. bush's publicized war strategy of no evidence requirement to hold American convictions for murdering Ourselves is evil all around everywhere, as understood without question to every honest Cop, the most serious of all criminal behaviors, of which, they carry guns for in just this sort of political development to halt reoccurrences. But bush, the anti-Christ, as america, says no for ALL Americans, they can no longer hold onto Justice as their own with him in their charging everyone as the enemy bush refraction. Just like, "bomb wherever" tommy franks would do with his own American family death squaded, like he did intentionally to our children, as his contempt for America will never stifle our voice with his silence regarding our aimed veracity to seek out and destroy the evil nazi bushmob fuks individually with God as Justice Supreme. The True American Way, for, the rare and few Marines, the one or two, are with US loyally to know so. See, there was a time when the Marines were taught diligently, so much so it was proudly ingrained as the moral fiber of their character, that an American Soldier's responsibility to America was to defend the Constitution as the Freedom to be America, with their lives if need be to protect their soul brothers as family, for the greater good by God, (just like the Taliban Rule Man) while today, Ashcroft, albeit muted, murmurs as rotten rumsfeld chuckles, Americans must instead as slaves give their lives unthinkingly as cowardly evil war criminals to protect the unelected bush mobster from criminal arrest for mass murders in New York City, and stealing that 50 billion, seeing that that stupid Justice thing in the American Constitution and Bill of Rights idea has now got to go instead of evil bush as demon traitor war monger, terrorist recruiting false god anti-Christ, but that aside... There is a guide book for leadership in the American Marines entitled, "Guidebook for MARINES", and inside, it contains 14 principles to strive for as an American Soldier wanting to be a True Patriot as leader of Soldiers prepared to die for love of country, and our fellow man as friend or stranger, and here they are:

Integrity, Knowledge, Courage, decisiveness, Dependability, Initiative, Tact, Justice, Enthusiasm, Bearing, Endurance, Unselfishness, Loyalty, and Judgement.

For integrity it states:

"1. Integrity. The stakes of combat are too high to gamble leadership on a dishonest man. Would you accept a report from a patrol leader who had been known to lie? Of course you wouldn't. All your statements, official or unofficial, are concidered by your men to be plain, unadorned fact. Make sure they are. When you give your word, keep it. There are people depending on you to come through with the goods."

Now, I could go on further about what kind of lifeless degenerate a lawless cowardly mute soldier in bush's nazi death squads would have to be, to serve under bush as slave and traitor to home and family, as against God, the Flag, and all that we represent as equals through Justice, but I won't.

Mr. bush's america is uncontrollable by anyone. CNN figures if they never mention US, we'll never know who was invited as participators. (Example: CIA officers have had to PUBLICLY contact British News Services as the CIA, (Never done that I know of likewise before), regarding American interests in apprehending the TRUE 9/11 culprits ignored by american corporate dictates, and tenant also. One should remember, bush and rumsfeld would want to secretly murder any persons involved in 9/11 to clean up the huge crime scene, and tenant, is no brave and True Christ like figure as a living person, so what can we expect in all reality? Tenant will pay dearly if the evidence further indicates, as his continuing silence does label him already a willing traitor to all America, as too, his personal meeting with 9/11's Ahmad just prior seems suspicious also as not mentioned by himself in defense, along with his refusal to disclose the insider stock trades while leaving the fine CIA officers personally involved in the dark, as abandoned American Patriots, armed and ready to defend America as they should immediately for themselves, by executing bush and rumsfeld as terrorist cop killer, drug running freedom haters.)

America's false deity, the super evil anti-Christ, Our Mr. Bush Jr., doesn't think for me to be sacrificed without opinion by John, for I am free to act for my own beliefs as understanding, as I live in defense for living as all things created I am of honestly, simply amazing God is. However, I, as any truly living person would, can't help hate Our Mr. bush Jr. to death for what he and rotten rumsfeld is criminally doing, and further proposing against Our living in my name as unheard from dying without cause as murdered, but for bush's criminal contempt for my Awesomeness to beg once again friends, someone out there please, for the Love of Yourself and God, help US destroy Our Mr. bush Jr. quickly before he kills more as Ourselves unrepresented by corporate values in our commitments to freedom for living through Justice for all persons. Our Mr. bush Jr. has indiscriminately murdered more than 100,000 innocent souls with only a contemptuous smirk to his credit, while fully committed to more robbing and heroin dealing by blaming Laden for whatever without any evidence. Leaving Our true willingness silenced by corporate demands to propagandize and censor our truths, allowing bush, the dumfuk traitor, to continue demonizing America into a hell hole of ignorance through his hatred for life, Science and Nature. CNN's silence for America regarding the bushmob publicly stealing from their Own Family their freedom of Rights to be living, while committing Americans to a dictatorial crime ridden government, that bush and rumsfeld proclaim, is no longer applicable to the Law of any Land, is an abomination against Christ as living is Ourselves Being. America isn't America anymore, it's the bushmobbed universe of injustice and blind self hatred against all of Humanity, committed to leave none to survive but as slaves to be terrorized for the dummy bush demon as their false deity, a traitor in my midst, disguised to no one but himself as personally expendable. Again, where are the American Patriots we all hear so much about in the big screen to take down the seriously anti-American demon bush monster cop killer heroin pusher for treason, as all understood widely now factually with evidence and everything? Kill the war criminal evil doers, bush and rumsfeld today and be loved by yourself to be of Human Nature, or hunker to hell as a coward and betrayer to yourself and your own family, while watching the bushmob openly rob and murder further from our World, and on all of which we stand strong united. Justice for You.

This living plan of mine empowers others to learn their Rights as eternally established to be Kings and Queens on equal footing to be as all in all of gods forever dreaming, while demon bush intends the destruction of individual freedoms while robbing and murdering Americans from the inside, like sharon with US Jews does, as underrepresented, a condemning onslaught on Your better Judgement as reasoned on anything factual they figure blindly to be spinable, without your word contested. Your God Given Living Rights my friend. Without a rule of Law principled in the fashion of Justice for all to be sought as measured, bush's nazi amerika will continue to suffer ourselves needlessly for their corporatized self contempt in Our living Humanity as censored, without a thought for Justice, or the American Bill of Rights as God acting out eternally for prophets to wonder endlessly. See, I came up with this wacky Idea one day to make all my equal as self created to be so normally, in this Universe as we exist for Happiness ultimately as eternal, so, You or i will work this challenge to speak out for ourselves as Creation about bush's america, and it's responsibility as publicly advertised, to gather the facts on who suffers for bush's criminal misdeeds, and overall ignorance on everything. Mr. bush's irresponsible tax scam for example, is to put America's public money into the hands of private bankers, as the extremely rich already, while taking money away from those who spend the highest percentage of their paycheck on basic necessities as a gambled to be advertised, "stimulation package". HOW? The HOW is never explained with understanding as clearly regressive like the bush rule is, because.. Who spends MORE in taxes as investment at the grocery store to pay the cashier for his babysitter: 20,000 volunteer Janitors all named Rich, who ride the bus for convenience, or a mechanical billionaire private bank machine operator, who doesn't earn any nation's moola by working something for it?, and couldn't eat 20,000 cans of re-fried beans at one cruise lining to timbucks three without losing themselves, havening his tax manner over take in YOUR luxury. See, when America prints more money at the Treasury to give Greenspan to loan BACK to the Government illogically, the dollar value falls for everyone as investor, inflation, let alone the incurred bogus debt owed with real sweat as labor. Clearly, to every informed citizen not as democratic. Of course, National corporate news America, is genuinely not trying as capable by themselves to commit The living interest in Government as ourselves with oversight to manage US fiscally responsible, (like CNN regarding Justice and the Congress, or no Chomsky ever, E. Ann Clark as geneticist, or just research for experts as example), so, we do indeed, live in trying times due to ignorance as corporate america's disrespect for wisdom saught as yearning. It's like private bankers don't want the public to think about what we are doing as worthwhile knowing, eh? Or, I'm the only one on this planet who can almost read my own writing as the, one of a kind, good boy God freak. Anyway, the bushmobster scam leaves less finite wealth for all as taxable exchanges, while suggesting disposing of what dwindling national resource can be obtained, be given to create further debt by devolving into a military apparatus to make more enemies. Our Mr. bush Jr. is just plain stupid as destructive to everyone, but especially Americans to not stand up in defense of Ourselves. (Officially, rotten rumsfeld's criminal plan, "P2OG", is to encourage terrorist acts against Your Family, but you guessed it, not up to CNN's standard to report US as viable news material.) It's like saying fewer people educated, will keep us stupid enough as a Nation to blame the weak and poor as ourselves deprived till death as murdered, and,

bush says makes sense secretly, as the all knowing for the blind and ignorant to faith in without thinking about what money is either. Our Governments should always be working to make the poor richer as a successful representation of our will as the public to improving our living condition, but the dumb and ignorant, talentless and monosyllabic, believe, someone else must be cheated and devalued, divided and murdered, in their universe for them to succeed without effort, or skill whatsoever.. Especially defense. Have you ever heard of the rock solid certainty of Universal "inverse variation" constants? (Canadian High School.) This is why in America, in a time where the nation was more literate as informed, Corporations were taxed at 85% and were happy about it for themselves as American citizens. It's understanding also, most as almost all of the most wealthy multi-nationals competing from military dictatorships against American minimums, run in continuous private bank debt, (your savings and pension as leveraged weaker being the entire Nations) but gross billions in profits. 99.9% of every private bank building in the Western World is mortgaged, not however in Iraq, or the Muslim World where interest is not charged on good standing loans made in Our names. (Sideline: Now recollect bush's puppet forcing Afghanistan to borrow from the World Bank for terrorist handbooks and heroin junkets, but not food, shelter or clothing, while spending in addition, 4-5 billion a month in godless bushfuked american Patriot Dollars, American Celeb Dollars, American TAX PAYER Dollars, to run deaths squads with tommy franks against teachers and children.) It's a strange idea to the dying to be corporately driven without thinking because, you wouldn't automatically think it could be more profitable to stay in cheaper as serviceable debt being a brick building, but it is by private banker swindle with National inflation succeeding personal interest rates. We lose personal wealth to the pirate banker fees without even privately using their/OUR National currency services, because truly, we can't go somewheres else. As of course in america, an Enron can always be pulled, where it goes bankrupt as a toxic non-living entity, but leave richer as crooks than they did before calling an end to paybacks, with the People stuck to take the loss together for sure as the victims. While bush, says corporating America, his america, should learn for next time, maybe, while the CRIMINALLY STOLEN money is still siting in the Cayman Islands!!! See the Depression, a Canadian High Schooler, or watch bush act in direct opposition to his word almost consistently as American death harborer terrorist psychopath. Then ask yourself, why can none of our defenses be publicly discussed as important deliberations?

Love Justice by allowing others to read this paper, to judge the truth for themselves as worth something for all persons, and I will be truly grateful you cared to believe in a better future, for together, we could find a new hope for freedom, as happiness and prosperity for Yourself included. We only need believe in ourselves as unstoppablly stupid, and the Universe is ours as God is now testifier.

I am my word,
and make believe King to this world I call home,

Yours forever,

Johnny Wizard - Lord and Saviour

Peavey's were cheap amps for people that couldn't afford a M-A-R-S-H-A-L-L. They worked, but the spring reverb sounded like crap, and the boxes weren't built that well, either. Peavey also used low-grade iron in their output transformers, limiting the high-frequency response and taking the bite out of a nice set of pickups. They made great ashtrays, however.

Umm,,in your haste, you forgot to nitpick over the missed key in the next word, as well,
Also, your comment concerning people who "couldn't afford a Marshall" is bullshit, also, There are countless successful bands that used Peavey to achieve a specific sound, especially when Bass was not a desired effect.

>They worked, but the spring reverb sounded >like crap, and the boxes weren't built that well,

I place this along the lines of those who always need to have a good view of a band when attending a concert and those who bring their binoculars and base part of their review on the visuals. Serious audiophiles don't give a damn what something looks like...it's all about the sound, man, the sound..

Many past (and I'm certain, present) successful international touring acts prove such a statement totally incorrect. Some musicians are millionaires many times over, yet remain with Peavey. Like manufacturers of cars, all have their fans. You never saw the "Peavey Page".

Deadly suppositions
http://www.rationalreview.com/rlwrights/112603.shtml

/ / That's right. American troops are now being used to destroy private property of "suspected Iraqi guerrilla fighters." What happened to requiring proof before depriving someone of "life, liberty, or property" as stated in our own Constitution? Evidently that does not apply to people we attack so that we can bring them our way of life.

GO F*CK YOURSELF, MR. PRESIDENT
http://www.antiwar.com/justin/j112603.html
/ / We must act, even if the threat is nonexistent - because of the potential danger. If "self-defense" consists of necessary
"preemption," then what would happen if we started acting on this Bushian principle domestically? After all, killers, robbers, and rapists don't announce their intentions, politely putting us on notice before they strike. Why not just jail them before they have a chance to commit a crime? This principle, if applied within the U.S., would lead straight to totalitarian rule. Applied abroad, it means perpetual war.

I Know When Bush Is Lying: His Lips Move
http://military.surfwax.com/files/Weapons_of_Mass_Destruction.html

/ / The Bush regime's panic is reflected in its adoption of Israeli revenge tactics, using F-16 aircraft to drop 500lb bombs on residential areas called "suspect zones".... ...Lianne Seymour, widow of the commando Ian Seymour, said: "They misled the guys going out there.
You can't just do something wrong and hope you find a good reason for it later."

War Propaganda

/ / In other words, the military actors and politicians are totally blinded by the "war on terrorism" dogma.
Truth is falsehood and falsehood is truth. Realities are turned upside down. Acts of war are heralded as "humanitarian interventions" geared towards upholding democracy. Military occupation and the killing of civilians are presented as "peace-keeping operations."
The repeal of democracy is portrayed by General Franks as a means to providing "domestic security" and upholding civil liberties.

Bush is going to need a draft unless he changes his policies soon. I'm sure you agree, I'm sure you don't want your friends, family and coworkers drafted either.
To fight for what? freedom? When George Bush passed the Patriot Act and now the Patriot Act 2 he took away many of the rights that we cherish so much. Why are we "bringing freedom" to the Middle East when Bush has shredded the constitution and taken away our freedoms at home? It doesn't make any sense.

This is why I plead with armed Americans to kill the unarrested bush for the love of children everywhere.
Look, we know directly who the bushites are who PUBLICLY advocate the murder of innocent People through corporate censorship, who support furthering the demon antiChrist's senseless crimes against my America, and our World. Example: You'd think Art Bell figures none of his listeners could in no other way, learn of traitor bush murdering thousands in New York City, and his contemptuous silence on the issue forbidding anyone else from publicly mentioning it. I have dominated alt.fan.art-bell for years, while Art Bell, like Canada's Peter Warren, will continuously advertise open line calls, but abruptly end calls topicing on KNOWN FACTS surrounding their evil false deity bush, 9/11, Iraq, depleted plutonium, Halliburton, and the deaths of our innocent lives fallen to their personal inaction depicting our community as uninterested. Art Bell in FACT has pre-screened his "open line" calls since bush stole power, and does so, to make appear Americans aren't clued in, on the now hundreds of thousands of innocent lives bush has murdered as war criminal. A good nazi bushite, is a dead nazi bushite, halted from advocating further war crimes constituting the murder of our innocent families. The dumfuk bushite parasites have been PURPOSEFULLY blowing themselves up with mined cluster bombs as suicide bombers! Not dying for any noble cause, but to only further toll more American Patriot lives. We should ask all soldiers, who are they loyal to, the 9/11 perpetrating American cop killer bush, or the People's America, as so enshrined by the Bill of Rights, and true Justice to actually protect the freedom of US people by following a leader?

These OUTNUMBERED and OUTGUNNED nazi bushites are indiscriminately bombing residential communities with radio-active toxic waste for nothing but to please their evil false deity, Our Mr bush Jr.. No rational reason but for a hatred to Your Humanity, and God if you believe.

Example: that evil nazi terrorist buford blount confesses to murdering thousands of innocent Iraqi People for nothing, no reason he proudly professes as wicked evil heinous traitor. Think of the lives You could save Patriot, by justly killing the unarrested buford blount, on hopes a person to take his place could at the very least consider being honorable in defending Your America? Demon buford blount is truly the enemy to American soldiers, for, if your family was murdered by buford blount irrationally commanding mindless bushite soldiers for nothing but to further rob the dying American tax payers, would you not too, spend your will hunting the evil nazi fuck down personally to spare further another innocent family suffering? To kill the unarrested unAmerican buforld blount is to stop him from ordering the practically dead already, nazi dumfuk treasonous bushite brethren teens, from victimizing again US as the innocent undefended.

While CNN still insists it's better for them to misinform and ignore, than to expose the demon bush as the true target for any Patriot's rage. American soldiers are being sacrificed to die for no known good reason, but for bad leadership as evil bushite war profiteers.

House Nixes Anti-Profiteering Penalties In IraqSpending Bill

http://www.senate.gov/~feinstein/03Releases/warprof103103.htm

/ / "When the Senate Appropriations Committee considered
this supplemental request, Senators Leahy, Feinstein,
and I joined together to criminalize war profiteering --
price gouging and fraud -- with the same law that was

stripped out of the final bill," said Durbin. "I fail
to understand how anyone can be opposed to prosecuting
those who want to defraud and overcharge the United States government and the American taxpayers."

/ / The Constitution cites "high crimes and misdemeanors" against the state as grounds for impeachment. Could there be any higher crime against the American people than to have knowingly deceived us in order to stampede us into an act of barbarism that has betrayed our finest ideals, our highest ethical standards, our national honor, and our whole history?

The best evidence to kill bush quickly.

Demon bush "These terrorists target the innocent, and they kill by the thousands. And they would, if they gained the weapons they seek, kill by the millions and not be finished. The greatest threat of our age, is nuclear, chemical, or biological weapons in the hands of
the terrorists, and the dictators that aid them. The evil is in plain sight, the danger only increases with denial."

Remember: Demon bush doesn't forget signing his soul to the invade Afghanistan plan by not following the 911 evidence, but would top secretly attribute to Laden for blame, authored by himself, rumsfeld, Condoleeza, and General Ahmad two days prior to the public event of murdering "thousands" in wealthy corporate America, a secret plan that has been confessed publicly to US as fully implemented by the White House right from the start to Jim at MSNBC, months after the fact when the demon antiChrist was caught with American blood in his breath.

Not to follow the criminal leads surrounding evil bush as mass murdering antiChrist, is what the White House confesses to Americans today as official policy under every circumstance. Karma. Demon bush tells corporate america that they'll persecute the innocent in any country by denying our fundamental human rights of Freedom and Justice, while now dropping 2000 pound bombs in God's World containing children, while corporate nazi bores, report in judgement of the great King who MAY have cuddled some cute boy! Jackson has given so much to America in stone, and in return, the corporate news nazi bushites sit condemning a great man whose open vulnerability gives him his wondrous strength and power as true American artistry. While these very same treasonous corporate bushite news anchors refuse to report on tommy franks running death squads against school girls, Guantanamo's Taliban's Girl School teacher Mozam Begg whose family served proudly for generations in the British Military, or tomorrow if YOU don't help US speak out publicly, continue refusing to report the general murder of civilian populations by the godless evil nazi bushite traitors. A good bushite, is a dead bushite halted for advancing their murder rampages against our innocent families irrationally. Demon buford blount, who runs like the nazi coward he truly is from my challenge to a death match, confesses to murdering thousands of US People for no military objective, but to get killed those that serve as bushwhored slaves under him to take his cowardly place instead, a die hard bushite nazi traitor. No government in Iraq would give WorldCom and Halliburton a blank check because they care too much for The People, nor certainly would they not, steal helpful Humanitarian Aid from poor people to pay the fraudster commi double billers, Halliburton again, nor either or, dump radio-active toxic waste on themselves to help bush's re-election campaign get off on murdering Americans for financial pain as God betrayers to US all. KILL BUSH NOW! Remember: a bushite soldier hides behind an American uniform, while knowing the bushmob has likely robbed their very own family of their savings and vital protection. Weak and cowardly, stupid and murdering innocent People for the demon antiChirst as their false deity parasite they are dying for TODAY as. I HATE bush as much as any real man would. The bush demon sells his Satanism by offering NO skills required to be dishonorable and dishonest, no reading newspapers, or feeling the pulse of the plundering nation required while ransacking the faithful. While these corporate news experts and CNN and CBC censor pleads from Humanity paying the wages of evil bush's wars against freedom and God, Justice and America, denied our corporate news coverage to be my primary lonely concern mostly it seems sometimes, as too, how terribly it truly is for life whose love isn't appreciated by our will anymore as the living in america, oh yeah, I mean America.

As an American then, what life will you forsake where bush'll rob you over and over as the never living for something better? These american bushite nazi fuks, think your gonna wash their feet, and instead of defending yourself and family, just turn the other cheek right before the bushites drop a two thousand pound bomb or two on your innocent neighbor next door? Done for nothing but feeding the bushmob?, as unarrested buford blount contends in God's presence? Then to think, buford blount figures I as a real man will not seek him out one to one to the ends of this universe for payback.

What can God do to help, if your refuse to help yourself? The true danger to America increases with American doubts on bush's blatant, true naked evilness, or humoring God as Johnny, and betting on yourself for a change by supporting me as the time being? Look, what could you do for your freedom, when I demand the pursuit of Justice by following evidence to truly protect this World we share? Support my demand to raise the news media's ignorance on what you shout even louder?

Think this: demon bush makes no public mention of where almost half of the monthly 4 billion dollar tax payer bill is quietly disappearing while grandma loses her cable television, or only grandson? Is that Leadership I ask every American Soldier to be brave and forward this letter on terrorism to your fellow comrads secretly. Then, we'll see...

One More Thing

So, that demon bush, the American cop killer and his cohorts, are continuing to work destroying Humanity's

gains in civility, by evilly dividing Our humanity with their blatantly open criminal intent to murder untold millions as US innocent, and as of yet, have not been executed by American Patriots for mass murder of God's Family in New York City. Traitors to US all on 9/11 without contention, for Our truth speaks as Ourselves, and witnessing just CNN's silence on General Ahmad, speaks volumes on their contempt for US as worthy of Justice. Refusing to do what is good for Humanity by offering the central facts as publicly recognized by Our Police Agencies to be actually documented. According to the FBI: the vacationing General Ahmad financed the alleged 9/11 mastermind, Atta, and also developed the criminal war strategy against Afghanistan with the bush administration, to boost the heroin trade, and save Enron to commit further frauds against American soldier families, while murdering over a hundred thousand American flag wavers, and then leaving US for further ruin with plans to continue on against 59 more countries in the same deceitful illegal manner against all Churches, as an evil nothing short of eternally crowning Our Mr. bush Jr., the super evil anti-Christ, the most hated and despised parasitic murderer in the entire annals of Humanity's History. Cool eh? Kill bush now! Why?

The bushmob have done nothing short of confessing to the entire terror event, but for jokes on our strained credulity to publicly press for further stalls. With the rights of kissinger left to be a public investigation official? (Gee, thanks for highlighting your partner like that for US bush, you nazi dumfuk.) Mr. bush Jr.'s america destroys themselves without Love for wisdom, or respect for intelligence as a Peace plan initiative. We publicly witness the blind and tormented dying bushmob slave whore charade, of contempt for living free in Our names. The two evil doers, bush and sadistic nazi rotten rumsfeld, are known publicly as documented, to continue leveraging the ignorance of the CNN ready to be broadcasted repeatedly, tranced dimwit marines, the true dumfuks of this world as weak and pathetic cowards to themselves as their own brothers they watch murdered for bush helplessly, communicated in CNN's un-American false image as the evil bush nation hiding in falsehoods as death squad recruiters against the practically defenseless as unarmed children, nazi vermin criminals, being unbiased as Blitzer about protecting your freedom Patriot, to lose your real life savings reader, truly too weak and stupid to stand up in protection for the flag as the living American Dream for anyone. Because witness again, CNN keeps not saying Justice is important as principle to hold our reflections.(CrossFire is getting better though.) Fortified behind locked doors in their bombed out bunkers, Blitzer and Hemmer sit rooted for the evil side to lose further to themselves by continuing to not respond to our communication know how. America, the People, rarely gain press time coverage as should be top priority always, while being paraded publicly as sold out as not deliberated, corporately represented as privately principled to stay ignorant of Justice to protect living personally, as actually worth something to the bottom line. Yours. Brought down Hell bound as cheated by corporate news america's valueless interest in the price of your living to continue on our behalves. What does CNN think of 2% Social Security? cheating a Soldier's Grandmother to pay tithes to the bush demon as criminal dictator?, american nazi death squads?, insider stock trades?, arming bush's heroin partners?, rotten rumsfeld and bush murdering devout corporate cultists like a would be, still silent Hemmer?, no opinion? Or the working for the People in our names OFFICIALLY, as the FBI and CIA officers actually involved in uncovering the evil bushmob deeds, like the warrant sabotage, Odigo, stolen passports of alive so called highjackers as once American trained as still Saudi pilots, or Anthrax made to look Muslimized, is not failure to connect the dots ever, or insufficient funding then is not less payment for our law enforcement now to nab the prime suspects. As Mueller, or mueller has not publicly commented of, but to say, he hasn't seen or heard anything of this police work, leaving the FBI unrepresented publicly as a threat by himself as a terrorist supporter, an devout member of the bushmob cartel. Why?, we must investigate Mueller if we should have him arrested for publicly obstructing the FBI asking the important questions. IT IS THE FBI, not pissant mueller, WHO CONCURES THE BUSHMOB'S AHMAD FUNDED ATTA. Or how about the dumb ass Ashcroft assault against every American to save his embarrassment of being completely unqualified and never elected?, no concern to mention on this either? Who suffers for CNN's refusal to demand Enron give back the billions that were criminally stolen from all American Families still sitting in the Cayman Islands? My God.

Somebody call the cops.. again!

I have personally spoken to hundreds, and written thousands regarding bush's guilt, and we can't seem to find any fault with what I am saying... How about You?

Check out usenet group, "us.military.army" on the internet to see for US all, what questions if any are asked. Know also, CBC and CNN management staff will not contribute their disagreement as none present, but for continuing disregard for Your interests during Our news cast of the facts. THINK. I tell gun clubs, police officers, Biker gangs, and the general public to kill bush today for 9/11 and his death squads, against the helpless and undefended while arming heroin dealers and selling terrorist handbooks, with all the evidence one would need or asks for, and CNN with CBC corporate management does not, to my knowledge, call Our Police agencies to complain about my free speech capabilities, or will allow US public discussions with Our History as documented. Why? Those nazi bastards, Walter Issacson, Robert Habinovitch, and the two Coast to Coast godless vermin parasites know personally, they propagandize our communities with deceit to keep us divided as the plundered and murdered for the private banker buildings who sell weapons in bush's name to kill the innocent as ourselves unheard from. I can barely survive watching US ignore them as King to this World, my sweetie baby sugar dumpling, but, I think it's time to let Arron Brown in on a little secret... Johnny wants a word with his living responsibility to Americans on Patriotism. Instead of what we currently witness, a reluctance to not relentlessly pursue the truth to provide US the facts, (Look, it's true, Johnny has an ass.) but a censorship of control to falsely prop up the unelected nazi war mongering criminal, Our Mr. bush Jr., a terrorist of tyranny through criminal impropriety in violation with the American Constitution as a death bringer heroin dealer, at a seating that truly holds no vacancy, nor a Buddha, but a deception to plainly hide, the actual, got to be for real, super evil anti-Christ of all religion ever mentioned. Wow eh, even gentle jolly Buddha wants bush squashed! Seriously, please kill the bush demon to save US as victims friend. Justice must prevail as is truth eternal, that of what will be as God is.. just how many more as Humanity will be sacrificed in cowardice for the evil bush demon, before an American Patriot kills the mortal nazi dictator for treason as an American cop killer, and betrayer to all of our Humanities? Don't let tomorrow's news story be about Your murder as another, no longer heard from bush victim. For, my reason is as evidenced to actually be known, easily, while the CNN corporate cult product lies to themselves as Our public fact finders to leverage more ignorance than is found now.. as Our public voice to suffer by criminal dictates to destroy God as life giver. Fuk you america.

Heaven is on the Horizon.

We can teach ourselves as the uninformed by CNN standards to misinform and ignore. CNN's continuing silence on Ahmad, bush and rotten rumsfeld, only supports further our claim in their contempt for American Soldiers, and Our Families as not represented as worthy business investment. God, don't you just love me? Hemmer?

Mr. bush's publicized war strategy of no evidence requirement to hold American convictions for murdering Ourselves is evil all around everywhere, as understood without question to every honest Cop, the most serious of all criminal behaviors, of which, they carry guns for in just this sort of political development to halt reoccurrences. But bush, the anti-Christ, as america, says no for ALL Americans, they can no longer hold onto Justice as their own with him in their charging everyone as the enemy bush refraction. Just like, "bomb wherever" tommy franks would do with his own American family death squaded, like he did intentionally to our children, as his contempt for America will never stifle our voice with his silence regarding our aimed veracity to seek out and destroy the evil nazi bushmob fuks individually with God as Justice Supreme. The True American Way, for, the rare and few Marines, the one or two, are with US loyally to know so. See, there was a time when the Marines were taught diligently, so much so it was proudly ingrained as the moral fiber of their character, that an American Soldier's responsibility to America was to defend the Constitution as the Freedom to be America, with their lives if need be to protect their soul brothers as family, for the greater good by God, (just like the Taliban Rule Man) while today, Ashcroft, albeit muted, murmurs as rotten rumsfeld chuckles, Americans must instead as slaves give their lives unthinkingly as cowardly evil war criminals to protect the unelected bush mobster from criminal arrest for mass murders in New York City, and stealing that 50 billion, seeing that that stupid Justice thing in the American Constitution and Bill of Rights idea has now got to go instead of evil bush as demon traitor war monger, terrorist recruiting false god anti-Christ, but that aside... There is a guide book for leadership in the American Marines entitled, "Guidebook for MARINES", and inside, it contains 14 principles to strive for as an American Soldier wanting to be a True Patriot as leader of Soldiers prepared to die for love of country, and our fellow man as friend or stranger, and here they are:

Integrity, Knowledge, Courage, decisiveness, Dependability, Initiative, Tact, Justice, Enthusiasm, Bearing, Endurance, Unselfishness, Loyalty, and Judgement.

For integrity it states:

"1. Integrity. The stakes of combat are too high to gamble leadership on a dishonest man. Would you accept a report from a patrol leader who had been known to lie?
Of course you wouldn't. All your statements, official or unofficial, are concidered by your men to be plain, unadorned fact. Make sure they are. When you give your word, keep it. There are people depending on you to come through with the goods."

Now, I could go on further about what kind of lifeless degenerate a lawless cowardly mute soldier in bush's nazi death squads would have to be, to serve under bush as slave and traitor to home and family, as against God, the Flag, and all that we represent as equals through Justice, but I won't.

Mr. bush's america is uncontrollable by anyone. CNN figures if they never mention US, we'll never know who was invited as participators. (Example: CIA officers have had to PUBLICLY contact British News Services as the CIA, (Never done that I know of likewise before), regarding American interests in apprehending the TRUE 9/11 culprits ignored by american corporate dictates, and tenant also. One should remember, bush and rumsfeld would want to secretly murder any persons involved in 9/11 to clean up the huge crime scene, and tenant, is no brave and True Christ like figure as a living person, so what can we expect in all reality? Tenant will pay dearly if the evidence further indicates, as his continuing silence does label him already a willing traitor to all America, as too, his personal meeting with 9/11's Ahmad just prior seems suspicious also as not mentioned by himself in defense, along with his refusal to disclose the insider stock trades while leaving the fine CIA officers personally involved in the dark, as abandoned American Patriots, armed and ready to defend America as they should immediately for themselves, by executing bush and rumsfeld as terrorist cop killer, drug running freedom haters.)

America's false deity, the super evil anti-Christ, Our
Mr. Bush Jr., doesn't think for me to be sacrificed without opinion by John, for I am free to act for my own beliefs as understanding, as I live in defense for living as all things created I am of honestly, simply amazing God is. However, I, as any truly living person would, can't help hate Our Mr. bush Jr. to death for what he and rotten rumsfeld is criminally doing, and further proposing against Our living in my name as unheard from dying without cause as murdered, but for bush's criminal contempt for my Awesomeness to beg once again friends, someone out there please, for the Love of Yourself and God, help US destroy Our Mr. bush Jr. quickly before he kills more as Ourselves unrepresented by corporate values in our commitments to freedom for living through Justice for all persons. Our Mr. bush Jr. has indiscriminately murdered more than 100,000 innocent souls with only a contemptuous smirk to his credit, while fully committed to more robbing and heroin dealing by blaming Laden for whatever without any evidence. Leaving Our true willingness silenced by corporate demands to propagandize and censor our truths, allowing bush, the dumfuk traitor, to continue demonizing America into a hell hole of ignorance through his hatred for life, Science and Nature. CNN's silence for America regarding the bushmob publicly stealing from their Own Family their freedom of Rights to be living, while committing Americans to a dictatorial crime ridden government, that bush and rumsfeld proclaim, is no longer applicable to the Law of any Land, is an abomination against Christ as living is Ourselves Being. America isn't America anymore, it's the bushmobbed universe of injustice and blind self hatred against all of Humanity, committed to leave none to survive but as slaves to be terrorized for the dummy bush demon as their false deity, a traitor in my midst, disguised to no one but himself as personally expendable. Again, where are the American Patriots we all hear so much about in the big screen to take down the seriously anti-American demon bush monster cop killer heroin pusher for treason, as all understood widely now factually with evidence and everything? Kill the war criminal evil doers, bush and rumsfeld today and be loved by yourself to be of Human Nature, or hunker to hell as a coward and betrayer to yourself and your own family, while watching the bushmob openly rob and murder further from our World, and on all of which we stand strong united. Justice for You.

This living plan of mine empowers others to learn their Rights as eternally established to be Kings and Queens on equal footing to be as all in all of gods forever dreaming, while demon bush intends the destruction of individual freedoms while robbing and murdering Americans from the inside, like sharon with US Jews does, as underrepresented, a condemning onslaught on Your better Judgement as reasoned on anything factual they figure blindly to be spinable, without your word contested. Your God Given Living Rights my friend.

Without a rule of Law principled in the fashion of Justice for all to be sought as measured, bush's nazi amerika will continue to suffer ourselves needlessly for their corporatized self contempt in Our living Humanity as censored, without a thought for Justice, or the American Bill of Rights as God acting out eternally for prophets to wonder endlessly. See, I came up with this wacky Idea one day to make all my equal as self created to be so normally, in this Universe as we exist for Happiness ultimately as eternal, so, You or i will work this challenge to speak out for ourselves as Creation about bush's america, and it's responsibility as publicly advertised, to gather the facts on who suffers for bush's criminal misdeeds, and overall ignorance on everything. Mr. bush's irresponsible tax scam for example, is to put America's public money into the hands of private bankers, as the extremely rich already, while taking money away from those who spend the highest percentage of their paycheck on basic necessities as a gambled to be advertised, "stimulation package". HOW?
The HOW is never explained with understanding as clearly regressive like the bush rule is, because.. Who spends MORE in taxes as investment at the grocery store to pay the cashier for his babysitter: 20,000 volunteer Janitors all named Rich, who ride the bus for convenience, or a mechanical billionaire private bank machine operator, who doesn't earn any nation's moola by working something for it?, and couldn't eat 20,000 cans of re-fried beans at one cruise lining to timbucks three without losing themselves, havening his tax manner over take in YOUR luxury. See, when America prints more money at the Treasury to give Greenspan to loan BACK to the Government illogically, the dollar value falls for everyone as investor, inflation, let alone the incurred bogus debt owed with real sweat as labor. Clearly, to every informed citizen not as democratic. Of course, National corporate news America, is genuinely not trying as capable by themselves to commit The living interest in Government as ourselves with oversight to manage US fiscally responsible, (like CNN regarding Justice and the Congress, or no Chomsky ever, E. Ann Clark as geneticist, or just research for experts as example), so, we do indeed, live in trying times due to ignorance as corporate america's disrespect for wisdom saught as yearning. It's like private bankers don't want the public to think about what we are doing as worthwhile knowing, eh? Or, I'm the only one on this planet who can almost read my own writing as the, one of a kind, good boy God freak. Anyway, the bushmobster scam leaves less finite wealth for all as taxable exchanges, while suggesting disposing of what dwindling national resource can be obtained, be given to create further debt by devolving into a military apparatus to make more enemies. Our Mr. bush Jr. is just plain stupid as destructive to everyone, but especially Americans to not stand up in defense of Ourselves. (Officially, rotten rumsfeld's criminal plan, "P2OG", is to encourage terrorist acts against Your Family, but you guessed it, not up to CNN's standard to report US as viable news material.) It's like saying fewer people educated, will keep us stupid enough as a Nation to blame the weak and poor as ourselves deprived till death as murdered, and, bush says makes sense secretly, as the all knowing for the blind and ignorant to faith in without thinking about what money is either. Our Governments should always be working to make the poor richer as a successful representation of our will as the public to improving our living condition, but the dumb and ignorant, talentless and monosyllabic, believe, someone else must be cheated and devalued, divided and murdered, in their universe for them to succeed without effort, or skill whatsoever.. Especially defense. Have you ever heard of the rock solid certainty of Universal "inverse variation" constants? (Canadian High School.) This is why in America, in a time where the nation was more literate as informed, Corporations were taxed at 85% and were happy about it for themselves as American citizens. It's understanding also, most as almost all of the most wealthy multi-nationals competing from military dictatorships against American minimums, run in continuous private bank debt, (your savings and pension as leveraged weaker being the entire Nations) but gross billions in profits. 99.9% of every private bank building in the Western World is mortgaged, not however in Iraq, or the Muslim World where interest is not charged on good standing loans made in Our names. (Sideline: Now recollect bush's puppet forcing Afghanistan to borrow from the World Bank for terrorist handbooks and heroin junkets, but not food, shelter or clothing, while spending in addition, 4-5 billion a month in godless bushfuked american Patriot Dollars, American Celeb Dollars, American TAX PAYER Dollars, to run deaths squads with tommy franks against teachers and children.) It's a strange idea to the dying to be corporately driven without thinking because, you wouldn't automatically think it could be more profitable to stay in cheaper as serviceable debt being a brick building, but it is by private banker swindle with National inflation succeeding personal interest rates. We lose personal wealth to the pirate banker fees without even privately using their/OUR National currency services, because truly, we can't go somewheres else. As of course in america, an Enron can always be pulled, where it goes bankrupt as a toxic non-living entity, but leave richer as crooks than they did before calling an end to paybacks, with the People stuck to take the loss together for sure as the victims. While bush, says corporating America, his america, should learn for next time, maybe, while the CRIMINALLY STOLEN money is still siting in the Cayman Islands!!! See the Depression, a Canadian High Schooler, or watch bush act in direct opposition to his word almost consistently as American death harborer terrorist psychopath. Then ask yourself, why can none of our defenses be publicly discussed as important deliberations?

Love Justice by allowing others to read this paper, to judge the truth for themselves as worth something for all persons, and I will be truly grateful you cared to believe in a better future, for together, we could find a new hope for freedom, as happiness and prosperity for Yourself included. We only need believe in ourselves as unstoppablly stupid, and the Universe is ours as God is now testifier.

I am my word,
and make believe King to this world I call home,

Yours forever,

3935. Guide To "Twistedhed"

Newsgroup: rec.radio.cb
Date: 2003-11-28 18:51:56 UTC
From: "Rec.radio.cb Betterment League" <wmholden@yahoo.com>

Source record: 170519

From the Wisdom of Dave Hall:

"Twistedhed is skilled at obfuscation, and changing meanings. Even when one clearly expresses the point, twisty will instead focus on the nuances, rather than the substance of a point.

I learned many years ago that it is impossible to win a debate or argument with a fool. Like a fool Twisty's logic changes from post to post just as his accusations do. As I punch holes in them he changes.

One of his biggest hangups during one of our earlier altercations, was t o continually attempt to steer the focus of the debate from illegal CB operations to USENET ettiquette. I assume he was attempting to make the point that "people in glass houses shouldn't throw rocks".
In any case his comparison was irrelevant to the debate, but he continued to make an issue out of it anyway.

One of his tactics is what is called "tit for tat"
which is nothing more than saying,"Well, what about you?" and "I asked you first."

One cannot make a comment regarding CB operation, without twisty countering that
"hammies are guilty of XYZ" as well.
Two wrongs still don't make a right, and neither does a counterpoint diminish the truth of the original point.

Twisty has no real debate skills. He is incapable of staying on topic, he seems to have trouble comprehending simple points and analogies, while accusing the other party of exactly the same thing. His "strategy", if you could call it that, is to twist meanings, obfuscate points, and then accuse others of "lieing", to put them on the defensive, while never offering up any bits of factual information to prove his side. He claims to speak for the majority of people, yet I have never seen anyone jump to his defense during any of his "debates".

He also has an over inflated ego, and cannot possibly comprehend how so many people can find fault with him. To counter that, he claims that each and every person on the other side is really just one person posting under numerous accounts.
He probably thinks that you, me, Aaron,
Frank etc, are all the same person.
He then claims victory when the other side simply becomes frustrated or loses interest in pursuing further exchanges.
He is as predictable as PMS, you can almost tell exactly what posts
he will respond to, and almost exactly what he will say in response.
I've baited him a few times
just to prove my theory.
He fell, hook, line and sinker.

He reminds me of that old Monty Python skit where the guy pays for an arguement, but gets only rote contradiction.
Twisty will counter anything you say, but can never back up any of it with fact or even a good theory.

Which is why he is refered to as the newsgroup punch clown. He's good to lash out at if you want to get something off of your chest, or just want to do the intellectual equivilent of bitch slapping. String him along until you tire of him, and then let him babble to himself.
But he's not worth the effort to take seriously."

I'm not a CBer, but I'm hoping you folks can help me out. There's someone who lives near me who I'm guessing is broadcasting with excessive power (I'm assuming there are regulations concerning that?) Every time he transmits I pick him up on my TV, radio, cordless phone and computer speakers and he locks up the cordless mouse on my computer.

To make it works, 99% of the time all he does is whistle, say "Heeeeeeelllo" or make other weird noises. It gets extremely irritating having to listen to him.

Is there anything I can do? I've considered seeing if I can find someone who has a CB I can borrow, find out what channel(s) he's transmitting on, and ask him politely to knock it off.

Failing that, is there any legal action I can take? Should I report it here: http://www.fcc.gov/eb/AmaCmpl.html or is that just for Ham radio?

Carved in mystic runes upon the very living rock, the last words of

Fender Twin 100 watt is my favorite right now. I have a Marshall JCM 2000
Dual Super Lead but the Fender just blows it away. Use a little Marshall G10 MKII for playing in the house. Digitech GFX 1 Twin Tube for effects.
Anyone got a Gibson SG (with bound neck) they'd like to part with??

The FCC enforces both. You may want to check for local regs.
The FCC recently made a change that allows local jurisdictions to put regs in place that they can enforce, as long as they are in line with the FCC regs.

http://www.fcc.gov/eb/tpsd/ is the particular bunch at the FCC that is best suited.

Your local ham club may also have some help to offer.
While it does sound like he couldn't possibly be running legal power limits (4W) there are things that you can do on your end, that will probably be of more help in the short term.

Ferrite filters (radio shack) applied on cables, on the end closest to the electronics, should help.
On a phone, put the filter on the phone end of the cable, on an amplifier-speaker cable, put the filter on the amp end of the cable.

They will refuse. It is pointless to politely ask them to stop. He may become hostile

Go to somewhere else on the FCC site to complain. With the budget they have, though, you may not see enforcement.

I would say that it sounds like he is running outside the law. One thing I must say is not to approach him. Take a look around your neighbourhood for CB antennas on houses and see if cutting the coax cable takes him off the air for a while. If not then you got the wrong place so just try the next one. He must be quite close to you to do that kind of damage. When you do find the right place an Ark-welder attached to his cable cranked to full should then fix the problem for good. I believe in self policing before going to the feds.

That kind of self policing is not only illegal but dangerous. If someone came snooping around my place and tried destroying my property, they may not live to talk about it. You can't just go cutting EVERYONE'S coax til you find the right party. Getting yourself arrested if caught and trying to explain it, is NOT going to correct the problem, but rather compound it. Let the law handle it, they will if given half a chance.

Where did I say anything relating to aesthetics? I didn't. The boxes were built with unseasoned wood that often cracked, making the amp sound even worse. And if the wood didn't crack you had to tighten the screws every other month until the holes stripped out, which didn't take long because the screws were short and didn't have much thread. They were built for economy, not quality.

Yeah, right. We know better.

So what ever happened to that piece-of-shit sweep-tube amp you were trying to unload for several months? An Elkin, I think it was. If I remember correctly, you put a mighty steep price on that one, too. Did it ever sell?

Unfortunately I lack the ability to perceive radio waves directly, and investing in RDF equipment to locate him would not be practical, nor would knocking on several hundred prospective doors and asking if they're broadcasting with excessive power.

Other than that, I agree with your basic sentiment.

Don't bother with the FCC, they won't enforce crap. What you do is start a log, noting everything that happens with this guy, including the day, time and duration of his transmissions, any contact you make with him, etc. If you can, record some of the interference. When you have compiled enough evidence, send him a letter (certified, return-receipt) asking him to stop. If he refuses, talk to a lawyer or paralegal about filing suit and/or charges under your local nuisance laws.

Chances are that he lives close, like within a couple hundred feet. If he causes interference to a cheap portable radio, you can listen while walking up and down the street, then look for an antenna. If that doesn't work, get in contact with a local ham club. Someone there will probably be willing to pinpoint the jerk.

Does anyone besides me remember Pres. Clinton signing the bill that transfered authority to the local police to enforce the cb rules and regulations? I think it was attatched to the tail of another bill, and it was one of those all or none deals. If that did indeed happen, then Mr.Jones can record the activity with his VCR, and call the police while it is going on so they can see it for themselves. He may have to dig up documentation on the internet to prove to the police that they do indeed have jurisdiction over the cb band and it's operators.

Hello all,
I picked up a spectrum 1600 antenna, that needs a replacement part. The cover over the coil is mostly destroyed. Anyone know if parts are available and where to get them? Does anyone have a spare cover?
Thanks,
Mark

I have great faith in our local police. They are great guys. They do their jobs well. BUT.. They like MOST cops wouldn't know the first thing about proving the origin of a signal. NOR are they equipped to do it. To prosecute, they need EVIDENCE! Further, most magistrates I doubt are educated enough on RF to make a sound ruling in such issues. What they MAY do, is consider calling upon the likes of a local CB shop (reputable) or a 2 way radio shop to aid in proving such a case. I don't see that happening - as then you may have them hit with fees for service - falling on the tax payers expense. Yes, they could call in others, but for the report to be valid, I'm sure the magistrate would want to see proof positive of experience. A simple license doesn't mean much to some. So, though that law - I do believe - was passed, I wouldn't jump for joy in it just yet. I still say - call the FCC. Chances are, if he is tearing you up that bad, others are getting it too. Have them also contact the FCC. G.W.
